All Necessary Police Ordinances. — Power to "pass and enforce all necessary police ordinances" implies power to prohibit persons keeping open their places of business on Sunday for the purpose of vending goods, wares, and merchandise, and the ordinance does not infringe the statute which goes only to the extent of forbidding such labor on Sunday as "disturbs the peace and good order of society." McPherson v. Chebanse, 114 Ill. 46, 55 Am. Rep. 857, 15 Ill. App. 311.

In Johnson v. Com., 22 Pa. St. 109, the court said: "Our duty requires us to construe the statute so as to accomplish its purpose, which was to enforce an observance of Sunday, instead of obliterating it."

3. Statutes Penal and Strictly Construed. — Flanagan v. Meyer, 41 Ala. 136 (but see Reid v. State, 53 Ala. 408, 25 Am. Rep. 627, where the court says, "Sunday laws must have a reasonable interpretation"); Myers v. State, 1 Conn. 502; St. Louis Agricultural, etc., Assoc. v. Delano, 108 Mo. 217; *Ex p. In Murphy v. Simpson, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 338, it is said: "The statute should not be extended by construction to embrace cases which are not clearly within its obvious meaning, but at the same time it should be fairly construed with a view to the accomplishment of the objects contemplated by the legislature in its enactment."

In Rex v. Whitnash, 7 B. & C. 596, 14 E. C. L. 100, the court, per Littleale, J., says: "The words 'other persons' mean persons ejusdem generis with those before mentioned, but who, perhaps, might not strictly be included in those words."

Games of Any Kind. — Under a statute prohibiting horseracing, cock-fighting, or playing at cards or games of any kind, on Sunday, the words "or games of any kind" are limited to the preceding particular words and do not apply to all games.¹

VIII. INTERPRETATION OF STATUTORY PROHIBITIONS AND EXCEPTIONS — 1. In General. — The Sunday statutes in the various jurisdictions must be examined for a full determination of their scope. Only such statutory provisions are here treated as have received judicial consideration.

2. Acts Prohibited — a. LABOR, BUSINESS, WORK, OR EMPLOYMENT — (1) In General. — The English statute of 29 Car. II. contains the words, "worldly labor, business, or work;"² and one or more, and often all, of these words appear in the statutes of the different states. In several states the words used are, "worldly employment or business."

"Labor, Business, or Work," as used in Sunday statutes, when not restricted by the words "ordinary calling,"³ comprehend within their prohibition all acts of a secular nature belonging to or connected with ordinary business or common worldly affairs, although they might not fall within the line of the daily business or occupation in which a person happened to be employed.⁴

"Labor" and "Work." — The words "labor" and "work," as used in Sunday statutes prohibiting "labor" or "labor or work," have been held not to prohibit the making of contracts on Sunday,⁵ unless of course the subject-matter of the contract is Sunday labor or work.⁶ But there is some authority holding that the making of Sunday contracts is "labor" within the meaning of the statutes.⁷ The words "labor" or "labor or work" have also been held to

1. Games of Any Kind. — St. Louis Agricultural, etc., Assoc. v. Delano, 108 Mo. 217, affirming 37 Mo. App. 284, and overruling State v. Williams, 35 Mo. App. 541; Ex p. Neet, 157 Mo. 527, 80 Am. St. Rep. 638, holding that base ball could not be classified among the games mentioned in the statute.

2. "Worldly" extends to the three substantives, "labor, business, or work." Rex v. Whitnash, 7 B. & C. 602, 14 E. C. L. 100.

Contracts of Secular Nature Prohibited. — Bennett v. Brooks, 9 Allen (Mass.) 118.

But see Geer v. Putnam, 10 Mass. 312, where it was held that the making of a promissory note on Sunday was valid. This case was criticised in Allen v. Deming, 14 N. H. 133, 40 Am. Dec. 179.

A Marriage Contract is neither labor, business, nor work in the sense in which these words are used in the statutes. Bennett v. Brooks, 9 Allen (Mass.) 118. And see Bloom v. Richards, 2 Ohio St. 401.

Execution of Will is neither labor, business, nor work within the meaning of the statutes. Bennett v. Brooks, 9 Allen (Mass.) 118; George v. George, 47 N. H. 27. And see Beitenman's Appeal, 55 Pa. St. 183; Weidman v. Marsh, 4 Pa. L. J. Rep. 401, 2 Am. L. J. 408.

prohibit barbering,¹ trading, bartering, selling or buying goods, wares, or merchandise,² managing a theatre;³ but they have been held not to prohibit hunting,⁴ gaming,⁵ business meetings of benevolent societies,⁶ acting by professional actors,⁷ or filing an application to purchase school lands in general land office.⁸

"Business," as used in Sunday statutes prohibiting "business" or "business of secular calling,"⁹ includes the making of contracts.¹⁰ It has also been held to include the obtaining of signatures to a petition of taxpayers.¹¹

The Words "Worldly Employment or Business," as used in Sunday statutes, are very comprehensive, and the effect of them is to annul every transaction which if performed on a week day would be enforceable in a court of justice.¹² They include the making of Sunday contracts,¹³ the publishing of a newspaper,¹⁴ the selling of soda water, even by a restaurant keeper, when not done in connection with meals,¹⁵ the keeping open of a public library on Sunday,¹⁶ and the driving of a public conveyance;¹⁷ but they have been held not to include traveling on Sunday,¹⁸ drunkenness, swearing, and disorderly conduct,¹⁹ or an engagement to marry.²⁰

Contracts. — The making of a contract by a person in the exercise of his ordinary calling is prohibited as to him, notwithstanding the other party to the contract is not in the exercise of his ordinary calling,³ and although the parties met to make the contract at the request of the latter.⁴ But the making of a contract by a person not in the exercise of his ordinary calling is not prohibited as to him, although the other party to the contract is in the exercise of his ordinary calling, provided the fact that the latter was in the exercise of his ordinary calling was unknown to the former.⁵

Whether Act Is Public or Private Is Immaterial. — If it is done in the exercise of the ordinary calling of the parties it is unlawful.⁶

"Secular Labor" in a statute has been held to include all labor, whether of one's ordinary calling or not. Frost v. Hull, 4 N. H. 157.

Ordinary Calling Defined. — "The true construction of the words 'ordinary calling' seems to me to be, not that without which a trade or business cannot be carried on, but that which the ordinary duties of the calling bring into continued action. Those things which are repeated daily or weekly in the course of trade or business are parts of the ordinary calling of a man exercising such trade or business, but the hiring of a servant once in the year does not come within the meaning of those words." Rex v. Whitnash, 7 B. & C. 600, 14 E. C. L. 100, per Bayley, J.

"Ordinary Calling" Qualifies the Three Words "Labor," "Business," and "Work." — Rex v. Whitnash, 7 B. & C. 602, 14 E. C. L. 100. But see dictum of Park, J., in Smith v. Sparrow, 4 Bing. 89, 13 E. C. L. 354.

(b) Of Enumerated Classes. — The English statute of 29 Car. II., c. 7,¹ and some statutes following it, do not prohibit labor, business, or work of everybody's ordinary calling, but only that of tradesmen, artificers, workmen, and laborers, "or other persons whatsoever."² Under these statutes certain classes have been held not to be prohibited from engaging in labor, business, or work on Sunday.³

(3) To Disturbance of Others. — In a few states the labor, business, or work prohibited must be to the disturbance of others,⁴ or to the disturbance of the peace and good order of society.⁵

Meaning of "Disturbance." — It has been held that an act is a "disturbance to others" within the meaning of the statute if it only affects a single individual and if there is no objection to it by that individual.⁶

b. KEEPING SHOP OPEN. — The keeping open of shops,⁷ stores,⁸ saloons,⁹ places of business,¹⁰ and the like on Sunday is expressly prohibited by statute in many states. These statutes are sometimes very general, applying to all kinds of business,¹¹ but are often specific, designating particular kinds only.¹²

Open for Purpose of Doing Business. — By keeping open stores, shops, places of business, and the like is meant keeping them open for the purpose of doing

6. "Disturbance" Defined. — In Varney v. French, 19 N. H. 237, the court said: "The only safe meaning we can give to the word 'disturbance' is a comprehensive one, going upon the ground that the main purpose of the law was to relieve an individual from the penalty who had been guilty of no act that actually did, or that tended to, disturb and distract the minds of others from those religious observances which the act unquestionably intended to respect. Such being the object of the statute, nothing should be tolerated that tends to defeat it."

7. Shop. — See SHOP, vol. 25, p. 1058.

A Dining Room kept open on Sunday by a common victualler is not a "shop" within the meaning of the statute, unless one of the purposes of keeping it open is to sell cigars. Com. v. Graham, 176 Mass. 5.

Theatre a "place of business." St. Joseph v. Elliott, 47 Mo. App. 418.

11. Kind of Business Immaterial. — Under a statute providing that "whoever on the Lord's day keeps open his shop, warehouse, or workhouse" shall be punished, it has been held that the kind of business transacted was immaterial. Com. v. Dextra, 143 Mass. 28; Com. v. Osgood, 144 Mass. 362.

Selling Sunday newspaper is prohibited. Com. v. Osgood, 144 Mass. 362. And so are cutting hair and shaving beards. Com. v. Dextra, 143 Mass. 28.

12. Keeping Open Place Where Liquor Sold Prohibited. — State v. Amba, 20 Mo. 215; Palmer v. State, 2 Oregon 66. And see the title INTOXICATING LIQUORS, vol. 17, p. 346.

Store Open for Sale of Nonprohibited Articles. — Where the keeping open of a business house on Sunday is prohibited, but the selling of drugs is excepted from the prohibiting provision, a place of business where drugs are sold may be kept open on Sunday for the sale of drugs. Penniston v. Newnan, 117 Ga. 700.

business, whether the statute so specifies or not; and opening them for any other purpose is no violation of the statute.¹

Means of Access Immaterial. — A shop is open within the meaning of the statute whether the doors are open or ajar,² or whether they are closed, provided all who please can obtain access thereto to buy.³

c. EXPOSING GOODS FOR SALE. — A statute prohibiting the exposing for sale of goods, wares, and merchandise on Sunday has been held to apply to public sales, and not to prohibit private transfers of property.⁴

d. TRAVELING. — Traveling on Sunday, except from necessity or charity,⁵ is in a few states prohibited by statute.⁶

Mode of Traveling Immaterial. — Walking or riding,⁷ or even sailing, may constitute traveling.⁸

Traveling Determined from Circumstances of Particular Case. — But all moving about by walking, riding, or sailing is not traveling within the meaning of the statute. Each case, however, must be decided largely upon its own peculiar circumstances.⁹

e. EXHIBITIONS AND SPORTS — Public Exhibitions. — Under many statutes public exhibitions on Sunday are prohibited.¹⁰ These statutes, however, are

1. Open for Purpose of Doing Business. — Snider v. State, 59 Ala. 64; Jebeles v. State, 131 Ala. 41; Com. v. Dextra, 143 Mass. 31; Miller v. State, 68 Miss. 533; Baxter's Petition, 12 R. I. 13.

Purpose for Which Place Opened a Question of Fact. — Snider v. State, 59 Ala. 64.

Sale Not Necessary to Constitute Offense of Opening Shop for Purpose of Business. — Dixon v. State, 76 Ala. 89; Jebeles v. State, 131 Ala. 41.

2. Doors Open or Ajar. — Seelig v. State, 43 Ark. 96; Whitcomb v. State, 30 Tex. App. 269.

3. Sufficient that Access Exists. — Dixon v. State, 76 Ala. 89; Com. v. Harrison, 11 Gray (Mass.) 308.

General Access to Shop through Dwelling House. — Com. v. Harrison, 11 Gray (Mass.) 308.

Side Door Closed but Unlocked. — Whitcomb v. State, 30 Tex. App. 269.

7. Walking or Riding Is Traveling. — Cratty v. Bangor, 57 Me. 423, 2 Am. Rep. 56.

8. Sailing Is Traveling. — Wallace v. Merrimack River Nav., etc., Co., 134 Mass. 95, 45 Am. Rep. 301.

9. All Moving About Not Traveling. — Sullivan v. Maine Cent. R. Co., 82 Me. 196.

In Hamilton v. Boston, 14 Allen (Mass.) 475 the court says: "It is difficult to prescribe by abstract definitions, applicable to all possible states of facts, what must be the duration and objects of a walk to constitute traveling, within these statutes. The legislature, after a long experience and repeated enactments, have left the language quite indefinite; and it is the duty of the court to decide cases as they arise, rather than to undertake by general rules to anticipate the circumstances and degrees of future cases."

Taking Exercise Not Traveling. — O'Connell v. Lewiston, 65 Me. 34, 20 Am. Rep. 673; Davidson v. Portland, 69 Me. 116, 31 Am. Rep. 253; Sullivan v. Maine Cent. R. Co., 82 Me. 196; Cleveland v. Bangor, 87 Me. 267, 47 Am. St. Rep. 326; Eaton v. Atlas Acc. Ins. Co., 89 Me. 570; Hamilton v. Boston, 14 Allen (Mass.) 475.

Moving About for Pleasure Is Traveling. — Hinckley v. Penobscot, 42 Me. 89; Cratty v. Bangor, 57 Me. 423, 2 Am. Rep. 56; Parker v. Latner, 60 Me. 528, 11 Am. Rep. 210; Wheel- den v. Lyford, 84 Me. 114.

Going a distance of twelve or fourteen miles to visit for pleasure is traveling. Duran v. Standard L., etc., Ins. Co., 63 Vt. 437, 25 Am. St. Rep. 773.

Traveling Consists in Passing from Town to Town. — Hamilton v. Boston, 14 Allen (Mass.) 475. And see Stanton v. Metropolitan R. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.) 485. But see contra Cratty v. Bangor, 57 Me. 423, 2 Am. Rep. 56.

Place of Worship Not a Place "Used for Public Entertainment or Amusement," where the worship is not according to any established form, but the music is sacred, and nothing dramatic or hostile to religion is introduced, although there is a price charged for reserved seats. Baxter v. Langley, L. R. 4 C. P. 21, 38 L. J. M. C. 1.

Aquarium. — An aquarium where fish and animals are exhibited, and sacred music is played, and an admission is charged, is a place of "public entertainment." Warner v. Brighton held not to prohibit private exhibitions or diversions.¹

Hunting or Fishing on Sunday is in some states prohibited by statute.²

Baseball Playing on Sunday is sometimes expressly prohibited,³ but it is oftener prohibited under more comprehensive words.⁴

Recreation, as used in a statute prohibiting Sunday "recreation," has been held not to include riding for pleasure on a street car.⁵

3. Exceptions—a. WORKS OF NECESSITY OR CHARITY—(1) In General.—Sunday statutes except from their operation works of necessity or charity.⁶

Traveling on Sunday to Do Works of Necessity or Charity is usually expressly excepted by statutes prohibiting traveling on Sunday.⁷

Contracts to Do Works of Necessity or Charity on Sunday may be made even in those states where the making of contracts on Sunday is prohibited.⁸

(2) Definitions and Nature—(a) Necessity.—By the word "necessity" as used in Sunday statutes is not meant a physical and absolute necessity; but a moral fitness or propriety of the thing done, under the circumstances of the particular case.⁹

Convenience Is Not Necessity.—It is no sufficient excuse for work on the Lord's day that it is more convenient or profitable to do it then than it would be to defer or omit it.¹⁰

(b) Charity.—Charity includes everything which proceeds from a sense of Theatrical Performance is not "sporting" within the meaning of a statute prohibiting sporting. Wirth v. Calhoun, 64 Neb. 315.

1. Private Diversions Not Prohibited.—A statute prohibiting "farces or plays of any kind, or any games, tricks, juggling, sleight of hand, or feats of dexterity, agility of body, or any bear baiting, or any bull baiting, horse-racing, cock-fighting, or any such like show or exhibition," has been held to apply only to such sports or contests as are exhibited as public spectacles, and not to private diversions such as playing at cards or dice. Rucker v. State, 67 Miss. 328.

Dancing to music of piano and violin, for amusement, and not as an exhibition, is not a theatrical or other performance. Matter of Allen, (Supm. Ct. Spec. T.) 34 Misc. (N. Y.) 698.

3. See the statutes of the different states.

4. "Sporting" includes playing base ball. Scougale v. Sweet, 124 Mich. 311, approving State v. O'Rourke, 35 Neb. 614; Seay v. Shrader, (Neb. 1903) 95 N. W. Rep. 690. And see Matter of Rupp, 33 N. Y. App. Div. 468.

"Playing".—Engaging in a game of baseball has been held to be playing. People v. Moses, 140 N. Y. 214; People v. Dennin, 35 Hun (N. Y.) 327.

"Game".—But the playing of baseball is not prohibited under a statute prohibiting "horse-racing, cock-fighting, or playing at cards or games of any kind" on Sunday, the statute being held to apply to games that have a demoralizing tendency, and not to mere athletic games like baseball. Ex p. Neet, 157 Mo. 527, 89 Am. St. Rep. 638,

5. Riding for Pleasure Not "Recreation."—Horton v. Norwalk Tramway Co., 66 Conn. 272.

moral duty, or a feeling of kindness and humanity, and is intended wholly for the purpose of the relief or comfort of another, and not for one's own benefit or pleasure.¹

(3) Whether Question of Fact or Law. — It is usually held a question of fact for the jury, under the proper direction of the court, to determine whether the particular act was, under the circumstances of the case, a work of necessity or charity.²

(4) Enumeration of Works — (a) In General. — The difficulty of determining whether in any particular case the act done was one of necessity or charity within the meaning of the statute is usually very great. All the facts surrounding the case must be examined in the light of broad propositions laid down by the courts from time to time and of the adjudicated cases.

Saving Property, as in the case of fire, flood, or tempest, or other unusual peril, is work of necessity or charity.³ And so is saving crops from effects of bad weather, or that are overripe.⁴

Preparing Needful Food for Man or Beast is work of necessity or charity.⁵

Saving Life and Preventing or Relieving Suffering are works of necessity or charity.⁶

Work Connected with Religious Worship. — All necessary or usual work connected with religious worship may be done on Sunday.⁷

Question of Law for Court. — But in Allen v. Duffie, 43 Mich. 1, 38 Am. Rep. 159, the court says: "It is a question of law purely, and cannot be left to depend upon the opinions of jurors as to what is a work of charity or necessity and what is not. If it could, there would be and could be no settled rule whatever, for jurors will never agree upon it. The question is purely one of statutory construction, and when we find what the statute intends, that intent must be the law for all cases."

3. Saving Property. — State v. Goff, 20 Ark. 289; Johnson v. People, 42 Ill. App. 594; Com. v. Sampson, 97 Mass. 409; State v. McBee, 52 W. Va. 257.

7. Particular Occupations Excepted. — See the statutes of the different states.

Bakers. — A "baker," within the meaning of a Sunday statute excepting bakers from its provision, is one whose occupation it is to bake bread and other articles of food, and not one who keeps a shop for the purpose of selling bread and pastry not made by him, but bought for the purpose of resale, although he has a small stove in his shop, in which his wife sometimes bakes a few cookies or gingersnaps which he sells. Com. v. Crowley, 145 Mass. 430.

Druggists. — Tobacco is not "drugs or medicine" within the meaning of a Sunday statute allowing their sale on Sunday. State v. Ohmer, 34 Mo. App. 115. And see Com. v. Marzynski, 149 Mass. 68, where it was held that the selling of cigars on Sunday by a tobacconist in the ordinary way was not the selling of "drugs or medicines" within the meaning of the statute.

c. PERSONS OBSERVING SEVENTH DAY AS SABBATH.—Sunday statutes in many states except from their operation persons who observe the seventh day as the Sabbath.¹

Only Persons Laboring are excepted, however, in some states.²

4. Violation of Sunday Statutes by Agent.—Where Sunday statutes are violated by an agent, both he and the principal are liable.³

IX. CONTRACTS AS AFFECTED BY SUNDAY LAWS—1. Prohibited by Sunday Statutes—a. AS TO CONTRACTS GENERALLY—(1) Contracts Void—(a) In General.—Sunday contracts made in violation of statutes prohibiting them under a penalty are void, although not expressly declared to be so.⁴ This has been held lawful as being "drugs or medicine." Todd v. State, 30 Tex. App. 667.

Common Carriers.—The business of a wharfboat association is embraced within a proviso in a Sunday statute "that nothing in this section shall apply to railroads or steamboat navigation in this state." Merchants' Wharfboat Assoc. v. Wood, 64 Miss. 661, 60 Am. Rep. 76.

Under a statute allowing freight trains starting Saturday night to run through to destination, provided the time of arrival according to schedule by which trains started on trip shall not be later than eight o'clock on Sunday morning, the freight train must be actually started on or before twelve o'clock on Saturday night. *Jackson v. If the Consideration for Its Execution Was a Debt Contracted on a Secular Day the void promissory note may be disregarded and an action brought on the debt. Edwards v. Probst, 38 Ark. 661.

Validity of Note in Hands of Indorsee or Holder.

— But a promissory note executed on Sunday, though void as between the parties, is valid in the hands of a bona fide indorsee or holder taking before maturity and without notice of facts affecting its validity. Saltmarsh v. Tuthill, 13 Ala. 390; Trieber v. Commercial Bank, 31 Ark. 128; Clinton Nat. Bank v. Graves, 48 Iowa 229; Cumberland Bank v. Mayberry, 48 Me. 198; Pope v. Linn, 50 Me. 83; Cranson v. Goss, 107 Mass. 443, 9 Am. Rep. 45; Vinton v. Peck, 14 Mich. 287; Allen v. Deming, 14 N. H. 133, 40 Am. Dec. 179; State Capital Bank v. Thompson, 42 N. H. 369; Gilman v. Berry, 59 N. H. 62; Houlston v. Parsons, 9 U. C. Q. B. 681; Crombie v. Overholtzer, 11 U. C. Q. B. 55.

And the fact that the note was dated on Sunday is not conclusive evidence that the third party took it with notice, since it may have been delivered on a secular day and therefore valid even as between the parties. Cranson v. Goss, 107 Mass. 443, 9 Am. Rep. 45; Gilman v. Berry, 59 N. H. 62.

A promissory note is valid in the hands of a bona fide assignee after maturity, provided the note bears date as of a secular day, and the assignee has no knowledge that the note was really executed on Sunday. Leightman v. Kadetska, 58 Iowa 676, 43 Am. Rep. 129.

Notes Indorsed on Sunday. — An indorsement of a promissory note on Sunday is void, since the indorsement creates a new contract. Bar Harbor First Nat. Bank v. Kingsley, 84 Me. 111; Prescott Nat. Bank v. Butler, 157 Mass. 548. And see Walsh v. Blatchley, 6 Wis. 422, 70 Am. Dec. 469.

Lease made on Sunday is void. Vinz v. Beatty, 61 Wis. 645; Ainsworth v. Williams, 111 Wis. 17.

Parol Agreement Extending Time of Payment of Mortgage Debt is void if made on Sunday. Rush v. Rush, (N. J. 1889) 18 Atl. Rep. 221.

Agreement for the Formation of Partnership in presenti, on Sunday, is void. Durant v. Rhener, 26 Minn. 362.

Insurance Policy executed on Sunday is void. Heller v. Crawford, 37 Ind. 279.

Strong, 6 Vt. 219.

Agreement to Indemnify a person for becoming a surety upon a promissory note is void if made on Sunday. Hill v. Sherwood, 3 Wis. 343.

completed on a subsequent secular day, although negotiations leading up to it are made on Sunday,¹ or which was completed on a prior secular day although something not essential to the completeness of the contract was performed on Sunday.²

Where Delivery of an Instrument Is Essential to the completion of a contract, as in the case of bills, notes, bonds, and deeds, if the contract is written, dated, or signed on Sunday, but not delivered until a secular day, it is valid.³

A Contract of Guaranty made on Sunday is void. Tyler v. Waddingham, 58 Conn. 375; Carrick v. Morrison, 2 Marv. (Del.) 157; Merriam v. Stearns, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 257.

And this is so although the contract to which the guaranty refers is not executed until a subsequent secular day. Merriam v. Stearns, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 257.

Sunday Contract for Purchase of Land Subject to Subsequent Approval or Rejection of one of the vendors is incomplete, and if, on a secular day, the vendor entitled to do so rejects the contract, the vendee may recover the purchase price which he had paid on a secular day. Merrill v. Downs, 41 N. H. 72.

Where Goods Were to Be Inspected Before Buyer Was to Be Absolutely Bound, it was held that, although the terms of the sale were agreed upon on Sunday, there was no completed sale on that day. Moseley v. Vanhooser, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 286, 40 Am. Rep. 37.

Severance of Performance of Sunday Contract. — Where a Sunday contract was made for the purchase of fifteen mules, and thirteen were delivered on Sunday, but two were delivered on Monday, it was held that the seller could not recover the purchase price of the mules delivered on Sunday, but could for the two mules delivered on Monday, on the ground that though the contract was entire the parties severed it in the performance, and therefore as to the two mules delivered on Monday the bargain was begun on Sunday and was not consummated until Monday. Foreman v. Ahl, 55 Pa. St. 325.

Delivery on Secular Day of shingles bought and paid for on Sunday was held not to make the contract incomplete on Sunday and therefore valid, where it appeared that the shingles remained with the seller until a secular day for the convenience merely of the purchaser and not because the contract was to be considered incomplete until removal. Allen v. Deming, 14 N. H. 133, 40 Am. Dec. 179.

2. Execution of a Bill of Sale of horses on Sunday, in pursuance of a sale made on a prior secular day, is not the consummation of the sale, but only the evidence of it, and the sale is not invalid. Foster v. Wooten, 67 Miss. 540.

Where an Indorsement Is Necessary to the completion of a contract, as in the case of an accommodation note, the note is valid though made on Sunday if indorsed by the payee on Monday.¹

(e) Fraud in Making. — Where a contract is void because made on Sunday no action can be maintained for fraud in the making of it.²

(d) Conflict of Laws. — The law governing Sunday contracts made in one state and sought to be enforced in another is discussed elsewhere.³

(2) Ratification of Contracts. — By the great weight of authority a contract void because made on Sunday cannot be ratified on a secular day.⁴ But there are a few cases which hold that void Sunday contracts may be subsequently ratified on a week day. In these cases, however, the person ratifying has received some benefit from the contract which he has retained.⁵

The parties cannot legalize that which the law has declared illegal. It is competent to them to impart a new efficacy to a voidable act, but they have no power to give life to an act which, from reasons of public policy, has been ordained by the legislative authority to be absolutely void."

What Amounts to Ratification. — In those states which hold that a void Sunday contract may be ratified on a subsequent secular day, it has been held that a retention of whatever has been received under the contract is not of itself a ratification of the contract,¹ but that part payment under the contract is.²

(3) Subsequent New Contracts. — While by the weight of authority a contract void because made on Sunday cannot be ratified on a subsequent secular day,³ yet the acts of the parties in dealing with the subject-matter of the void Sunday contract may be such as to create a new and valid contract.⁴

b. CONTRACTS WHOLLY EXECUTORY. — Where the contract is wholly executory, and there is neither delivery of the goods on the one hand nor payment of price on the other, the authorities are agreed that the attitude of the courts should be one of absolute nonaction.⁵

c. CONTRACTS WHOLLY OR PARTLY EXECUTED — (1) In General. — The course pursued by the courts where contracts void because made on Sunday have been wholly or partly executed on that day has been changed in a few states by reason of statutes, and these statutes should be borne in mind in considering what follows concerning contracts wholly or partly executed.

Return of Valuable Consideration. — These statutes provide in substance that he who receives a valuable consideration for a contract made on Sunday shall not defend against it on the ground that it was made on Sunday until he restores the consideration,⁶ and it is immaterial that the consideration is in the nature of things not capable of being restored.⁷ The effect has been to allow actions held that a contract executed in Indiana on Sunday was void and incapable of ratification.

Iowa. — Harrison v. Colton, 31 Iowa 16; Russell v. Murdock, 79 Iowa 101, 18 Am. St. Rep. 348.

Vermont. — Adams v. Gay, 19 Vt. 358; Sargeant v. Butts, 21 Vt. 102; Sumner v. Jones, 24 Vt. 323.

In Adams v. Gay, 19 Vt. 358, the court said: "Contracts made upon Sunday should be held an exception, in some sense, from the general class of contracts which are void for illegality. Such contracts are not tainted with any general illegality; they are illegal only as to the time in which they are entered into. When purged of this ingredient they are like other contracts."

1. Retention of Benefit Received from Contract Not a Ratification. — Rogers v. Western Union Tel. Co., 78 Ind. 169, 41 Am. Rep. 558.

2. Part Payment on a secular day for goods sold and delivered on Sunday ratifies the Sunday contract. Banks v. Werts, 13 Ind. 203; Sumner v. Jones, 24 Vt. 317.

And part payment on a note executed on Sunday, and therefore void, ratifies the note and makes it valid. Russell v. Murdock, 79 Iowa 101, 18 Am. St. Rep. 348.

3. See supra, this subsection, (2) Ratification of Contracts.

4. Acts Such as to Create New Contract. — Day v. McAllister, 15 Gray (Mass.) 433; Cranson v. Goss, 107 Mass. 441, 9 Am. Rep. 45; Winchell v. Carey, 115 Mass. 560, 15 Am. Rep. 151; Tucker v. Mowrey, 12 Mich. 378; Acme Electrical Illustrating, etc., Co. v. Van Derbeck, 127 Mich. 341, 89 Am. St. Rep. 476; Bollin v.

Occupation of Land as Tenant. — While a lease executed on Sunday is void, if the lessee, on a subsequent secular day, enters upon the land and occupies the same, he will be liable to an action upon an implied promise to pay what the use of the land is reasonably worth; but the void lease cannot be resorted to to determine such contract. Cranson v. Goss, 107 Mass. 441, 9 Am. Rep. 45; Stebbins v. Peck, 8 Gray (Mass.) 553, explained in Day v. McAllister, 15 Gray (Mass.) 433; Vinz v. Beatty, 60 Wis. 645.

Goods Delivered on Secular Day. — Where goods are bargained for on Sunday, but are delivered and accepted on a secular day with the purpose that they be sold and paid for, the seller may recover upon the implied contract of the buyer to pay what they are reasonably worth, and neither can be permitted to prove the terms agreed between them on Sunday. Cranson v. Goss, 107 Mass. 442, 9 Am. Rep. 45; Bradley v. Rea, 14 Allen (Mass.) 20, 103 Mass. 188, 4 Am. Rep. 524.

And see Hopkins v. Stefah, 77 Wis. 45, where it is held that delivery of goods on a secular day, on the faith of a promise made on a secular day to pay for them, creates a new contract, although a similar promise may have been made on Sunday.

5. Attitude of Courts Absolute Nonaction. — Calhoun v. Phillips, 87 Ga. 482; Thompson v. Williams, 58 N. H. 248; Shuman v. Shuman, 27 Pa. St. 90; Chestnut v. Harbaugh, 78 Pa. St. 473.

on contracts of sale by the seller to recover the purchase price where the property delivered has not been restored,¹ and by the buyer to recover the price paid for property which he has received and offered to return;² actions on notes indorsed on Sunday by indorsee against indorser;³ and actions by a bailor on contracts of bailment to recover the hire of property bailed.⁴

(2) Contracts Wholly Executed—(a) Sales of Personal Property.—In the absence of statutes to the contrary,⁵ if the Sunday contract of sale is completely executed on that day by the delivery of the property to the buyer, and the payment of the price to the seller, the weight of authority is to the effect that the parties are in pari delicto, and that neither has any remedy against the other,⁶ nor can the property sold be recovered by the seller's creditors.⁷

Minority Rule.—There is some authority to the effect that, the contract being void, no title to the property delivered passes, and the seller, on tendering back the purchase price, may recover the property, and the buyer, on tendering back the property, may recover the purchase price.⁸

(b) Sales of Real Property.—Where a deed is executed on Sunday and the money paid, the possession of the land having previously been given, the law will leave the parties where it finds them, and the courts will not interfere.⁹ Nor can property conveyed by deed executed on Sunday be recovered by the grantor's creditors claiming under a subsequent levy.¹⁰

(c) Payment of Debts.—Payment of debts on Sunday discharges them, and the debtor cannot recover back the amount paid, nor can the creditor while retaining the amount paid treat the payment as a nullity and enforce payment over again.¹¹

Pennsylvania.—Shuman v. Shuman, 27 Pa. St. 90; Chestnut v. Harbaugh, 78 Pa. St. 473.

Wisconsin.—Moore v. Kendall, 1 Chand. (Wis.) 33; Cohn v. Heimbauch, 86 Wis. 176.

Reason for Rule.—In Myers v. Meinrath, 101 Mass. 366, 3 Am. Rep. 368, the court said: "The purpose of the rule of law, however, is not to give validity to the transaction, but to deprive the parties of all right to have either enforcement of or relief from their illegal contracts. In such cases, the defense of illegality prevails, not as a protection to the defendant, but as a disability in the plaintiff."

Exchange of Property.—Where a Sunday contract for the exchange of personal property has been wholly executed on that day by the delivery of the property on each side, neither party has any remedy against the other. Kelley v. Cosgrove, 83 Iowa 229; Myers v. Meinrath, 101 Mass. 366, 3 Am. Rep. 368. And this is so notwithstanding he has returned the property received by him. Myers v. Meinrath, 101 Mass. 366, 3 Am. Rep. 368.

But Where Condition for Return of Property if Unsatisfactory is inserted in the contract of sale, the buyer may return the property and sue for the purchase price, though the sale was completely executed on Sunday. Maurer v. Wolff, (Supm. Ct. Gen. T.) 21 N. Y. Supp. 202.

Payments Made for Sunday Labor.—Calkins v. Seabury-Calkins Consol. Min. Co., 5 S. Dak. 299.

(3) Contracts Partly Executed — (a) Where No Subsequent Express Promise Exists — aa. CONTRACTS OF SALE — Recovery of Purchase Price or Fair Value. — Where property is sold and delivered on Sunday without payment of the price, it is generally held, in the absence of a subsequent express promise to pay, that the price cannot be recovered.¹ Nor will assumpsit lie for the fair value of the property.²

Recovery of Property Delivered. — It is usually held that no action will lie by the seller to recover back property sold and delivered on Sunday, notwithstanding the purchase price has not been paid.³ Nor will an action lie by the creditors of the seller to get possession of the property delivered.⁴ In fact, where the seller gets possession of the property without process on a secular day, the courts will aid the buyer to recover the same.⁵ But a few cases hold that as the Sunday contract of sale is void no title passes to the buyer, and the seller may on another day make a demand for the property, and if it is not returned maintain an action of trover or replevin.⁶

bb. CONTRACTS OF BAILMENT OR PLEDGE — Recovery of Hire. — Where property is transferred to a person on Sunday under a contract of bailment for hire, void because made on that day, and the property bailed is returned in accordance with the terms of the bailment, but the consideration for the bailment is not paid, no action lies by the bailor against the bailee to recover such consideration.⁷

Recovery of Property. — Property delivered on Sunday by way of bailment or pledge may be retained by the bailee or pledgee until the special purpose for which it was received has been carried out.⁸ But a retention not in accordance with the terms of the bailment or pledge amounts to a conversion.⁹

cc. CONTRACTS FOR LOAN OF MONEY. — Where money is loaned on Sunday no Money on Deposit. — It is conversion for the bailee to use money deposited on Sunday for safekeeping, and an action lies in tort or the tort may be waived and assumpsit maintained for money had and received. Tamplin v. Still, 77 Ala. 374.

action can be maintained for its return, either on the express promise made on Sunday or on an implied promise for its repayment.¹

(b) Where Subsequent Express Promise Exists. — Where a person receives the benefit of a void Sunday contract, and subsequently, on a secular day, makes an express promise to perform his side of it, it is held valid and enforceable even in those states which do not go to the extent of holding that Sunday contracts may be ratified;² but nothing short of an express new promise will be held sufficient.³

2. To Perform Something on Sunday Prohibited by Statute — a. IN GENERAL. — Contracts to perform on Sunday something prohibited by statute are void whether made on Sunday or on a secular day.⁴ And in such cases it is immaterial whether the execution of Sunday contracts generally is prohibited.⁵

Entire Contract Providing for Part Performance on Sunday is void, where the acts to be performed on Sunday are prohibited by statute; and no recovery can be had for the part performed on a secular day.⁶

Presumption that Labor Was to Be Performed on Secular Day. — In the absence of proof to the contrary it will be presumed that the labor contracted for was to be performed on a secular day.⁷

1. Money Loaned on Sunday Not Recoverable. — Tamplin v. Still, 77 Ala. 374; Finn v. Donahue, 35 Conn. 216; Meador v. White, 66 Me. 90, 22 Am. Rep. 551; Troewert v. Decker, 51 Wis. 46, 37 Am. Rep. 808.

But Money Loaned on a Week Day on a Note Made on Sunday may be recovered where the lender is ignorant of the fact that the note was made on Sunday. Beman v. Wessels, 53 Mich. 549.

2. Purchase Price for Goods Sold and Delivered on Sunday may be recovered where the lender is chaser, on a subsequent secular day, makes an express promise to pay it. *Williams v. "The cases are not uniform in stating the reasons for this exception, but they all recognize its existence." Melchoir v. McCarty, 31 Wis. 253, 11 Am. Rep. 605.

Action on a Note Made on Sunday Lies where express promise is made on a subsequent week day to pay it. Tucker v. West, 29 Ark. 386; Brewster v. Banta, 66 N. J. L. 367.

Money Borrowed on Sunday may be recovered where there is an express promise on a secular day to repay the money. Gwinn v. Simes, 61 Mo. 335; Smith v. Case, 2 Oregon 191.

3. Nothing Short of Express Promise Sufficient. — In Reeves v. Butcher, 31 N. J. L. 224, it was held that payment on a secular day of interest on a note, void because made on Sunday, does not in itself amount to a new promise to pay the money due.

White*, 4 Daly (N. Y.) 400; Porter v. Sanderson, 37 Wis. 41. And see Johnston v. Com., 22 Pa. St. 102, where it was held that a contract of hiring by the month does not in general bind the laborer to work on Sunday.

b. RATIFICATION.—While there is a difference in the decisions on the question whether a contract void merely because it was made on Sunday may be ratified on a secular day so as to become valid,¹ there is no conflict on the proposition that a contract void because it stipulates for doing something prohibited by the Sunday laws is incapable of being ratified.²

3. Revival of Debt Barred by Statute of Limitations.—Where a debt barred by the statute of limitations is acknowledged, or a part payment is made, on Sunday, by the weight of authority the debt is not revived.³ There is some authority, however, to the contrary.⁴

4. Contract Within Statute of Frauds, but Delivery Made on Sunday.—Delivery and receipt on Sunday of goods sold under a verbal contract, void because within the statute of frauds, are insufficient to validate the contract.⁵

X. INJURIES RECEIVED WHILE VIOLATING SUNDAY STATUTES—1. In General.—Statutes exist in a few states which provide that Sunday statutes shall not affect in any way an action for a tort or injury suffered on Sunday.⁶ These statutes have in Maine and Massachusetts changed the law formerly existing, and must be borne in mind in considering what follows.⁷

2. Actions of Tort—a. IN GENERAL.—By the great weight of authority it is no defense to an action for negligence that the plaintiff, at the time the injury occurred, was engaged in the violation of some Sunday statute. This is on the ground that the proximate cause of the injury was the negligence of the defendant and not the violation of the Sunday statute by the plaintiff.⁸

Erickson*, 125 Mich. 68; Whitcher v. McConnell, 59 N. H. 470; Matter of Linn, 2 Pearson (Pa.) 487; Haydock v. Tracy, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 507. And see Beardsley v. Hall, 36 Conn. 270, 4 Am. Rep. 74.

4. Debt Not Revived.—Ayres v. Bane, 39 Iowa 518; Thomas v. Hunter, 29 Md. 406.

5. Delivery and Receipt on Sunday.—Ash v. Aldrich, 67 N. H. 581. And see Beaumont v. Brengeri, 5 C. B. 301, 57 E. C. L. 301, where the question was left undecided.

6. Statutes Making Violation of Sunday Laws No Defense.—Maine Pub. Laws 1895, c. 129, § 1; Mass. Pub. Laws 1902, c. 98, § 17; Bridges v. Bridges, 93 Me. 559. And see the statutes of the different states.

In Maine the statute reads as follows: "The provisions of chapter one hundred twenty-four of the revised statutes relating to the observance of the Lord's day, shall not affect in any way the rights or remedy of either party in any action for a tort or injury suffered on that day." Maine Pub. Laws 1895, c. 120, § 1.

7. Statutes Directed Against Common Carriers, and providing that the fact that a person was traveling on Sunday in violation of statute should not constitute a defense in an action against the common carrier for a tort suffered, existed in Massachusetts prior to more general statute. McDonough v. Metropolitan R. Co., 137 Mass. 210.

8. Damages for Injuries Caused by Defective Highway Are Recoverable against the town, though the injuries were received while the plaintiff was traveling in violation of law. Black v. Lewiston, 2 Idaho 276; Gross v. Miller, 93 Iowa 72; Kansas City v. Orr, 62 Kan. 61; Norris v. Litchfield, 35 N. H. 271, 69 Am. Dec. 546; Sewell v. Webster, 59 N. H. 586; Wentworth v. Jefferson, 60 N. H. 158; Platz v. Cohoes, 89 N. Y. 219, 42 Am. Rep. 286; Sutton v. Wauwatosa, 29 Wis. 21, 9 Am. Rep. 534.

Damages for Injuries Caused by Dog Are Recoverable, though the plaintiff was unlawfully traveling when they were received. Schmid v. Humphrey, 48 Iowa 652, 30 Am. Rep. 414.

And this was held to be the law in Massachusetts in a case decided before the statute was passed making it immaterial that the plaintiff was violating Sunday statutes on the ground that the act of traveling was a condition and not a contributory cause of the injury. White v. Lang, 128 Mass. 598, 35 Am. Rep. 402.

Damages for Injuries to Boat Caused by Obstruction in Water may be recovered, though the boat was running in violation of a statute prohibiting worldly employment on Sunday. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., Steam Towboat Co., 23 How. (U. S.) 209.

A Person Shot While Hunting on Sunday in violation of a statute prohibiting hunting on that day may recover damages against a companion who negligently did the shooting. Gross v. Miller, 93 Iowa 72.

Employee Injured While Laboring for Employer in violation of Sunday statutes prohibiting "labor" may recover damages for the injuries sustained. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Buck, 116 Ind. 566, 9 Am. St. Rep. 883; Louisville, etc.,

But there is some authority to the effect that in the absence of statutes to the contrary¹ the fact that the plaintiff was engaged in violating a Sunday statute at the time the injuries were received is an absolute defense, provided the plaintiff's violation of the Sunday statute contributed to the injuries.²

b. TORTS ARISING OUT OF SUNDAY CONTRACTS OF BAILMENT—(1) Conversion.—Where personal property is hired under a contract of bailment, void because made on Sunday, and the property is converted by the bailee, as where a horse is hired to go to a certain place and is driven to a different place, it is generally held, even in the absence of statutes making the violation of a Sunday statute no defense to an action of tort, that the bailor may maintain an action for the conversion,³ but a few cases have held in the absence of statutes to the contrary that no action will lie under such circumstances.⁴

Damages for the Killing of Person at Railroad Crossing by being run over by train are recoverable, though the person killed was traveling on Sunday in violation of law. Boyden v. Fitchburg R. Co., 70 Vt. 125.

Damages for Injuries to Passenger or Property Being Transported by Common Carrier are recoverable, though the transportation was in violation of Sunday statutes. Opsahl v. Judd, 30 Minn. 126; Knowlton v. Milwaukee City R. Co., 59 Wis. 278; Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Trautwein, 52 N. J. L. 169, 19 Am. St. Rep. 442. And see Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Graham, 3 Ind. 1. See supra, this section, 1. In General.

2. Violation Must Contribute to Injuries and Not Be Condition Merely.—White v. Lang, 128 Mass. 598, 35 Am. Rep. 402; Wallace v. Merrimack River Nav., etc., Co., 134 Mass. 95, 45 Am. Rep. 301.

Damages for Injuries Caused by Defective Highway Are Not Recoverable in the absence of a statute to the contrary, where the plaintiff was violating Sunday statutes against traveling.

Maine.—Hinckley v. Penobscot, 42 Me. 89; Cratty v. Bangor, 57 Me. 423, 2 Am. Rep. 56; Parker v. Latner, 60 Me. 528, 11 Am. Rep. 210; O'Connell v. Lewiston, 65 Me. 34, 20 Am. Rep. 673; Cleveland v. Bangor, 87 Me. 259, 47 Am. St. Rep. 326.

And see Beacham v. Portsmouth Bridge, 68 N. H. 382, 73 Am. St. Rep. 607, where the court, applying the law of Maine, refused to allow the plaintiff, who was traveling on Sunday in violation of law, on the part of a toll bridge between New Hampshire and Maine which was in Maine, to recover damages of the toll-bridge company for injuries sustained by his horse, due to a defect in the toll bridge.

Massachusetts.—Jones v. Andover, 10 Allen (Mass.) 18; Bosworth v. Swansey, 10 Met. (Mass.) 363, 43 Am. Dec. 441; Connolly v. Boston, 117 Mass. 64, 19 Am. Rep. 396; Gor- man v. Lowell, 117 Mass. 65; Lyons v. Desotelle, 124 Mass. 389; Davis v. Somerville, 128 Mass. 594, 35 Am. Rep. 399; White v. Lang, 128 Mass. 598, 35 Am. Rep. 402; Barker v. Worcester, 139 Mass. 74.

Vermont.—McClary v. Lowell, 44 Vt. 116, 8 Am. Rep. 366; Johnson v. Irasburgh, 47 Vt. 32, 19 Am. Rep. 111; Holcomb v. Danby, 51 Vt. 435; Hoadley v. International Paper Co., 72 Vt. 79.

But in Vermont this rule is put upon the ground that a town is under no obligation to provide a safe road for such a traveler; and the rule does not apply to injuries caused by private corporations or persons. Boyden v. Fitchburg R. Co., 70 Vt. 125; Hoadley v. International Paper Co., 72 Vt. 79.

Damages for Injuries Caused by Being Hit by Railroad Gate Are Not Recoverable in the absence of a statute to the contrary, where the plaintiff was traveling at the time in violation of Sunday statutes. Smith v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 120 Mass. 490, 21 Am. Rep. 538.

Damages for Injuries Caused by Collision on Water or Land Are Not Recoverable in the absence of a statute to the contrary, where the plaintiff was violating a Sunday statute against traveling. Lyons v. Desotelle, 124 Mass. 387; Wallace v. Merrimack River Nav., etc., Co., 134 Mass. 95, 45 Am. Rep. 301.

Damages for Injuries to Passenger Are Not Recoverable in the absence of a statute to the contrary, where the passenger was traveling in violation of Sunday statute. Bucher v. Fitchburg R. Co., 131 Mass. 156, 41 Am. Rep. 216, 125 U. S. 555.

3. Action Lies for Conversion.—Stewart v. Davis, 31 Ark. 518, 25 Am. Rep. 576; Frost v. Plumb, 40 Conn. 111, 16 Am. Rep. 18; Doolittle v. Shaw, 92 Iowa 348, 54 Am. St. Rep. 562; Marton v. Gloster, 46 Me. 520, distinguished in Parker v. Latner, 60 Me. 528, 11 Am. Rep. 210; Hall v. Corcoran, 107 Mass. 251, 9 Am. Rep. 30 [overruling Gregg v. Wyman, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 322]; Nodine v. Doherty, 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 59. And see Fisher v. Kyle, 27 Mich. 454.

4. Action Does Not Lie for Conversion.—Gregg v. Wyman, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 322 [overruled in Hall v. Corcoran, 107 Mass. 251, 9 Am. Rep. 30]; Whelden v. Chappel, 8 R. I. 230; Smith v. Rollins, 11 R. I. 464, 23 Am. Rep. 509.

Whelden v. Chappel, 8 R. I. 230, was decided on the authority of Gregg v. Wyman, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 322, and was affirmed in Smith v. Rollins, 11 R. I. 464, 23 Am. Rep. 509, where

Reason for Allowing Action. — Where an action of conversion is maintainable it is on the ground that the conversion puts an end to the illegal contract, and the bailor in proving his case is not obliged to rely essentially upon the contract, although it may incidentally appear.¹

(2) Negligence. — Where personal property held under a contract of bailment, void because made on Sunday, is injured or destroyed by the bailee on that day through his negligence, but while he is acting within the terms of the bailment so far as not to be liable to an action for conversion, as where a horse is hired on Sunday to go to a certain place and while being driven to that place is injured through the bailee's negligence, the weight of authority, in the absence of statutes making the violation of Sunday laws no defense to an action of tort,² is that the bailor cannot maintain an action for damages because a reliance on the illegal contract of bailment would be necessary.³ But there is authority that an action will lie.⁴

3. Actions on Contracts of Insurance. — Actions on contracts of accident the court said that it could not agree with the conclusions in Hall v. Corcoran, 107 Mass. 251, 9 Am. Rep. 30, and Woodman v. Hubbard, 25 N. H. 67, 57 Am. Dec. 310, but was still of opinion that the decision in Whelden v. Chappel, 8 R. I. 230, was founded upon the better reason.

1. Reason for Allowing Action. — Parker v. Latner, 60 Me. 528, 11 Am. Rep. 210. But see Smith v. Rollins, 11 R. I. 470, 23 Am. Rep. 509, where the court says that proof of the contract is essential to proof of the conversion. And see Woodman v. Hubbard, 25 N. H. 67, 57 Am. Dec. 310.

In Frost v. Plumb, 40 Conn. 111, 16 Am. Rep. 18, the court says: "We understand the rule to be this: the plaintiff cannot recover whenever it is necessary for him to prove, as a part of his cause of action, his own illegal contract, or other illegal transaction; but if he can show a complete cause of action without being obliged to prove his own illegal act, although such illegal act may incidentally appear, and may be important even as explanatory of other facts in the case, he may recover. It is sufficient if his cause of action is not essentially founded upon something which is illegal. If it is, whatever may be the form of the action, he cannot recover. Apply that rule to this case. It was only necessary for the plaintiff to prove his own title to the property, and a conversion by the defendant. The destruction of the horse was a conversion; and proof that the injury which caused his death occurred while being driven without the consent of the owner shows a complete cause of action without any reference to an illegal contract. The illegal letting may or may not appear. If it does, it simply explains the defendant's possession, and proves that it was by the owner's permission, at least for a certain purpose. It may give the defendant an opportunity to injure the horse, but it does not cause the injury; nor does it contribute to it in such a sense as to make the plaintiff a party to the wrongful act. If it does not appear, before the defendant can avail himself of it as a defense it becomes necessary for him to prove the illegal contract to which he was a party, and his own illegal conduct in traveling upon the Sabbath. But he can no more avail himself of that as a defense than the plaintiff can as a cause of action. Either party, whose success depends upon proving his own violation of law, must fail."

2. See supra, this section, 1. In General.

3. No Action Lies for Negligence. — Parker v. Latner, 60 Me. 528, 11 Am. Rep. 210; Way v. Foster, 1 Allen (Mass.) 408, distinguished in Hall v. Corcoran, 107 Mass. 251, 9 Am. Rep. 30. And see Frost v. Plumb, 40 Conn. 111, 16 Am. Rep. 18; Whelden v. Chappel, 8 R. I. 230; Smith v. Rollins, 11 R. I. 464, 23 Am. Rep. 509.

4. Action Lies for Negligence. — Newbury v. Luke, 68 N. J. L. 189; Nodine v. Doherty, 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 59.

Reason for Rule. — In Newbury v. Luke, 68 N. J. L. 189, the court says: "The Sunday hiring and the Sunday driving happened to furnish the conditions under which the death of the horse was occasioned. But its death was the direct and natural result of the overdriving and abuse, and of these alone. These causes would have produced the same result if they had occurred on any other day of the week, just as they would have produced it had they occurred without any contract of bailment whatsoever. It follows that the Sunday violation is as clearly nonessential upon the question of defendant's liability as are such questions as the exact location of the occurrence, the time of day, the color of the horse, and the like. But if an inquiry into the contract of bailment were material, what is the result? The contract falls because made on Sunday. That destroys the defendant's right to drive the horse, but it certainly does not confer the right to overdrive it. It vitiates the temporary right of use, but it does not pass the permanent right of property. In short, it leaves the defendant's liability upon the same basis as if the horse had been taken without the leave or license of the plaintiff. Unless, therefore, the plaintiff is debarred by the application of the maxim, In pari delicto potior est conditio defendentis, the plaintiff must prevail. But as the plaintiff can make out his case without reference to the illegal contract, it seems clear that this maxim has no applicability."

Contract of Pasturage, though void because made on Sunday, will not prevent an action against the agistor for loss of a horse, due to his negligence. Costello v. Ten Eyck, 86 Mich. 348, 24 Am. St. Rep. 128.

insurance by policy holders receiving injuries on Sunday while violating Sunday statutes are considered elsewhere.¹

XI. EVIDENCE — 1. Burden of Proof — As to Prohibitory Clause of Sunday Statute. — The person who seeks to establish the fact that the prohibiting clause of a Sunday statute has been violated has the burden of proof.²

As to Excepting Clause of Sunday Statute. — The person who seeks to bring himself within the clause of a Sunday statute which excepts certain things from its prohibition has the burden of proof.³

2. As to Date — a. JUDICIALLY NOTICED. — Courts will take judicial notice that a certain day of the month falls upon Sunday.⁴

b. TRUE DATE SHOWN. — While there is a presumption that an instrument was dated as of its true day,⁵ yet an instrument dated as of Sunday may be shown to have been misdated and proof received of its true date.⁶ So, as between the parties, evidence may be received that a transaction purporting to be of another date was in truth on Sunday.⁷

As to Date of Delivery of Instrument. — It will be presumed that an instrument was delivered on the day of its date, but this presumption may be overcome and an instrument dated on Sunday shown to have been delivered on a week day.⁸

XII. STATUTES CONCERNING HOLIDAYS. — Statutes exist generally setting apart certain days as holidays and regulating to some extent their proper observance.⁹ These statutes are not so general in their regulation as Sunday statutes;¹⁰ they usually provide merely for the suspension of judicial proceedings,¹¹ for the presentation and protest of commercial paper on the next secular business day,¹² for the suspension of business in the public offices,¹³ and for the

2. Burden of Proving that Contract Was Made on Sunday, and therefore void as violating clause of statute prohibiting the making of contracts on Sunday, is on the person assailing it. Sanders v. Johnson, 29 Ga. 526; Nason v. Dinmore, 34 Me. 391; O'Shea v. Kohn, 33 Hun (N. Y.) 114; Troewert v. Decker, 51 Wis. 46, 37 Am. Rep. 808.

Ordinary Calling. — Burden of proving that a Sunday contract was "within ordinary calling" of the parties, where the invalidity is dependent on that fact, is on the person alleging invalidity. Sanders v. Johnson, 29 Ga. 526; Mills v. Williams, 16 S. Car. 593; Bethune v. Hamilton, 6 U. C. Q. B. O. S. 105.

3. Work of Necessity or Charity. — Burden of showing that certain acts alleged to be prohibited by Sunday statutes were acts of necessity or charity, and hence within the clause excepting work of necessity or charity, is on the one doing the acts. Shipley v. State, 61 Ark. 216; Jackson v. State, 88 Ga. 787; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Yopst, 118 Ind. 248; State v. Southern R. Co., 119 N. Car. 814, 56 Am. St. Rep. 689; Com. v. Bobb, 17 Pa. Co. SUPERINTENDENCE. (See also MANAGEMENT, vol. 19, p. 706.)—"Superintendence" is defined as "the act of superintending; care and oversight for the purpose of direction and with authority to direct."⁸

SUPERINTENDENT. (See also the title FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 12, p. 893.)—The word "superintendent," in its ordinary acceptation, means one

1. Sale or Gift of Intoxicating Liquors on Election Day.—See the title INTOXICATING LIQUORS, vol. 17, p. 347.

2. Transactions Not Prohibited by Statute May Be Carried On.—Glenn v. Eddy, 51 N. J. L. 255, 14 Am. St. Rep. 684; Lord v. Gifford, 67 N. J. L. 193; Page v. Shainwald, 169 N. Y. 246; Walton v. Stafford, 162 N. Y. 558; Morel v. Stearns, (Supm. Ct. App. T.) 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 486.

In Glenn v. Eddy, 51 N. J. L. 255, 14 Am. St. Rep. 684, the court says: "When the statute declares [certain days] to be legal holidays, it does not permit a reference to the legal status of Sunday to discover its meaning; for it proceeds to interpret the phrase, so far as it is prohibitory, by an express enactment declaring what shall not be done thereon. What it thus expresses is prohibited; what it fails to prohibit remains lawful to be done."

The Making of Ordinary Contracts on holidays is not within the operation of Pennsylvania statutes. Robeson v. Pels, 202 Pa. St. 399.

Legal Holiday Not "Dies Non" in Maryland. Handy v. Maddox, 85 Md. 547.

3. Sunday School.—A bequest of a sum of money, to a church "to be applied to the Sunday school belonging to or attached to said church" was held sufficiently definite and certain and capable of being enforced. The church was a corporate body, and the Sunday school was unincorporated, but being an integral part of the church organization, it was embraced within the scope of the corporate functions of the church. Eutaw Place Baptist Church v. Shively, 67 Md. 493. See also the title CHARITIES AND TRUSTS FOR CHARITABLE USES, vol. 5, pp. 926, 930.

4. Sunk.—See Bryant v. London Assur., 2 Times Rep. 591; The Glenlivet, (1893) P. 170.

Sunken Wreck.—See The Munroe, (1893) P. 248, stated under the title MARINE INSURANCE, vol. 19, p. 1027.

5. Sunset.—In Gordon v. Cann, 68 L. J. Q. B. 434, 80 L. T. 20, it was held that under a statute requiring riders of bicycles to exhibit lights "one hour after sunset," the hour of actual sunset at the place of riding, and not the hour of sunset at Greenwich was to be regarded.

6. Superfluous Land.—As to the meaning of this term under the English Land Clauses Consolidation Act, 1885, § 127, see Mulliner v. Midland R. Co., 11 Ch. D. 611; Norton v. London, etc., R. Co., 13 Ch. D. 268; In re Metropolitan Dist. R. Co., 13 Ch. D. 607; May v. Great Western R. 8. Superintendence.—Ure v. Ure, 185 Ill. 216, quoting Webst. Dict.

The word superintendence means oversight or inspection. Moffitt v. Asheville, 103 N. Car. 237.

Superintendence and Control Synonymous.—See Ure v. Ure, 185 Ill. 216.

Superintendence of Penal Institutions. (See also the title PRISONS AND PRISONERS, vol. 22, p. 1298.)—The Constitution of North Carolina provided that it should be required by competent legislation that the structure and superintendence of the penal institutions of the state should secure the health of the prisoners. In construing this provision the court said: "The word superintendence means oversight or inspection, and was intended, as used in the constitution, to impose upon the governing officials of a municipal corporation the duty of exercising ordinary care in procuring articles essential for the health and comfort of prisoners and of overlooking their subordinates in immediate control of the prisons (so far, at least, as to replenish the supply of such necessary articles when notified that they are needed), and of employing such agents and raising and appropriating such amounts of money as may be necessary to keep the prison in such condition as to secure the comfort and health of the inmates." who superintends; a director; an overseer;¹ one who has oversight and charge of something with the power of direction.²

SUPERIOR. — Superior means higher in dignity, quality, or excellence.³

SUPERIOR COURT. (See also the title COURTS, vol. 8, p. 37.) — See note 4.

SUPERNUMERARY. — In military law, a supernumerary is an officer whose battalion or corps has been reduced or disbanded, or so arranged as to leave him for the present no command.⁵

SUPERSEDE. (See also SUSPEND — SUSPENSION, post.) — “To supersede is to set aside, to annul. An order which sets aside or annuls a decree dissolving an injunction must ipso facto reinstate the injunction.”⁶ To supersede, when used of a military officer, means to put one in a place which, by the ordinary course of military promotion, belongs to another.⁷

SUPERSEDEAS. (See also the title SUPERSEDEAS AND STAY OF PROCEEDINGS, 20 ENCYC. OF PL. AND PR. 1207.) — “A supersedeas, properly so called, is a suspension of the power of the court below to issue an execution on the judgment or decree appealed from; or, if a writ of execution has issued, it is a prohibition emanating from the court of appeal against the execution of the

1. Superintendent. — Salem v. McClintock, 16 Ind. App. 656, holding that in the absence of an undertaking defining, fixing, and enlarging the duties of a superintendent, his duties must be taken to be such, and such only, as the ordinary acceptance of the word would imply. See also Lafayette v. James, 92 Ind. 244; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. De Ford, 38 Kan. 300.

The word “superintendent” in the Wisconsin Railway Employee Act of 1889 (see the title FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 12, p. 985) is to be interpreted in the sense in which the word was commonly used with respect to railway service when the act was passed, and does not embrace the foreman of a repair shop. Moreover, the intent of the act was to provide remedies for the neglect of officers and employees having to do with the operation of the road, the movement of trains and cars. Hartford v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 91 Wis. 374.

2. Presumption. — Sacalaris v. Eureka, etc., R. Co., 18 Nev. 161, in which case the court also said: “When an agent is clothed with a title implying general powers, as superintendent, the business public and courts may fairly presume he is what the corporation holds him out as being.”

Financial Agent. — “There is nothing in the word superintendent, in the common use of it, which implies that he shall be a collector of moneys, much less a financial agent for the settlement of accounts and the handling of the revenues of a city or town.” Salem v. McClintock, 16 Ind. App. 656. See also Lafayette v. James, 92 Ind. 244.

Lessee. — A statute gave a lien to all persons who might be employed by the owner or owners, agent, or superintendent, for services rendered to any steam sawmill. It was held that a lessee was neither an agent nor a superintendent within the contemplation of the statute. Harman v. Allen, 11 Ga. 46.

Supt. — That judicial notice will be taken that the abbreviation “supt.” stands for superintendent, see the titles ABBREVIATIONS, vol. 1, p. 98; JUDICIAL NOTICE, vol. 17, p. 897.

3. Superior. — Gilman v. Jones, 87 Ala. 691, quoting Worcester. Dict. and holding, where a certain sum was payable, by the terms of a contract, contingently, “whenever it is finally decided in said suit or otherwise that said bonds are a superior lien to the other bonds of said railroad,” etc., that superior manifestly meant “prior,” “superior lien” meaning “prior lien.”

In Laufer v. Bridgeport Traction Co., 68 Conn. 475, it was held that the word superior, when used as descriptive of the rights which an electric car has in a street, meant no more than that the right which such car has in such street is only that other travelers should turn off from its tracks in reasonable time to allow it to pass. See also the title STREET RAILWAYS, ante, p. 57.

Superior Force (vis major, or force majeure) is defined in the Louisiana Civil Code (art. 3556, subdiv. 14) as follows: “Those accidents are said to be caused by superior force which human prudence can neither foresee nor prevent.” Fortuitous event (cas fortuit) is defined in the same code (art. 3556, subdiv. 15): “That which happens by a cause which we cannot resist.” In Viterbo v. Friedlander, 120 U. S. 728, the court said: “The Louisiana Code, following the French law and the Code Napoleon, recognizes two kinds or degrees of what, under various but equivalent names, has been called vis major, cas fortuit, irresistible force, inevitable accident, or unforeseen event; the one, ordinary, which might have been foreseen by any man of common prudence as not unlikely to happen at some time; the other, extraordinary, which could not have been foreseen, or expected to occur at any time.”

writ. It operates from the time of the completion of those acts which are requisite to call it into existence."¹

SUPERSTITIOUS USE. — A superstitious use is that which arises where any manors, lands, tenements, rents, annuities, profits, hereditaments, goods, or chattels are given, received, or appointed for and towards the maintenance of a priest to say mass; for the maintenance of a priest or other man to pray for the soul of any dead man, in such a church or elsewhere; or to maintain perpetual obits, lamps, torches, etc., to be used at certain times, to save the souls of men out of purgatory; or to maintain an anniversary or obit, or any light or lamp, in any church or chapel, or any like.²

SUPERSTRUCTURE. — With reference to railroads, superstructure is defined to be "sleepers, rails, and fastenings," in distinction from the roadbed — called also "permanent way."³

SUPERVISE — SUPERVISION. — To supervise means to oversee for direction; to superintend; to inspect; as, to supervise the press for correction.⁴

1. Supersedeas. — Hovey v. McDonald, 109 U. S. 159. See also Williams v. Bruffy, 102 U. S. 249; Dulin v. Pacific Wood, etc., Co., 98 Cal. 304.

In Mabry v. Roas, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 773, it was said: "The writ of supersedeas is technically a writ to suspend the execution of a judgment. There must be something in the course of execution to suspend which the writ is awarded — something in fieri, but not yet finished. Its most common function is to stop the execution of a judgment at law or a decree in equity, whether interlocutory or final, and whether for money or other property, or whether the said execution be for the performance of any other act under the mandate of the court. There must be some affirmative act to be done, to prevent the doing of which the writ is awarded."

In Tyler v. Presley, 72 Cal. 291, a supersedeas was said to be "a writ issued to a ministerial officer, commanding him to supersede or desist from proceeding under another writ previously or subsequently issued to him."

"The Term Supersedeas Is a Comprehensive One. — Sometimes it is express in its commands, at others only so by implication. In the first, when the person to whom it is directed is commanded from the doing of an act therein mentioned; or, if the act has already been done, to annul it as far as possible. In the second, it only suspends without annulling acts done before its issuing, and which before were lawful. It was used in England for setting aside an erroneous judicial process, etc.; to discharge prisoners: so, if illegally arrested upon mesne or final process; so, if a privileged person. * * * Almost every writ, whether it be of error, habeas corpus, prohibition, and the like, are, in their nature and effects, to some extent writs of supersedeas, intimately connected with the appellate jurisdiction of this court, or in aid of its superintending and controlling power over the inferior courts." Ex p. Woods, 3 Ark. 538.

Used Synonymously with "Stay of Proceedings." — See Dulin v. Pacific Wood, etc., Co., 98 Cal. 304.

Statutory Supersedeas. — In Dulin v. Pacific Wood, etc., Co., 98 Cal. 306, it was said: "Section 949 of the Code of Civil Procedure declares that in cases like the present the perfecting of an appeal 'stays proceedings in the court below upon the judgment or order appealed from,' thus creating a statutory supersedeas, or 'a suspension of the power of the court below to issue an execution on the judgment or decree appealed from; or, if a writ of execution is issued, a prohibition against the execution of the writ.'"

Indiana. — In Northern Indiana R. Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 3 Ind. 12, it was said: "In our practice, a writ of error is seldom or never issued. * * * It therefore becomes necessary that the inferior court should be informed of the order of the Supreme Court, or of one of the judges, that the proceedings on error shall 'stay or supersede' execution, by some other mode than by indorsement on the writ of error, and this is usually done by the clerk of the Supreme Court sending down what is called a writ of supersedeas. This is a conditional writ, and becomes operative upon the filing, by the plaintiff in error, of a bond similar to that required in cases of appeal."

3. Superstructure. — Cass County v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 23 Neb. 353, stated under ROADBED — ROADWAY, vol. 24, p. 989.

But in Philadelphia v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 177 Pa. St. 292, under a statute declaring in explicit terms that the superstructure and water stations of railroads should be exempt from taxation, it is said: "Although the word superstructure might, in present railway-engineering phraseology, be limited to sleepers, rails, and fastenings (see superstructure, Century Dictionary), yet we have no doubt the legislature of that day, adopting the ordinary meaning of the word, intended by it the roadbed, with whatever has been constructed upon it. Except this and water stations, railroad real estate should be subject to taxation."

SUPPLY—SUPPLIES. (See also NECESSARIES, vol. 21, p. 448.)—To supply is to furnish with what is wanted; to afford or furnish a sufficiency for; to provide.⁶ A supply is defined as "that which supplies a want; sufficiency of things for use or want; especially, the food, and the like, which meets the daily necessities of an army or other large body of men."⁷

Public Lands.—The secretary of the interior and, under his direction, the commissioner of the general land office have a general "supervision of all public business relating to the public lands." Vantongeren v. Heffernan, 5 Dak. 188. See also the title STATE AND PUBLIC LANDS, vol. 26, p. 376 et seq.

1. Supplement.—Upon the meaning of the word supplement as used in Const. N. J., art. 4, § 7, par. 4, the court said: "The ordinary meaning of the word supplement doubtless is 'a supplying by addition of what is wanting.' A glance at our legislation from the time of the adoption of the constitutional provision will show that the word has constantly been used in a sense so broad as to possibly justify a claim that it has acquired thereby a special meaning broader than the ordinary one. But for the purposes of this case it is sufficient to say that the ordinary meaning of the word will, under our construction of this clause, cover every species of amendatory legislation which goes to complete the legislative scheme." Rahway Sav. Inst. v. Rahway, 53 N. J. L. 51. See generally the title STATUTES, vol. 26, pp. 591 et seq., 708.

2. Supplemental.—Loomis v. Runge, (C. C. A.) 66 Fed. Rep. 859, distinguishing "supplemental act" and "amendatory act." See also the title STATUTES, vol. 26, p. 709.

6. Supply.—Mooney v. Hough, 84 Ala. 85.

7. People v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 175 Ill. 155, quoting Webst. Dict.

Supply means that which is or can be supplied; available aggregate of things needed or demanded; an amount sufficient for a given use or purpose. Strickland v. Stiles, 107 Ga. 308.

Supplies.—In Mooney v. Hough, 84 Ala. 85, it was said: "The word supplies, noun of the verb 'to supply,' has a very large meaning."

Same—Agricultural Liens.—Supplies have been held to include money in a statute giving an agricultural lien. Strickland v. Stiles, 107 Ga. 308. For other cases construing supplies, see the titles CROPS, vol. 8, p. 301; LANDLORD AND TENANT, vol. 18, pp. 351, 352.

Same—Attachment and Liens on Vessels. (See also titles MARITIME LIENS, vol. 19, p. 1079; MASTERS OF VESSELS, vol. 20, p. 221.)—Wood furnished to a steamboat for fuel was held not to be supplies within a New York statute of 1798 allowing the attachment or arrest of vessels for debts for supplies furnished, on the ground that supplies in the act did not include "such articles as are daily consumed and constantly replaced." Johnson v. Steam-Boat Sandusky, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 512. But see under a later statute Crooke v. Slack, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 177.

Money advanced to enable a boat to prosecute her voyages has been held not to be supplies within the Missouri act giving a lien on vessels. Gibbons v. Steamboat Fanny Barker, 40 Mo. 255, the court saying: "The word supplies cannot be interpreted to mean supplies of money for all the purposes for which money may be required in the navigation of the vessel. In its ordinary acceptation, it is understood to mean those articles which a boat may find it necessary to purchase for consumption and use on the voyage."

Money loaned to pay off sailors on a steamboat has been held not to be included within the term supplies in a statute giving a preference to such debts of vessels. Steamboat P. H. White v. Levy, 10 Ark. 412.

In Lawson v. Higgins, 1 Mich. 226, it was said: "The lien for supplies furnished can only attach when the ship, boat, or vessel is actually built. If furnished when the ship, etc., is in progress of construction, the law does not create a lien, but leaves the person so furnishing supplies to his common-law remedy." And it was held accordingly that supplies did not include materials.

Same — Log and Lumber Liens. — The word supplies in the Wisconsin statute providing for a lien in favor of persons furnishing supplies to men engaged in getting out logs and timber has been held to include the board of men, even when furnished at a hotel in a city several miles from the place where they were at work. Kollock v. Parcher, 52 Wis. 393. See also Winslow v. Urquhart, 39 Wis. 260; Bradford v. Underwood Lumber Co., 80 Wis. 50; and generally the title LOGS AND LUMBER, vol. 19, p. 533 et seq.

Same — Medical Services Furnished to Railroad Employee. — In Newgass v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 56 Fed. Rep. 685, it was said: "As to the claim of the Hospital of St. Vincent of Paul for medical services and board rendered to an employee of the railroad company, who had been injured and disabled in its service, it does not seem to us to fall within the terms of the statute giving the lien, and must be disallowed. The hospital did not furnish 'supplies necessary to the operation of the railroad,' in favor of which section 2485 gives a lien."

Supplies to Paupers. — See the title POOR AND POOR LAWS, vol. 22, p. 944.

Supplies for Travelers. — Wines and liquors have been held to be supplies for travelers, within the meaning of a charter provision authorizing a corporation to sell supplies to travelers on its cars. People v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 175 Ill. 125.

Supply of Water. — In West Surrey Water Co. v. Chertsey Union, (1894) 3 Ch. 513, it was held that a local authority may, notwithstanding section 52 of the English Public Health Act, 1875, construct and use waterworks for the supply of water for its own use only in the district of a water company able and willing to supply such water. North, J., said: "Supply I understand to mean the passing of water from persons who have it to persons who want it. I do not see how it could be said that supply of water means supplying 'yourself' in the natural meaning of the words." And in Jones v. Conway, etc., Water Supply Board, (1893) 2 Ch. 603, it was held that a local authority that had power and was taking steps to supply water had supplied water within the meaning of the same act.

A statute provided that if any person supplied with water by a company negligently suffered the water to be wasted, he should be subject to a penalty. It was held where a house was let to a tenant, but the owner was liable to pay the water rate, that the owner was the person supplied with water and was under a duty to take care that the water supplied was not wasted. Brock v. Harrison, (1889) 1 Q. B. 958.

For other matters of SUBSTANTIVE LAW and EVIDENCE related to this subject, see the following titles in this work: APPRENTICES, vol. 2, p. 488; BASTARDY, vol. 3, p. 871; CONSIDERATION, vol. 6, p. 667; GUARDIAN AND WARD, vol. 15, p. 16; HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 15, p. 785; MASTER AND SERVANT, vol. 20, p. 3; PARENT AND CHILD, vol. 21, p. 1034; POOR AND POOR LAWS, vol. 22, p. 944.

I. SCOPE OF TITLE. — The obligation of one to support and maintain another may be imposed by common or statute law on persons standing in certain relations to each other, as parent and child, husband and wife, guardian and ward, etc. These legally imposed obligations are discussed elsewhere under the appropriate titles. But an obligation to support and maintain may be assumed by contract between persons not bound to each other by any of the domestic relations, or by those so bound in addition to the obligations imposed by law. It is only these contractual obligations that are considered in this title.¹

II. BETWEEN PARENT AND CHILD — 1. In General. — Where parent and child live together the relationship between them is so intimate that the law will presume that what the one may do for the other is done gratuitously; hence a claim by either for payment for support and maintenance furnished by the other must be based on an express contract.²

1. Legacies for Support and Maintenance. — As to the favor shown to legacies for support and maintenance, in protecting them from abatement, see the title ABATEMENT OF LEGACIES, vol. 1, p. 46.

If a child, after reaching its majority, lives with its parents as before, the law will presume,

2. Support of Child — a. LEGITIMATE CHILDREN. — Whether a father is legally bound to support his infant children, or whether it is only a moral duty that rests on him in this respect,¹ very slight circumstances are generally regarded as sufficient to raise an implied promise on his part to pay third persons for furnishing such support.²

Emancipation of Child. — After a child is emancipated the moral duty of the parent to support it ceases, and an obligation on his part can be shown only by showing an express contract, or a request from which a promise may be inferred.³

A Mother Who Is Guardian of Her Infant Son is liable personally, and not as guardian, on her undertaking to pay for the maintenance of such son. Such contract is not a contract of suretyship, but is an original undertaking.⁴

Effect of Adoption Proceedings. — Where an attempt to adopt a child is frustrated by the real parent, he is liable on a note given by him to pay for the support of the child while with those who attempted to adopt it.⁵

Where a Child Has Property of Its Own the parent is sometimes allowed to lay claim thereto under an implied contract accompanying the support.⁶

b. ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN. — While it has been said that the moral duty resting on a parent to maintain his illegitimate child is not sufficient consideration to support a contract on the father's part to pay for the child's maintenance,⁷ the weight of authority seems to be that such duty is a sufficient consideration;⁸ and a fortiori is such promise binding when by statute it is made his duty to support his illegitimate children.⁹

Promise in Consideration of Cohabitation. — A promise of the putative father, however, is void where it is made to facilitate a state of cohabitation between him and the mother.¹⁰ in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the relation of parent and child continues. Wall v. Wall, 69 Ill. App. 389.

Taking a Child from the Father with the father's assent but without his request, and supporting it, is not enough to fasten on the father an obligation to pay for such support. Chilcott v. Trimble, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 502. See also Duffey v. Duffey, 44 Pa. St. 399; Eitel v. Walter, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 287.

If the father of an illegitimate child consents to pay an annual sum for its support, he must thereafter continue to do so, or provide for the child at his own expense, or give distinct notice of his intention to pay such sum no longer. Cameron v. Baker, 1 C. & P. 268, 11 E. C. L. 388.

Where the Father Acknowledges or Adopts the Child as his own he is bound by his express promise to support it. In re Plaskett, 30 L. J. Ch. 606; Hook v. Pratt, 78 N. Y. 371, affirming 14 Hun (N. Y.) 396; Todd v. Weber, 95 N. Y. 181; Bunn v. Winthrop, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 329.

9. Statutory Liability. — Davis v. Herrington, 53 Ark. 5; Wallace v. Rappleye, 103 Ill. 239.

The Illinois statute imposes such liability on the father of a bastard only when the mother is an unmarried woman. Vetten v. Wallace, 39 Ill. App. 390.

10. Infancy of Father No Defense. — Where the father's duty to support is imposed by law, infancy of the father is no defense to a promise to furnish such support. Stowers v. Hollis, 83 Ky. 544.

11. Promise in Consideration of Cohabitation. — Trovinger v. M'Burney, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 253.

Forbearance and Compromise of Suit. — Where a father is under a legal duty to support his illegitimate child, forbearance by the mother to sue or the compromise of an action is a valuable consideration for his promise to support and maintain the child.¹ Such forbearance and compromise are not unlawful or immoral.²

The Surrender of a Child by the mother to the father is sufficient consideration to support his promise to maintain the child, and to give him money and the tract of land on which the father lives. And if the land has been sold at the father's death its value may be recovered by the child.³

3. Support of Parents. — Family arrangements are not uncommon by which a child, usually on a conveyance to him of the property of the parent, agrees to furnish the latter with support and maintenance during the remainder of his life. Such arrangements are not per se unreasonable or indicative of fraud or undue influence.⁴ And where a statute creates a liability on the part of children to support their indigent parents, such liability is a sufficient consideration to support a bond given to the overseers of the poor to defray the necessary expenses of such support.⁵

When Parent Has Means. — If a parent lives apart from his child and has independent means of support, but subsequently removes to the house of a son, who cares for him at great expense, an implied contract to pay for such support may be established by proof of facts and circumstances showing that it was the intention of the parties that payment should be made.⁶

Promise to Third Person. — A promise to support a parent is enforceable though made to a third person instead of the parent.⁷

III. OTHER RELATIONS — 1. In General. — In other relations than that of parent and child, such as son-in-law, mother-in-law, brother, and stepfather, the law has regarded the relationship as so close that the presumption of gratuitous support is entertained, and an express contract must be shown to maintain an action for such support.⁸

As to the general subject of forbearance to sue as a consideration for a promise, see the title CONSIDERATION, vol. 6, p. 748.

It has even been held that the liability of a father to be sued for maintenance is sufficient consideration to support an agreement by him to convey land to the child. Allen v. Davison, 16 Ind. 416.

4. Support of Parents. — Scott v. Davis, 117 Ind. 232; Van Donge v. Van Donge, 23 Mich. 321; Bogie v. Bogie, 41 Wis. 209.

Where the true consideration for a deed is an agreement to pay the grantor's debts and to board and care for him and his wife during their lives, the recital of a money consideration is not inconsistent, since the matter of board and care for the grantors is an additional consideration and not a contrary one. Rankin v. Wallace, (Ky. 1890) 14 S. W. Rep. 79.

Value of Property Conveyed. — Where the land conveyed by the parents to the child is inadequate to accomplish the object of the contract, the parents are supposed to add to their support as far as possible by their own exertions. In general, the undertaking by one to support and take care of another is to be understood according to the varied circumstances of the parties. Keltner v. Keltner, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 40; Bull v. McCrea, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 422.

2. Guardian and Ward. — Being under no previous obligation to support and educate his ward at his own expense, a promise by a guardian to do so is without consideration and not binding on him.¹

IV. CONTRACT PERSONAL TO OBLIGOR. — An agreement to furnish another with a home and to take care of him, and assist him to live in a comfortable manner, is personal to the obligor and cannot be shifted to a third person without the consent or against the will of the obligee.²

V. PARTY IN INTEREST MAY SUE. — Where the contract is to furnish support and maintenance to a third person not party to the contract, such third person may generally, as the party beneficially interested, bring an action in his own name to enforce such contract.³

VI. DURATION OF CONTRACT. — Where a contract for the support of a child fixes no time for its termination, and is not determined by the parties, the law will presume that it continues to run until the child arrives at majority. Such contract is therefore entire, and not one from year to year.⁴ But where the contract is between an overseer of the poor and one who undertakes to support a pauper for no definite period, either party is at liberty to terminate the arrangement at the end of a year or other period deemed by construction to be within the meaning and intent of the contract.⁵

VII. RIGHTS OF CREDITORS. — Where one conveys his entire property to another on condition that the grantee will support the grantor during life, such conveyance is fraudulent and void as to existing creditors unless it can be shown that the grantee has, in addition to the support and maintenance promised, paid full value for the property so conveyed.⁶

VIII. SETTING ASIDE CONVEYANCE. — Where one conveys his real estate to another in return for a promise of support and maintenance, and afterwards refuses or fails to furnish such support, a court of equity will grant relief by setting aside the deed of conveyance and reinvesting the grantor with the title on the principles governing rescission in other cases.⁷

A widow, with a child, cannot make a contract with her husband for the support of her child by a former husband that will bind the child. She has no power thus to dispose of the child's property. Gerdes v. Weiser, 54 Iowa 591, 37 Am. Rep. 229.

1. Guardian and Ward. — Armstrong v. Walkup, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 372. See the title GUARDIAN AND WARD, vol. 15, p. 78.

Under the Kentucky statute the personal estate of an infant may be applied by the guardian in support of the infant. "But neither the ward nor his real estate shall be liable for any such disbursement." Under the act the father cannot make a contract with a third person for the support of his minor child to be paid out of the real estate of such child. Such contract imposes a debt upon the father and not upon the child. Cox v. Storts, 14 Bush (Ky.) 502.

2. Contract Personal to Obligor. — Divan v. Loomis, 68 Wis. 150.

A covenant of a son to support his sister, made on a conveyance of land by the father to the son, is personal and does not give the sister a right in the land nor charge her maintenance on it, and her rights cannot be enforced by a writ of ejectment. Harkins v. Doran, (Pa. 1888) 15 Atl. Rep. 928.

3. Party in Interest May Sue. — Allen v. Davison, 16 Ind. 416; Clarke v. McFarland, 5 Dana (Ky.) 45; Todd v. Weber, 95 N. Y. 181. See also State v. Baker, 8 Md. 44. See the title CONSIDERATION, vol. 6, p. 667, and 15 ENCYC. OF PL. AND PR. 456, title PARTIES TO ACTIONS.

Where land is given to secure the support of the daughter, and a mortgage is given to insure performance by the grantee, such mortgage may not be released by the mother, but may be enforced by the daughter in a proper action. Henderson v. McDonald, 84 Ind. 149.

It has been held that where property is conveyed to another in consideration of support, cancellation of the deed on failure to perform by the grantee is not the proper remedy, but that an action should be brought on the undertaking. Gardner v. Knight, 124 Ala. 273; Campbell v. Potter, 147 Ill. 576.

IX. DAMAGES. — Where there has been a breach of the contract to support and maintain, if the plaintiff may treat the contract as absolutely and finally broken, and elects to do so, the damages are assessed as of a total breach of an entire contract. Such damages are not subsequent or prospective, and the uncertainty in the duration of a life has not, since the adoption of the mortality tables, been regarded as a reason why full relief should not be afforded for a failure to perform a contract which by its terms was to continue during life.¹

X. STATUTE OF FRAUDS. — A promise to pay for support furnished an emancipated son is a promise to pay for the debt of another and must be in writing or it is void under the statute of frauds.² But the promise to pay for the support and education of children whose death within a year is a contingency is one which may be performed within a year and is moreover original and not collateral, and for both reasons is not within the statute of frauds.³

SUPPORTS. — See note 4.

SUPPOSE. — The term "suppose" is an equivalent of "believe."⁵

SUPPOSITION. — See note 6.

SUPPRESS. (See also PROHIBIT — PROHIBITION, vol. 23, p. 192; REGULATE — REGULATING — REGULATION, vol. 24, p. 243, and the references there given.) — To suppress is to put a stop to when actually existing; to prevent; never, therefore, to license or sanction.⁷

1. Damages. — Shover v. Myrick, 4 Ind. App. 7; Amos v. Oakley, 131 Mass. 413; Parker v. Russell, 133 Mass. 74; Shaffer v. Lee, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 412; Schell v. Plumb, 55 N. Y. 592; Carpenter v. Carpenter, 66 Hun (N. Y.) 177.

In allowing damages for breach of a contract of support, it has been held that the value of the services or probable earnings of the covenantee should be taken into consideration and deducted from the damages. Morrison v. McAtee, 23 Oregon 530.

Damages for a breach of contract to furnish support to a person "when he is sober and well-behaved" are to be assessed to the date of the writ, on the principle that the damages sustained after the date of the writ arise from a new breach or a new cause of action. Fay v. Guynon, 131 Mass. 31.

2. Statute of Frauds. — Loomis v. Newhall, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 159. But see M'Lees v. Hale, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 426. See generally the title VERBAL AGREEMENTS (STATUTE OF FRAUDS).

3. EHicott v. Turner, 4 Md. 476.

4. Supports. — The supports of a bridge are the abutments, piers, and trestles on which the stringpieces rest from beneath; and the crosspieces under the stringpieces and to which they are bolted are not the supports. Abbott v. Wolcott, 38 Vt. 666.

5. Suppose. — See BELIEF — BELIEVE, vol. 3, p. 914.

Suppose and Promise Distinguished. — See Fife v. Com., 29 Pa. St. 436.

Supposed — Understood. — In Cole v. Fowler, 68 Conn. 450, it was said: "It was supposed, as the finding phrases it — which word, we presume, is used as equivalent to 'understood' — by both partners that these overdrafts would be paid into the firm, and they were treated as cash."

Supposed Codicil. — In Smith v. Henline, 174 Ill. 200, it was said: "The first instruction given for the appellees is criticised because it uses the expressions 'alleged execution of the codicil' and 'supposed codicil.' It is said that the use of the words 'alleged' and 'supposed' was equivalent to telling the jury that the codicil was not the real codicil of the testator. We do not think so."

Supposed Bounds or Lines. — The boundaries of a tract of land were described as follows: "Beginning at the mouth of a gut, supposed to be Isaac Jordan's bounds, running along his supposed line south 300 poles in the pocosin, to or near the head of Middle or Speller's creek," etc. In construing this description the court said: "The call itself, the 'supposed bounds' and the 'supposed line' of Isaac Jordan, clearly indicates that there was then no established and known line." Mizell v. Simmons, 79 N. Car. 187.

6. Supposition — Instruction. — In Yarbrough v. State, 105 Ala. 43, it was said: "The use of the word supposition in a charge of itself has a tendency to excite an imaginative or speculative inquiry, and is not permissible unless the context shows that it is a supposition or hypothesis reasonably arising from or suggested by the facts in evidence."

Same — Hypothesis. — The trial court instructed the jury that if the evidence, though in part circumstantial, was consistent with the supposition that the defendant was guilty, and inconsistent with the supposition that he was innocent, they should find him guilty. In sustaining this instruction, the appellate court said: "Defendant takes exception to the use of the words supposition and 'assumption,' as used in the foregoing instruction. These words, used as they were in the instruction, are synonymous with 'hypothesis,' and mean primarily, as defined by Webster, 'what is not known to be true, or not proved.'" State v. Harras, 25 Wash. 416.

7. Suppress. — Schwuchow v. Chicago, 68 Ill. 448; Ogden v. Madison, 111 Wis. 413. See also Wong v. Astoria, 13 Oregon 538.

Authority to suppress is not authority to

To suppress anything is to put a stop to it when actually existing, and does not extend to preventing it by suppressing what may lead to it. Chelsea v. King, 17 C. B. N. S. 625, 112 E. C. L. 625.

Means of Suppression. — Where power to suppress is conferred the power to adopt means for the suppression follows by necessary implication. Shreveport v. Roos, 35 La. Ann. 1010; Ogden v. Madison, 111 Wis. 413.

1. Suppressio Veri. (See generally the title FRAUD AND DECEIT, vol. 14, p. 12.) — In Juzan v. Toulmin, 9 Ala. 684, it was said: "Nearly allied to the fraud which is perpetuated by suggestio falsi is that which is inferable from suppressio veri. To constitute the latter, there must be a suppression of facts which one party is under a legal or equitable obligation to communicate and in respect to which he cannot be innocently silent, because the other has a right not merely in foro conscientie, but juris et de jure, to know." See also Terrell v. Kirksey, 14 Ala. 212; Torrey v. Buck, 2 N. J. Eq. 366.

2. Supreme Court. — See Webster v. State, 43 Ohio St. 699.

Supreme in Sense of Highest. — In Koonce v. Doolittle, 48 W. Va. 592, it was said: "The errors of this court, in absence of a federal question, are beyond the pale of correction by any human tribunal, as the title of this court indicates, being the Supreme Court of Appeals; the word supreme meaning highest in the sense of final or last resort."

In State v. Atherton, 19 Nev. 342, it was said: "The name Supreme Court, for instance, indicates that it is a court of the highest authority in the state, and so it is in this state; yet in New York this name is given to courts possessing a similar jurisdiction to that given to the District Courts in this state, and the name 'Court of Appeals' is given to the highest court. In Texas the name 'Court of Appeals' is given to a court having appellate jurisdiction in criminal cases, and the name Supreme Court applied to the court having appellate jurisdiction in civil cases."

3. Supreme Law of the Land. — In Matter of Rafferty, 1 Wash. 382, it was held that a provision in the Constitution of Washington that "the Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land" related only to those matters wherein the general government assumed and controlled the individual states, and that the requirement of a presentment by a grand jury was not one of them.

I. DEFINITION AND NATURE. — The Contract of Suretyship has been defined as a contract whereby one person engages to be answerable for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another.¹

A Surety is a person who, being liable to pay a debt or perform an obligation, is entitled, if it is enforced against him, to be indemnified by some other person, who ought himself to have made payment or performed before the surety was compelled to do so.²

General Nature. — Suretyship is an accessory contract, and presupposes the existence of a principal obligation.³ The surety is equally bound with his principal as original promisor. He is a debtor from the beginning, and must see that the debt is paid.⁴ Suretyship has been said also to be a consensual contract as between the creditor and the surety,⁵ but it would seem that the Party to Original Promise and Consideration. — When the agreement is an original undertaking on the part of the promisor in which he is directly interested and benefited, he cannot be a surety. Wimberly v. Windham, 104 Ala. 409, 53 Am. St. Rep. 70; Salomon v. Reese, 34 Cal. 28; Maher v. Willson, (Supm. Ct. Gen. T.) 3 N. Y. Supp. 80; Perkins v. Goodman, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 218.

contract may at least come into existence by operation of law and without the knowledge or consent of the creditor.¹

Distinguished from Guaranty. — The terms "suretyship" and "guaranty" are often confounded, from the fact that the guarantor is, in common acceptance, a surety for another. The true distinction seems to be that a surety is in the first instance answerable for the debt for which he makes himself responsible, while a guarantor is only liable where default is made by the party whose undertaking is guaranteed.²

Distinguished from Indorsement. — The rules governing the relationship of principal and surety are not, generally speaking, applicable to indorsers.³ The liability of an ordinary indorser is greater than that of a surety. The latter becomes bound simply for the accommodation of his principal, and receives no consideration for the favor he bestows. He is bound only to the same extent as his principal, and the latter's defense is his defense. But with the indorser it is different. He usually receives a consideration for his promise, and although the note he indorses be invalid he may nevertheless be bound.⁴

II. CONTRACT OF SURETYSHIP AND ITS ELEMENTS — 1. Creation — a. BY EXPRESS AGREEMENT GENERALLY. — A surety may become such by an express contract which requires the elements necessary in any other contract.⁵

One Instrument Binding Principal and Surety. — A surety is usually bound with his principal by the same instrument, executed at the same time and upon the same consideration.⁶

No Particular Form of Words Essential. — The relation may be established by any form of words which expresses such intention,⁷ and while the addition of the Writing has been held essential to a contract of suretyship. Ingersoll v. Baker, 41 Mich. 48; Bonine v. Denniston, 41 Mich. 292. See also the title VERBAL AGREEMENTS (STATUTE OF FRAUDS). This seems unsound as a general proposition, since a surety, unlike a guarantor, is primarily bound. See the title GUARANTY, vol. 14, p. 1130.

When Liability Commences. (See also infra, this section, Execution.) — Where the principal in a promissory note deposits and transfers to the creditor as collateral security for the payment of the note certain personal property, and as further and additional security other parties sign the note as sureties, the liability of such other sureties becomes fixed at the time the collateral security is exhausted. Dussol v. Bruguere, 50 Cal. 456.

words "principal" and "surety" to their respective signatures may indicate the capacity in which the instrument was executed, the fact of suretyship generally is matter, in pais and may be explained by parol.¹

b. BY EXECUTION OF JOINT OBLIGATION. — Where several persons join in executing a bond or other obligation, they become sureties for each other.²

c. BY PARTNER'S RETIREMENT FROM FIRM. — Upon the retirement of a member of a firm he becomes a surety of the other partners who assume the firm's debts.³

d. BY ASSUMPTION OF MORTGAGE. — Where the grantee in a conveyance of land agrees to assume and discharge a mortgage existing on the land at the time of the execution of the deed as part payment of the purchase money, such grantee becomes the principal debtor for the payment of the incumbrance, and the grantor becomes the surety,⁴ and this rule applies to subsequent purchasers so long as the incumbrance subsists.⁵

e. BY MORTGAGE OR PLEDGE TO SECURE ANOTHER'S DEBT — (1) Generally. — When property of any kind is pledged or mortgaged by the owner to secure the debt, default, or miscarriage of another person, such property occupies the position of a surety.⁶

But see Small v. Older, 57 Iowa 326, where it was held, where two persons gave their joint note for borrowed money, and each received one-half of the consideration, it was not a case of suretyship for each other, but they were liable as principals, each for the whole debt.

2. Relationship May Be Shown by Parol. — While some courts have held that the instruction of parol evidence to prove the relation of suretyship between the parties to a written contract is inadmissible as tending to vary the terms of the writing,³ the better doctrine is that suretyship is a fact collateral

Where one borrows for the use of another and both mortgage their respective lands for the debt, the borrower's land must be sold first under a decree of foreclosure, but he will be entitled to reimbursement from the land of the party who received the loan. Canaday v. Boliver, 25 S. Car. 547.

In Cotton v. Atlas Nat. Bank, 145 Mass. 43, it was held that where a party transferred collaterals to secure the note of another in bank, the pledgor's business being managed by his son, although the note was renewed from time to time and the last renewal was made after the death of the pledgor, such collaterals still remained pledged as security for the note.

In Casey v. Gibbons, 136 Cal. 368, it was held that a mother, as between herself and the mortgagee, was a principal debtor and not a surety for her son where she executed her individual note, which on its face treated her as principal, and simultaneously gave a mortgage on her property to secure a loan made to her son.

In England, where a wife mortgaged her property to indemnify a surety of her husband, the property thus mortgaged was treated in all respects as a surety. Hodgson v. Hodgson, 2 Keen 704.

The General Rule to Determine Whether the Wife Is a Surety as to the mortgaged property only, or whether she is personally liable as a principal, has been stated to be whether she does not or does share in the consideration. Siebert v. Queanel, 65 Minn. 107, 60 Am. St. Rep. 441. See also Vogel v. Lechner, 102 Ind. 55; McFillen v. Hoffman, 35 N. J. Eq. 364; Dibble v. Richardson, 171 N. Y. 131; Dickinson v. Codwise, 1 Sandf. A Married Woman May Become Personally Liable for the debt of her husband secured by bond or note and by a mortgage on her separate property, so that a deficiency judgment can be rendered on the mortgage against her, when she joins in the bond or note and expressly charges her separate property, McKeon v. Hagan, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 65; or where she joins in the note and is estopped to assert her status as surety, Alexander v. Bouton, 55 Cal. 15. See also the title SEPARATE PROPERTY OF MARRIED WOMEN, vol. 25, p. 423. But it seems a married woman can never be liable to a deficiency judgment unless she signs the bond or note as well as the mortgage. Exchange Nat. Bank v. Wolverton, 11 Wash. 108. See also the title FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGES, 9 ENCYC. OF PL. AND PR. 485.

Notice of Relation to Mortgage. — In Von Hemert v. Taylor, 73 Minn. 339, it was held that where a wife, to secure a debt of the husband, joins with him in executing a mortgage on land where the title of record is in the husband, but the wife has an equitable ownership of an undivided interest therein, she is surety to the extent of her interest. But the mortgagee is not charged with sufficient notice of such interest by the mere fact that the wife joined in the covenant of seisin as to justify the wife in asserting the rights of a surety where the mortgagee extended the time of payment.

When the Word "Principal" Is Added to the Signature the surety is estopped to assert that he was a surety merely.²

Knowledge of Creditor. — Where the instrument does not show the suretyship on its face, knowledge of the suretyship must be brought home to the creditor to entitle the surety to the rights and privileges of his position.³

3. Change in Status by Subsequent Transaction. — The relation as between principal and surety may be changed, the surety becoming the principal and the principal the surety. This is effected by the surety for a valuable consideration agreeing to pay the joint indebtedness,⁴ or by subsequent dealings between himself and the creditor.⁵ By the voluntary acts of a guarantor he may assume the position of a surety.⁶ Again, the surety may waive his rights as such so far as the interpretation and enforcement of the contract of surety are concerned.⁷ But the substitution of a new security, such as a bond, for the security on which a party became originally bound as surety, does not change the character of his relation from a surety to that of a principal.⁸

No Merger by Judgment. — The relationship between principal and surety is not affected by a judgment obtained against them jointly; there is no merger.⁹

4. Who May Become Sureties — a. INSANE PERSONS. — A person bereft of reason and understanding who enters into a contract of suretyship cannot be held liable thereon, even though the person with whom he contracts had no knowledge that the surety's mind was unsound, and practiced no fraud or imposition upon him.¹⁰

The provisions of the Act of Congress, approved August 13, 1894, 2 Supp. Rev. Stat. U. S., (1892-96), § 1, p. 237, relative to the authority of surety companies to transact business, are construed to apply to all parts of the United States, and to all courts of the United States, as far as their judicial proceedings are concerned, in the territories as well as the states. Ranney-Alton Mercantile Co. v. Mineral Belt Constr. Co., 2 Ind. Ter. 134.

In Texas it is not necessary to state, in a sequestration bond signed by a surety company, that the corporation is authorized to do business in the state. Clopton v. Goodbar, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 55 S. W. Rep. 972.

is located, a foreign surety company may become surety on bonds or undertakings, and courts may accept it without further justification; but this authority is merely permissive, and not mandatory, and does not deprive courts of the power, as a condition of acceptance and approval, to require that such company shall further justify, if its sufficiency is excepted to.¹

5. Offer and Acceptance. — A contract of suretyship, like any other contract, requires the meeting of the minds of the parties. Consequently an offer to become a surety is not binding until acceptance by the person to whom it is made, and is revocable until that time. But the acceptance may be given at any time before the offer is withdrawn, and it may be either express or implied, or, under certain circumstances, may be manifested by silence or inaction.²

6. Execution — a. GENERALLY. — The execution of a document includes its signing and delivery, and, where necessary, sealing as well.³

b. SIGNATURE — (1) Generally — Place of Signature. — The obligation of the parties does not depend upon the place or order of the signatures to the contract, and one who signs above another may be in fact the surety to him who signs below, if such was the intention of all the parties.⁴

Signature as Waiver of Defects. — Sureties signing a bond impliedly waive defects in the instrument.⁵

(2) Failure of Principal to Sign. — A surety may voluntarily bind himself for the debt or default of another without joining with him in the same instrument the person for whom he becomes surety.⁶ Consequently it has been held that a surety's liability is not affected by the principal's failure to sign a recognizance bond,¹ replevin bond,² school treasurer's bond,³ town tax collector's bond,⁴ bond of indemnity,⁵ attachment bond⁶ or bond to prevent attachment,⁷ appeal bond,⁸ constable's bond,⁹ or bond to perform the conditions and performance of a lease.¹⁰

Where Principal Named in Instrument Fails to Sign.—There is much conflict of authority as to whether a surety is bound when the principal who is named in the instrument fails to sign it.¹¹ The general rule is that where an instrument is drawn by which one person is to be bound as the principal obligor, and another is bound as surety, wherein he undertakes that his principal shall faithfully discharge the terms of the obligation therein assumed by him, the surety cannot be held liable upon such contract if it be not signed by the principal, unless the surety consents to its delivery in its incomplete and defective condition.¹² But it has been held that where a bond is conditioned for the faithful performance of official duty, that is, is an official bond, the principal being by law bound to perform his duty irrespective of the bond, the engagement of the surety is collateral and he is bound if he executes and delivers the instrument without the signature of the principal, and the bond enters into a guaranty for the fulfilment of that obligation cannot avoid his obligation because the principal does not sign the bond with him. Cockrill v. Davie, 14 Mont. 131.

2. Replevin Bond.—Matter of Cahill, 48 Mich. 616. But see Green v. Kindy, 43 Mich. 279, where it was held that if the principal's name be signed to a forthcoming bond in replevin without his knowledge or consent, the sureties will not be bound thereby unless it clearly appears that they signed with full knowledge of the facts, and that the bond would be delivered as executed.

In Johnson v. Johnson, 31 Ohio St. 131, it was held that in respect to appeals from the common pleas to the district court, where the statute provides that "the party desirous of appealing shall give an undertaking with one or more sufficient sureties, etc.," the words "with sureties" is held to mean by sureties, and that on such an appeal bond the surety may be held without the signature of the principal.

may be enforced as a common-law bond.¹ Other jurisdictions hold that the completeness of the bond depends, stricti juris, simply upon whether it was given, rather than signed, by the principal.² Some authorities, however, hold in such a case a delivery without the principal's signature a delivery in escrow only, and the surety not bound where the redelivery was without authority.³

(3) Signature of Agent. — An agent to sign a contract of suretyship must be properly authorized.⁴ In Kentucky the authority by statute must be in writing.⁵ Where the signature of the principal, a corporation, is affixed by an agent to a bond to dissolve an attachment without authority, the sureties on the contract are not bound.⁶

c. DELIVERY — (1) Generally. — When the investment evidencing the contract of the surety is under seal⁷ or is negotiable,⁸ delivery is essential to its validity, and the surety is not bound in the absence of a valid delivery.⁹

(2) Delivery upon Condition. — When a surety's signature is given on some condition which is not fulfilled, the question of his liability depends on the circumstances of the case. These circumstances are generally the character of the instrument itself, whether a bond under seal, a negotiable instrument, or an ordinary contract,¹⁰ and the relation to the contract of the person to whom the conditional delivery is made.¹¹

(3) Instrument Containing Blanks. — When the instrument is signed by the surety and delivered to the principal or the obligee with blanks left for the insertion of some material matter, the question of the liability of the surety on the completed instrument depends on questions fully discussed in other portions of this work.¹

7. Construction — a. GENERALLY. — A surety is entitled to stand upon the letter of his contract, and his undertaking is to be construed strictly in his favor and is not to be extended by implication or inference beyond the fair scope of its terms.² But there are conflicting cases, and it is sometimes held that the contract of a surety is to be taken as strongly against him as a delivery to a stranger. See the title Escrow, vol. 11, pp. 333, 337. Where the delivery is to a party to a contract, there is a difference of opinion as to its effect.

Sealed Instrument Delivered to Obligor or Agent. — A surety on a sealed instrument may not plead as a defense that he signed and delivered the instrument to the obligee or to his agent on condition of procuring other sureties, which the obligee failed to do. Blume v. Bowman, 2 Ired. L. (24 N. Car.) 338. See also the title Escrow, vol. 11, pp. 337, 339. But the surety may maintain an action for damages against the obligee. Hudspeth v. Tyler, 108 Ky. 520.

Negotiable Instrument Delivered to Obligor or Agent. — With respect to negotiable instruments the rule is sometimes stated to be otherwise. See the title BILLS AND NOTES, vol. 4, p. 204 et seq., and p. 151.

Sealed Instrument Delivered to Principal. — The rule is unsettled as to the effect of a surety's delivering the instrument to his principal on condition of procuring other sureties, but the weight of authority seems to be that breach of such condition constitutes no defense to the surety unless the form of the instrument puts the obligee on notice, or he has actual notice. See the title Escrow, vol. 11, p. 340.

Negotiable Instrument Delivered to Principal. — The same rule very generally obtains as to negotiable instruments. See the title BILLS AND NOTES, vol. 4, p. 206.

5. Waiver of Defense. — Where a surety, with knowledge of the fraudulent representations of the maker and payee in procuring his signature to a note, asks and obtains further time in which to pay it, he thereby waives the fraud, whether he had knowledge that fraud was a defense in law or not. or surety, or some detriment to the creditor.¹ It is an elementary principle that where a person contemporaneously becomes surety for the debt, or for the performance of a duty of a third person, the consideration is the favor the surety receives from a compliance with his express or implied request that credit should be given to the principal.² But, unless the promise be contemporaneous with the original debt and constitute the inducement thereto,³ it is not binding, for the guaranty of a debt already contracted, without a new consideration, is of no force.⁴ An extension of time for the payment of Official Bonds — Approval After Filing and Waiver of Forfeiture Sufficient Consideration.—State v. Paxton, (Neb. 1902) 90 N. W. Rep. 983.

Failure of Consideration.—One cannot as surety be bound for a debt which is not due by reason of failure of consideration against the principal. Adams v. Cuny, 15 La. Ann. 485.

But it has been held that want or failure of consideration on the original contract on which a person is surety is no defense as against a suit for contribution by a cosurety who has paid. See Cave v. Burns, 6 Ala. 780 (where evidence offered to show the failure of consideration on the original note was excluded, a judgment having been obtained on the note which one surety had been compelled to pay); Faurot v. Gates, 86 Wis. 575 (where in a case between guarantors of a renewal note, proof of want of consideration in the original note was held to have been properly rejected).

These cases seem to announce a principle (not, perhaps, required in either case by the facts before the court) which in effect allows recovery for a voluntary payment. See the titles CONTRIBUTION AND EXONERATION, vol. 7, p. 336; PAYMENT, vol. 22, p. 609.

a debt,¹ a renewal of a note for the same debt,² or forbearance by the creditor to enforce legal rights,³ are sufficient considerations for a contract of suretyship.

11. Termination of Relationship — a. ON NOTICE. — A surety who has signed a contract of suretyship cannot ordinarily, and before the breach of the contract, by giving notice, terminate his suretyship or escape future liability for his principal, unless a stipulation to that effect appears in the contract.⁴ But it has been held that a surety may revoke his principal's authority at any time before the obligation is delivered.⁵

b. ON DEFAULT OF PRINCIPAL. — When the principal has made such a default as constitutes a breach of his contract, the surety may require its determination and confine his indebtedness to the damages then recoverable.⁶

c. EFFECT OF DEATH OF SURETY. — Whether and to what extent the engagement of a surety is enforceable against his estate after his death, and the effect of the contract as being joint or joint and several in form, have been considered elsewhere.⁷

12. Estoppel of Surety. — The recitals in a bond estop both principal and surety to deny any fact recited therein.⁸ Sureties on a judicial bond are estopped from denying the jurisdiction of the court in which the bond was entered.⁹ Signing as surety a bond given by a corporation estops the surety from denying either the existence of the corporation¹⁰ or its authority to make the bond.¹¹

13. Particular Statutory Requirements — a. GENERALLY. — Statutes frequently make provision for the form and sufficiency of statutory and official bonds. The general nature and effect of these provisions have been discussed elsewhere in this work.¹² should conform substantially to statutory requirements in respect to the number of sureties required on the bond.¹ This condition, however, may be waived by the surety.² In Ohio sureties on appeal bonds who are sufficient in other respects are not required to be residents of the county where the undertaking is to be given.³

d. APPROVAL OF OFFICIAL BONDS. — The settled rule, in the absence of statutory provision, is that failure of the proper officers to approve an official bond will not invalidate it nor release the sureties from their liability thereon;⁴ the approval of a statutory bond not being, primarily, for the benefit of the principal obligor or the sureties so much as the protection of the obligee.⁵

The fact that a bond has not been approved in accordance with law may be cured by subsequent legislation.⁶

e. TIME OF GIVING BOND PRESCRIBED. — The sureties on an official bond given after the time prescribed by statute are liable for the defaults of the officer continuing in office after the giving of such bond,⁷ notwithstanding the statute also declares that on failure to file the bond the office shall be declared vacant.⁸ Likewise the sureties are held to be liable in jurisdictions

III. RIGHTS AND REMEDIES AS BETWEEN SURETY AND CREDITOR OR THIRD PERSON — 1. Liabilities of Surety — a. AS DEPENDENT ON CONSTRUCTION OF CONTRACT — (1) Rules of Construction. — The rules governing the construction of the obligation of a surety are not different from those which are applicable in the interpretation of other written agreements; and courts may resort to the same aids, and will invoke the canons of interpretation, which apply to other contracts.² The terms used are to have a reasonable interpretation, according to the intent of the parties, as disclosed by the instrument read in the light of surrounding circumstances, and the purposes for which it was made.³ Where the terms of the undertaking are ambiguous, the courts will look to the recitals, the subject-matter, and the surrounding circumstances, and therefrom determine its scope and object;⁴ and when the terms will admit of more senses than one, the promise is to be construed in that sense in which the promisor

Contra. — But it has been held that where a statute prescribes that an officer shall hold until his successor is elected and qualified, and requires him to qualify within a specified time, and that on his failure to do so the office shall be declared vacant, such statute is mandatory and not directory, and that delivery of a bond after such time is ineffectual to give the bond validity, as the officer remains in office and discharges the functions by virtue of his first election. *Archer v. believed the other party to have accepted it.¹ Where the undertaking is general, it is restrained, and its obligatory force limited, within the recitals.² When reference is made by the undertaking of the surety to a contract between the principal and obligee, they are to be construed together, but the surety is not liable for undertakings in the contract not referred to in the bond.³ The rules and regulations of a corporation existing at the time of the execution of a bond of an officer do not become terms and conditions thereof, unless such an intention be expressed on the face of the bond.⁴

(2) Rules of Application. — The foregoing are rules of construction and not of application. (3) Contracts of Surety Companies. — The rules of construction and application of suretyship contracts above set out do not refer to contracts where the surety receives compensation and the suretyship is in the line of its regular business.¹ Such contracts resemble insurance contracts, and are construed upon the same general principles as insurance policies, that is, most strongly against the surety, and most favorably to their general intent and essential purpose.² This rule cannot be availed of to refine away terms of a contract expressed with sufficient clearness to convey the plain meaning of the parties, and embodying requirements compliance with which is made the condition to liability thereon.³ If the bond is fairly and reasonably susceptible of two constructions, one unfavorable and the other favorable to the surety, the former, if consistent with the objects for which the bond was given, must be adopted.⁴

b. *DURATION OF LIABILITY.*⁵ — A surety on a bond is liable for the defaults of the principal only from the time the bond is given unless it is retrospective in terms.⁶ The liability continues during the time mentioned in the bond,⁷ or during the term of the agency for the faithful performance of which the bond is given.⁸ When the bond recites that the principal will discharge the duties of the office "during the time he holds the said appointment, and until he is relieved therefrom," the liability of the surety does not cease before the revocation of the appointment.⁹

c. EXTENT AND NATURE OF LIABILITY — (1) Joint and Several. — The Principles of Law and Statutory Provisions governing the liability of obligors on joint, and joint and several, obligations, apply to such as are executed by sureties.¹⁰

Where the Surety Signed "Surety, 90 Days from Date," the liability of surety was limited to that term. Ulmer v. Reed, 11 Me. 293.

Surety by Mortgage — No Personal Liability. — When a mortgage given by a surety to secure another's debt expressly provides that there shall be no "personal cost or liability," the surety is not at all personally liable. Van Orden v. Durham, 35 Cal. 136. See also New Orleans Canal, etc., Co. v. Hagan, 1 La. Ann. 66.

When a Note Is Signed to Enable a Principal to Discount It, and made payable to a bank or order, but not discounted at the bank, the surety is liable on the note to a person who advances money on it, and subsequent transferees. *Ward v. Signing as "Surety." — Where two persons sign an obligation for the payment of money, and it is expressed in it that one signs as surety, and he annexes to his signature the word "surety," still both are bound jointly. Riley v. Jarvis, 43 W. Va. 43.

Bond for Customs Duties. — Obligors on a joint and several bond given for the duties at the customhouse, as between them and the United States, are deemed principal debtors. U. S. v. Cushman, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 426.

Bond for Funds Loaned by Order of Court. — On bond being given by commissioners appointed by the court to loan funds collected for the court, the bond given by the commissioners and their sureties being joint, all the obligors

While a court of equity, in the case of principals, will ordinarily presume that a contract, in form joint, was intended to be joint and several, in the case of a surety nothing will be presumed beyond what the positive facts substantiate, and if the contract is in form joint, it will not be presumed to have been joint and several unless upon distinct and satisfactory proofs to that effect.¹

(2) Penalty of Bond. — A surety is not liable beyond the penalty of his bond.² When a surety completes a contract at a loss greater than the penalty on his bond to a creditor who has advanced money to the contractor, he is nevertheless liable on such bond.³

Penalty or Liquidated Damages. — The law ordinarily regards a general sum stated in a bond as a penalty, and will allow only a recovery of the damages actually sustained. Prima facie, the sum stated is a mere penalty.⁴

(3) Interest — From Time of Demand. — It is generally held that a surety is not liable for interest from the date of the actual default by the principal, but from the time when demand for payment has been made on the surety,⁵ and the interest is computed to the date of the execution.⁶

Beyond Penal Sum of Bond. — The liability for interest does not ordinarily extend beyond the penal sum of the bond,⁷ unless the surety has in some way resisted or obstructed the recovery of the claim against him.⁸ Interest cannot be recovered on the penalty of the bond when a statute limits recovery to judgment for the penalty with costs of suit.⁹

are liable as principals to the plaintiff, but as between themselves the commissioner who received and used part of the fund is liable primarily, the co-commissioner secondly, and the sureties thirdly. Brooks v. Miller, 29 W. Va. 499.

Judgment on a Joint Bond. — When the liability is a joint one, and the parties have been jointly sued, and have jointly defended, a judgment against one of them which takes no notice whatever of the other is erroneous. Smith v. State, 12 Neb. 309.

Volume XXVII.

On Partial Payments Being Made by Sureties no interest will be allowed during the interval between the payment and the suing out of the writ, but interest will be allowed to the creditor on the balance from the commencement of the suit.¹

(4) Costs. — A general or indefinite suretyship extends to all the accessories of the principal obligation, and even to costs of suit.² A surety has been held liable for costs of an action against the principal on account-render, on a bond given to secure a balance that might be found due from the principal, though the surety was not a party to that action.³

(5) Attorney's Fees. — When a note provides for the payment of attorney's fees, the surety is liable for such fees incurred in a suit on the note.⁴

(6) Usury. — A surety on a note is a borrower within the meaning of the usury laws.⁵ Usury will not avoid a contract as to a surety beyond the extent to which it is vitiated as to the principal, and when the effect of usury is not to vitiate the entire contract but only to the extent of the usury, the surety is liable accordingly.⁶ A surety is bound although at the time a note is executed the principal secretly agrees with the creditor to pay, and afterwards does pay, usurious interest, which is indorsed generally on the note as payment,⁷ unless the payment or agreement for the payment of usury increased the risk of the surety.⁸ The surety may insist that credit shall be given on the bond for usury exacted of the principal.⁹

d. AS DEPENDENT ON LIABILITY OF PRINCIPAL. — In general, the liability of the surety follows that of the principal, and if the obligation is valid against the principal, it is valid against the surety.¹⁰ A surety cannot be held liable on a note which is void as to the principal,¹¹ nor under a judgment void

Waiver of Homestead and Tainted with Usury. — In Georgia it is held that where a note containing a waiver of homestead is secretly tainted with usury of which the surety has no knowledge, the surety is not bound, because the usury makes the waiver void and thus renders the surety's risk greater than it would otherwise have been. Lewis v. Brown, 89 Ga. 115; Harrington v. Finkley, 89 Ga. 385; Howard v. Johnson, 91 Ga. 319; Vandiver v. Wright, 94 Ga. 698; Denton v. Butler, 99 Ga. 264; Allen v. Wilkerson, 99 Ga. 139; but this rule is not applicable when the creditor charging the usury is a national bank. Dalton First Nat. Bank v. McEntire, 112 Ga. 232; and the defense cannot be evaded by an arrangement purging the note of usury, the surety not assenting thereto. Howard v. Johnson, 91 Ga. 319.

as to his principal.¹ He cannot be subjected to more onerous conditions than the principal.² A surety may avail himself of all the defenses to which his principal is entitled,³ as in case of setting up a breach of warranty in the sale in an action on a note;⁴ but when the defense rests on an equity against the contract, the surety follows the fate of the principal, and if the contract is voidable, the principal has the election.⁵ A surety cannot be sued and his property attached before the period for payment stipulated by his contract, notwithstanding the debt has matured as against the principal by actual insolvency, or by a cession of property, which, under the code, would mature the debt.⁶ He cannot defend on the ground that the wrongful act of the principal has rendered a performance by him impossible.⁷

c. EFFECT OF JUDGMENT AGAINST PRINCIPAL. — It is generally held that a judgment against a principal is not conclusive but only prima facie evidence against his surety, to show breach of contract and liability,⁸ unless the condition of the bond makes it conclusive.⁹ A former judgment against the principal debtor, still remaining unsatisfied, cannot be pleaded in bar of a subsequent action on the same note against the surety.¹⁰ Judgment against the principal does not estop the obligee from setting up, in an action against the

f. EFFECT OF ADMISSIONS BY PRINCIPAL. — Admissions and declarations made by a principal in the course of the business, for the performance of which the surety is bound, are binding on the surety.² The adjustment of an account by the principal with the obligee is binding on the surety unless on proof of error, fraud, or mistake.³

g. DEATH OF SURETY — Liability on Joint and Several Obligations. — At law, if a surety sign a joint obligation, upon his death the debt is extinguished against his representative and the surviving obligor is alone chargeable,⁴ and, in the absence of fraud, accident, or mistake, equity can give no remedy.⁵ Where there were joint and several bonds, and a joint judgment is recovered against all the obligors, and the surety dies, the obligee cannot proceed in equity for the purpose of holding the assets of the surety's estate liable.⁶ When the obligation is several as well as joint, an action may be maintained or revived against the personal representatives of the deceased surety.⁷

By Statute in some states provision is made for the bringing of suits against the personal representative in the same manner as if the obligation had been several as well as joint.⁸ In other states it is provided by statute that if the decedent be a surety on a joint or a joint and several obligation, his estate shall not be liable unless the principal is a nonresident of the state and is insolvent.⁹

Whenever the Undertaking Is for a Definite Period, as for the conduct of an officer during his term of office, or for the repayment of advances made to the principal in the bond, until notice is given the obligee that the liability is terminated, the estate of the surety is answerable for any default of the principal occurring after his death,¹⁰ especially where the surety bound himself, his "heirs, executors, and administrators."¹¹

The Lands of the Principal Debtor Should Be Subjected before the lands of the deceased surety;¹ and when the estate of a deceased surety has been duly settled without knowledge of the deceased's liability, the legatees and devisees are liable to the extent of assets received,² but the children cannot be made to pay money received as advances when the obligation to pay the debt was contracted after the advancements.³

h. CONFLICT OF LAWS. — It is a general rule that a surety is liable according to the law of the place of his contract.⁴

i. DEMAND OR NOTICE OF DEFAULT. — No demand or notice of default by the principal is necessary to fix the liability of a surety,⁵ except in cases where such demand and notice are expressly required by the language of the contract.⁶ When the bond requires that notice shall be given "immediately," it means within a reasonable time,⁷ to permit an investigation into the condition of the principal's accounts.⁸ When the bond provides that notice shall be given to the surety within five days after default, it need not be given in writing.⁹

j. REVIVAL OF LIABILITY BY NEW PROMISE. — When a surety has been discharged from liability on his obligation he will be bound by any new obligation entered into with a full knowledge of the facts, but such obligation can only extend to the legal liability of the principal,¹⁰ and a new consideration is not necessary to support the subsequent assent of the surety;¹¹ but a surety is not estopped by any admission of liability made in ignorance of his legal rights.¹²

equity, to prevent a failure of justice, will interfere.¹ Equity regards a surety as a mere guarantor of the principal's ability to pay the debt, and requires the creditor to obtain as much of his money from the principal debtor as practicable, and to hold the surety responsible only to the extent of the principal's inability,² and to entitle a party seeking to recover in a court of equity, against one of several sureties in a trustee's bond, the whole amount of his claim against the defaulting trustee, he must prove not only the insolvency of the principal in the bond, but of all the other cosureties.³

1. SURETIES FOR PARTICULAR DEBTS OR ACTS — (1) Particular Business or Office. — A surety for the fidelity or capacity of a principal, appointed to a particular office or employment, is not bound if the nature of the employment is so changed by the act of the employer that the risk of the surety is materially altered from what was contemplated by the parties at the time of entering into the bond.⁴ An undertaking for the fidelity of another as agent for a corporation is limited to such acts as the corporation, by its charter, may lawfully require an agent to perform.⁵ The surety on the bond of a bank cashier cannot be held liable for his default while acting as cashier of the company after incorporation when the company was not incorporated as had been contemplated at the time of the execution of the bond.⁶ When a bond of suretyship is given for an officer, and by the act of the obligee the office is materially changed, as by promotion, so as to affect the risk of the surety, the bond as to him is avoided,⁷ but not when the bond extends to employment generally in the business of the obligee,⁸ nor when there is a mere addition of duties which do not interfere with the performance of the duties of the office for which the bond was given.⁹ The surety cannot be held liable for transactions of the principal while acting in a distinct capacity,¹⁰ and one on the bond of a contractor is not liable for debts incurred by a subcontractor,¹ nor is the surety of an agent liable for defaults of a subagent,² nor for the transactions of the agent outside the territory assigned.³

(2) Rent. — When one becomes surety for the payment of rent and the performance of the covenants of the lease, his liability is coextensive with the right of occupation by the lessee.⁴ When there is a covenant in the lease for the return of the property at the expiration of the term, there is no breach making the surety liable in damages when the tenant holds over with the presumed consent of the lessor.⁵ The surety is not released from the whole contract by the nonperformance by the lessor of an independent agreement.⁶ When the rent is payable in stated terms, the lessee may extend the time of payment of rent due without discharging the surety for rent thereafter to accrue.⁷ A surety is liable for rent though the buildings have been destroyed by fire.⁸ When the lessee covenants to keep the property insured, and the lessor, at his request, renews the insurance and pays the premium, the surety of the lessee is not liable to the lessor for the amount paid.⁹ The surety has no right to call on the lessor to proceed by distress warrant against the lessee.¹⁰

(3) Individual and Partnership Debts — (a) Surety for an Individual. — A surety on the bond of an individual cannot be held liable for the defalcations, omissions, or neglect of a firm of which the principal is partner.¹¹

(b) Surety for a Partnership. — A contract of suretyship entered into on behalf of a partnership continues no longer than the partnership itself, so that a surety for a copartnership is not liable for a default by one or more of the members of the firm after there has been a dissolution.¹²

(4) Individual and Partnership Demands — (a) Surety in Favor of an Individual. — A surety on a bond in favor of an individual is not liable after the individual takes a partner.¹

(b) Surety in Favor of a Partnership. — A surety on an obligation due to a partnership is not bound after there has been a dissolution of or a change in the membership of the partnership.²

(5) Bonds of Persons under Judicial Control — (a) Executors, Administrators, Guardians, and Receivers. — The liabilities of sureties on the bonds of executors, administrators, guardians, and receivers are discussed elsewhere in this work.³

(b) Assignees — aa. IN GENERAL. — The surety of an assignee is not relieved from liability by the fact that the assignee was employed as an attorney to establish a claim against the estate, and not to collect the claim, where there was no separation of the money from other funds belonging to the estate.⁴ When a bond has been executed under one assignment, the liability of the surety on such bond cannot be ascertained when other trusts are united with it, as it is rendered impossible to determine to what extent, if any, there is a deficiency in the first trust.⁵ The original surety is liable for the proceeds of real estate sold by the assignee, notwithstanding a statute requires special security to be given; such special security is merely cumulative.⁶

bb. NECESSITY OF ESTABLISHING LIABILITY OF PRINCIPAL. — It is not necessary by action to establish a devastavit against the principal before action can be maintained against the surety.⁷

cc EFFECT OF DECREE ON FINAL ACCOUNT. — When a decree has been entered against an assignee, upon the final accounting, the surety is concluded by it,⁸ in the absence of fraud.⁹

be wilful or intentional on the part of the obligee, or with a view to his advantage, but his act must be such as to have operated as a fraud on the surety.¹ Concealment of a known prior default,² or culpable carelessness, will relieve the surety³ when such concealment would be a fraud in fact or in law,⁴ and when inquiry had been made by the surety,⁵ but not when there was no intent to conceal or culpable negligence on the part of the obligee.⁶ The facts concealed must be those immediately affecting the liability of the surety, and bearing directly on the particular transaction to which the suretyship attaches,⁷ and materially increasing the obligation of the surety;⁸ but the creditor is under no obligation to inform the intended surety of the insolvency of the principal.⁹ A misrepresentation of facts by the creditor which will avoid the contract as to the surety must be a false assertion of a fact, and not the expression of an opinion.¹⁰ If the surety requires to know any particular matter, he must make it the subject of distinct inquiry.¹¹ The surety is not relieved as against one who was in no way connected with the deception,¹² nor by reason of his ignorance of the extent of the obligation assumed,¹³ nor by mere verbal representations of what the written contract contained.¹⁴

(2) After Contract. — When the employer of a clerk or other agent takes from another a bond of indemnity, or other instrument, guaranteeing the honesty and fidelity of such clerk or agent while in the service of the employer, the latter impliedly stipulates that he will not knowingly retain such clerk or agent in his service after a breach of the guaranty justifying his discharge, and that in the event he does so without the surety's consent, it is to be at the employer's own risk.¹ Continuing to employ an agent after knowledge of his defalcation will relieve the surety,² if the principal fails to disclose it to the surety,³ but not where a default of the employee was not occasioned by fraud or dishonesty.⁴ The failure of the employer to notify the surety of information that the employee was engaged in speculation defeats a recovery on the employee's bond for defalcation after such information was received, when the bond provides for notification on the employer's becoming aware of the employee's being engaged in speculation or gambling.⁵

Neglect to Discover Defaults. — The surety is not relieved if the directors of a bank neglect to discover defaults of the cashier,⁶ or if the principal, an employee of a corporation, fails to conform to a by-law of the company, and the surety is not informed.⁷

b. RIGHT TO REVOKE OR TERMINATE CONTRACT. — A surety bound for the fidelity and honesty of his principal, and so for an indefinite and contingent liability, and not for a sum fixed and certain to become due, may revoke and end his future liability in either of two cases, viz.: first, where the guaranteed contract has no definite time to run; and, second, where it has such definite time, but the principal has so violated it and is so in default that the creditor may safely and lawfully terminate it on account of the breach.⁸ But the surety cannot dissolve the contract for a definite term by mere notice.⁹ It is sometimes provided by the contract that the surety may, on giving certain notice, discontinue his liability, and when such notice has been given the surety cannot be held responsible for any subsequent transactions.¹⁰ A notice from the surety of a public officer,¹¹ or an officer of a private corporation, that he wants to be relieved from his suretyship cannot operate instantaneously; time must be given to procure a new bond.¹²

c. ENFORCEMENT OF CONTRACT AGAINST, AND SECURITIES GIVEN BY, PRINCIPAL — (1) Before Action Against Surety — (a) At Law. — At law, the payee of an obligation may maintain an action thereon against the surety without first exhausting the remedies against or the security given by the prin-

(b) In Equity.—A surety for a debt may, by a bill in equity, compel the creditor to proceed against the principal, where the character of the complainant as surety appears on the face of the evidence of the debt when he offers to indemnify the creditor in his proceedings against the principal, and also offers to pay whatever the principal may fail to pay under those very proceedings,³ even when the surety gave a mortgage on his property for the payment of the debt.⁴ This cannot be done if it be shown that the principal is insolvent,⁵ nor before the debt is due.⁶ When security is given by both the principal and surety on the separate and individual property of each, the creditor must first resort to the security given by the principal.⁷ A surety has a right to demand that any securities held by the creditor as collateral for the payment of the debt shall be applied in satisfaction thereof.¹

(c) Under Statutes. — By statute in some states a surety, by service of notice on the creditor, may compel him to bring suit on the note,² but when the surety has received from the principal indemnity against loss he cannot resort to the statute.³ The notice must be given when the cause of action has accrued, and not in advance of that time,⁴ and the failure of the creditor to sue is an election not to sue; the duty is on the creditor to use "due diligence" to ascertain the residence of the principal.⁵ To justify judgment against the surety in the absence of the principal the creditor must show the insolvency⁶ or death of the principal.⁷

(2) After Judgment Against Surety — (a) At Law. — A creditor, having judgment against both principal and surety, may cause the property of either to be taken to effect the payment of the debt.⁸ The recovery of a joint judgment against principal and surety does not merge the suretyship of the surety and render him a principal debtor.⁹ On a motion to revive a dormant judgment against the principal and surety on a note, the surety may set up any defense or reasons why the judgment should not be revived against him that have arisen or accrued since the judgment was taken so that an agreement for an extension of time of payment of the judgment, without the knowledge of the surety, would release the surety.¹⁰

(b) In Equity. — A surety, after judgment, is in equity entitled to be protected¹¹ and to have execution issued first against his principal,¹² unless he is insolvent;¹ the property of the principal should first be exhausted,² so far as it can be done without too great delay and expense.³

(e) Under Statutes. — In some states, statutes provide that after judgment the property of the principal is primarily liable.⁴ By other statutes it is provided that judgment should order execution to be levied first on the principal's property.⁵ Such a statute does not apply to the case of a surety who has been sued alone on a bond executed jointly by him and the principal,⁶ nor when the principal's property is in the control and custody of the court.⁷ A statute that permits a party to procure himself to be declared a surety,⁸ and entitled to favor in the collection of the judgment, does not require the creditor to pursue collateral remedies.⁹ The surety may aid an officer to find property of the principal on which to levy execution.¹⁰

d. DEFENDING SUITS AGAINST PRINCIPAL. — A surety may defend an action against his principal, may set up any legal or equitable defense which would have availed the principal, and may establish it by proof notwithstanding the principal fails to plead.¹¹

3. Rights of Creditor. — The creditor cannot be compelled by a surety to apply payments made by a debtor owing more than one account,¹² or the proceeds of the sale of security, to the particular debt for which the surety is liable so as to relieve the surety from liability, in the absence of a direction by the debtor,¹³ unless circumstances show that such application was intended by

the obligor;¹ but a direction by the debtor must be followed.² The payment by a collector of taxes of the amount collected on taxes due in a certain year upon the tax bills of former years, constitutes no defense to an action against the surety on his bond for that year.³ When the defalcations of the principal exceed the amount of the bond, the creditor need not credit the amount due on the bond with an amount realized from the assets of the principal, but may recover from the sureties the full amount of the bond.⁴ When the creditor has collected a sum of money by action against the principal debtor, he may, as against the surety, deduct from the sum realized by execution against the principal debtor the costs of the recovery.⁵

4. Assignment of Contract. — A surety, in executing a writing assignable in its character, cannot be considered as intending to limit its use to the payee.⁶ The assignee of a note signed by a surety acquires only such rights as were possessed by the assignor, and the surety may set up any facts going to his discharge of which the assignee had knowledge.⁷

5. Estoppel of Surety — a. IN GENERAL. — A surety is estopped from pleading that he signed the note in ignorance of his legal rights,⁸ or under a mistake as to the legal effect of the bond;⁹ that the principal had no authority to sign the obligation,¹⁰ or that he signed under duress;¹¹ he cannot set up a defense that the principal cannot make;¹² and when he has been sued at law, and makes his defense, which is overruled as insufficient, he cannot afterwards, on the same facts, obtain relief in equity.¹³ When the surety is fully secured, by property in his hands, he is estopped from objecting to any enlargement of the time of payment, made by arrangement between the creditor and the principal.¹⁴

b. BY SIGNING AS PRINCIPAL. — A surety who has placed himself in the position of a principal by expressly declaring upon his contract that he binds himself as such, is estopped to set up a defense that he signed merely as marily intended to be secured. Jackson v. May, 28 Ill. App. 305.

surety.¹ To sealed instruments all parties are principals, unless it appear on the face of the instrument that some are sureties, and they are estopped by their seals.² When notes are signed in such a manner as not to show on their face that some of the signers are sureties, and a holder has had express or implied notice of the fact that any of them are sureties, the fact may be proved by parol evidence.³

c. BY RECITALS.⁴ — A surety is estopped to deny the facts recited in his obligation.⁵ On a bond for the release of an attachment the surety cannot deny that an attachment issued.⁶ By signing a note to pay a judgment the surety cannot attack the validity of the judgment.⁷ A surety on a bond issued or taken by a municipal corporation cannot make the defense of ultra vires or total lack of power on the part of the corporation,⁸ or that it transcended its municipal powers;⁹ he is estopped from defending on the ground that, in letting a municipal contract, legal formalities had not been complied with.¹⁰

name has been signed as surety is not estopped from setting up the defense that it was not signed by him or by his authorized agent¹ unless he purposely kept from the holder of the note the information that the signature thereto was not genuine.²

6. Contractual Limitation. — A clause of an indemnity contract providing that in the event of the death or dismissal of the employee the right to make a claim thereunder shall cease at the end of six months from such time, is a reasonable and material condition, and the terms of the contract should be fulfilled.³ A letter from the president of the employing company merely informing the surety that the books and accounts of the company were being examined, and that a report of the result would be made as soon as such examination was completed, is not such a claim as is contemplated by the contract.⁴ When a bond contains a provision that any claim under the bond shall "embrace and cover only for acts and defaults committed * * * within twelve months next before the date of the discovery of the act or default upon which such claim is based," the surety is not liable for defaults extending over a longer period than one year, though the misconduct of the officer prevent discovery of previous embezzlements.⁵

IV. RIGHTS AND REMEDIES AS BETWEEN SURETY AND PRINCIPAL — 1. Rights of Surety — a. IN GENERAL. — A surety paying the debt, after the default of his principal, has a right of action against the latter for reimbursement. In the absence of an express agreement to reimburse, the law raises or implies a promise to that effect,⁶ even though the relationship of principal and surety was not created at the request of the former, but existed merely with his assent, expressly or impliedly given.⁷ The implied contract of indemnity arises and takes effect from the time when the surety becomes bound, and the surety becomes a creditor of his principal from that time.⁸ The payment of the debt creates no new contract, but relates back to the date of the suretyship.¹ The surety may recover only from him for whom he actually became bound, and has no claim upon a third person who merely benefited by the suretyship. Thus, a surety for one of two partners cannot recover from the partnership though the obligation was given for a partnership debt,² nor has a surety on the custom-house bond of a consignee of goods any remedy against the owner of such goods unless he was requested by the latter to become surety.³ But an undisclosed principal in the original obligation is liable to the surety.⁴

Recovery from Estate of Principal. — If the surety pays the debt after the death of his principal, he may recover from the latter's executors, heirs, or devisees.⁵

Notice and Demand. — Failure to notify the principal of an action brought against the surety is not fatal to the surety's right of reimbursement.⁶ If, however, the surety confesses judgment or submits to judgment by default without giving the principal notice and opportunity to defend, he assumes the burden of establishing the validity of the original debt in his own action against the principal.⁷ The surety need not notify his principal that he has paid the debt,⁸ nor need he demand payment of the amount,⁹ before suing. But he may not sue upon partial payments without notice and demand.¹⁰

When Surety May Not Recover. — The surety has no claim against his principal when he has been released from liability;¹¹ or when the principal has paid a judgment against them both;¹² or when principal and sureties were partners in the transaction;¹³ or when the surety assumed the debt in purchasing property from the principal;¹⁴ or when the principal has made a general assignment in consideration of his release from all liability to the surety;¹⁵ or when the surety has been released by the creditor.¹⁶ But in Indiana an agreement between surety and principal, by which the surety agrees to surrender to the principal certain notes of his if the latter will secure the surety's release from liability from the debt on which he is surety, has been held to be without consideration moving from the principal and cannot be set up by him as a defense.¹⁷

When Surety Not Liable for Debt. — When the surety might have defeated recovery against himself upon the original obligation, he cannot ask his principal for indemnity,¹⁸ though it has been held that the failure by the surety to set up a defense not available to the principal is not a bar to his right of recovery.¹ The principal, however, cannot complain that the surety did not defend, without showing that a defense would have been of avail.² Nor can he escape liability because the surety failed to make technical objections to the instrument by which the latter was bound,³ or because the original suit, to which the principal was a party, was not skillfully managed.⁴

When Principal Not Liable for Debt. — Until the principal is in default, either on his contract with the creditor or on his contract with the surety, he is not bound to indemnify the latter.⁵ And if the surety pays a debt for which the principal was not liable, he does not pay the latter's debt, but merely his own, and cannot recover.⁶ On this point, however, the authorities are not uniform, some holding that though the principal be not liable, yet if the surety be compelled to pay, he is entitled to reimbursement.⁷ The surety cannot be deprived of his right to indemnity because of the neglect of the principal's attorneys in defending the suit,⁸ nor because of a secret agreement between principal and creditor, releasing the former, of which the surety was ignorant.⁹ When the principal suffers judgment by default, he admits his liability upon the debt and cannot thereafter defend against the surety on the ground that the latter did not oppose judgment.¹⁰

Where the Principal Buys Property of the Surety sold under execution against them both, he cannot set up title thereto against the surety, as he has merely paid his own debt.¹¹ But there is no objection to the purchase by the surety of property of the principal sold under similar circumstances.¹²

some manner actually damnified;¹ and payment by the surety after he has brought suit against the principal for indemnity is not sufficient.² But if the principal has broken an express agreement to do or refrain from doing some particular act, or to save the surety from some particular charge or liability, the surety may sue before he has paid the debt.³ An express promise by the principal to pay the surety upon demand, in consideration of the outstanding liability of the latter, is valid⁴ and enforceable by the surety before the maturity of such liability.⁵

(2) What Constitutes Payment.—The surety need not pay the debt in money in order to recover the amount thereof from his principal. In Louisiana, by statute, a surety may, before making any payment, bring a suit against the debtor to be indemnified by him, either when the surety has been sued, or when the debtor is insolvent, or when the debtor is bound to discharge him within a certain time, or when the debt has become due, or at the expiration of ten years when the principal obligation is of the nature to last a longer time. Edwards v. Prather, 22 La. Ann. 334.

In Oklahoma, by statute, a surety may maintain an action against his principal to obtain indemnity against a debt or obligation for which he is bound, before it is due, and without having first paid or satisfied the same, whenever any of the grounds exist upon which an order of attachment may issue. Walton v. Williams, 5 Okla. 642.

When Relation of Debtor and Creditor Merged.

—Where a judgment is rendered against principal and surety, and the surety thereafter takes the place of the judgment creditor, so that the relation of debtor and creditor centres in one person, the law pronounces the debt paid, and such payment is sufficient to warrant an action by the surety against the principal to recover the amount thereof. the debt, and may recover from the principal before the maturity of such obligation.¹ But in some jurisdictions the giving of a non-negotiable note does not constitute a payment.² A draft upon the principal, accepted by the creditor, is a sufficient payment although the principal refuses to honor the same.³ The imprisonment⁴ of the surety is not such a satisfaction of the debt as will warrant suit against the surety, nor does a mere promise⁵ by the surety to pay the creditor amount to a payment. The obligation of the principal to the surety not being indivisible, the latter may have relief upon making partial payments.⁶ Payment directly to the creditor is not essential. Reimbursement of a stranger who has paid the debt,⁷ or contribution to a cosurety,⁸ will suffice to give the surety a right of action.

(3) Time of Payment. — The surety must wait until he is legally liable to pay or subject to be coerced to pay before he discharges the debt.⁹ He need not, however, wait until he has been sued, unless warned by the principal not to pay,¹⁰ nor need he wait longer than the maturity of the debt¹¹ or the default of the principal.¹² If the surety voluntarily pays the debt before its maturity, he cannot sue the principal until maturity.¹³

c. AS AFFECTED BY INSOLVENCY OF PRINCIPAL. — If the principal becomes insolvent, the surety may have relief though he has not paid the debt.¹⁴ The release of the principal from his debt to the creditor through a discharge in bankruptcy has been held to discharge the claim of the surety to reimbursement.¹⁵

d. AS AFFECTED BY JUDGMENT AGAINST SURETY. — The rendition of judgment against the surety entitles him to relief without payment thereof,¹⁶ and the judgment is prima facie evidence of the surety's right to recover from his principal, whether the latter had¹⁷ or did not have¹⁸ notice of the pending action. A foreign judgment has the same effect.¹⁹ It has been held, however, that a judgment against the surety does not establish the relation of principal and surety unless the question was expressly adjudicated in the suit.¹

c. AS TO COLLATERAL SECURITY. — A surety may, before the maturity of the debt, procure security against loss,² and additional security taken from a stranger or a cosurety is presumed to be cumulative and not exclusive.³ The outstanding liability of the surety is a sufficient consideration to support a mortgage⁴ or an assignment of securities⁵ executed by the principal, but not, it seems, a promise by a third person to indemnify the surety.⁶ A mortgage of indemnity is not invalid because it covers debts due from the principal to the surety other than the one arising from the suretyship.⁷ An indemnity given the surety for a particular debt remains in force though the form of the debt be changed,⁸ but will not extend to a new and subsequent debt for which the surety becomes bound.⁹

Property as Security. — The rights of a surety in property given him to secure his indemnity are superior to a secret equity in a third person of which the surety had no notice;¹⁰ and a mere agreement to transfer property to the surety gives him an equity therein enforceable against all persons with notice.¹¹ A surety who holds land as security is entitled merely to the possession thereof. The owner may sell the land and discharge the debt, or, if the surety has received rents and profits therefrom sufficient to satisfy the debt, the owner is entitled to a reconveyance.¹²

Retention of Security. — The surety is entitled to retain his collateral indemnity until he is relieved or discharged from liability.¹³

Assignment of Security. — The surety may transfer to the creditor security held by him in compromise of the indebtedness,¹⁴ but he cannot assign or transfer his securities to a third person who pays the debt,¹⁵ or to a surety who has superseded him.¹⁶

Enforcement of Security. — The surety may, as soon as he is legally liable to pay the debt because of the default or insolvency of his principal, and without actual payment thereof, enforce security given him for his indemnity,¹ particularly where such security contains an express agreement to pay the amount for which the surety is bound.² But until the surety has discharged the debt, he cannot call upon the principal for additional security or a different contract for indemnity.³ The security may be looked to for only so much of the debt as it was pledged for,⁴ and if the surety has gratuitously paid a debt for which he was not liable, the security cannot be enforced at all.⁵ Moneys realized upon the foreclosure of security must be devoted to reimbursing claims of the surety resulting from the suretyship to the exclusion of other claims he may have against the principal,⁶ and such moneys must be accounted for by the surety before he can recover a balance of the debt from the principal.⁷ Prior incumbrances paid by him should be allowed the surety on his accounting.⁸ A court of equity may properly decree the application of the proceeds to the payment of the principal indebtedness.⁹

2. Remedies of Surety — a. AT LAW. — The general rule is that a surety who has paid a debt of his principal cannot maintain an action at law upon the original obligation, as that is deemed to have been extinguished by the payment.¹⁰ If there is an express contract of indemnity, he may sue on that.¹¹ Otherwise, his right to relief rests upon the implied promise of reimbursement and he may maintain an action for money paid for the use of the principal,¹²

though the debt may have been paid in land or the principal has expressly agreed to repay the surety in land.¹ And the right of the surety to sue upon the implied promise is not impaired by his having taken collateral security, unless it was expressly agreed that such security was to be alone relied upon for reimbursement.² An action for money had and received will never lie,³ nor can the surety sue in tort to escape the defense of a discharge in bankruptcy.⁴ The surety must sue in his own name,⁵ and must prove the suretyship by the original obligation or otherwise.⁶

Statutory Provisions giving remedies to sureties are merely cumulative and do not supersede existing common-law remedies.⁷ The claim of the surety does not differ from an ordinary debt, and he has no exceptional right or remedy which does not rest upon a particular statute.⁸ Statutes, therefore, providing additional or provisional remedies must be strictly followed.⁹

If the Principal Be Dead when the surety pays the indebtedness, the latter may present his claim to the administrator,¹⁰ or he may sue¹¹ him at once without demand.¹² Upon failure to recover from the principal's representatives, the surety may maintain an action against the devisees.¹³

b. IN EQUITY.—The remedy of the surety in equity is not confined, as at law, to the obtaining of indemnity after the payment of the debt. As soon as the debt has become payable, or the surety is endangered, he may file a bill to compel payment by the principal and be thereby relieved from responsibility.¹⁴

If the court is asked to interfere on behalf of the surety before judgment is recovered against him, he must present some special ground of equitable relief.¹ But where judgment has been recovered against both parties, the equity of the surety, to have the property of the principal first applied to satisfy the execution, is clear.² A surety who has paid the debt may also have relief in equity,³ but not where he has secured a judgment against his principal and has thereby or otherwise an adequate remedy at law.⁴ Equitable relief will not be denied to an insolvent surety,⁵ nor to a surety's heirs⁶ or assignees.⁷

Recovery from Principal's Estate. — A surety may file a bill in equity against the executors and heirs of his principal, to subject personal property in the hands of the former, and real property in the hands of the latter, to the payment of the debt.⁸ But equity will not interfere when the claim against the estate is barred.⁹

such property is being wasted and the surety is for that reason in danger.¹

Preventing Removal of Property. — The right to maintain a bill to prevent the removal from the state of the property of the principal generally rests upon a particular statute.²

Setting Aside Fraudulent Conveyance. — The authorities are conflicting as to when the right accrues to the surety to come into equity for the purpose of setting aside a fraudulent conveyance executed by his principal. It is variously said that such right accrues when the surety becomes bound and before he pays the debt,³ when judgment has been obtained against him,⁴ when he pays the debt and before he has obtained judgment against the principal,⁵ and not until such latter judgment has been obtained.⁶ A surety is not estopped to assert this equitable right because he knew of the fraudulent conveyance at the time he became bound.⁷

Subrogation and Substitution. — The right of the surety to invoke the aid of the equitable doctrine of subrogation is fully treated elsewhere in this work.⁸

c. SUMMARY REMEDY. — In some jurisdictions a summary remedy is given by statute to a surety who has paid a judgment rendered against him for the debt of his principal, such surety being entitled, on motion, to a judgment over against the principal for the amount paid with interest.⁹ Where a joint judgment has been rendered against cosureties, they may have a joint judgment but not several judgments against their principal.¹⁰ These statutes have been held to extend to the personal representatives of a deceased surety.¹¹

d. SET-OFF. — A surety is not entitled to retain funds in his hands belonging to the principal, or to set off against his liability a debt due from himself to the principal, until he has paid the suretyship debt or in some manner assumed the same so as to discharge the principal.¹ But this rule does not obtain when the principal has become insolvent, and the surety may then retain the moneys of the principal or the amount of his own indebtedness as a fund for his indemnity.² A surety who has paid, or against whom judgment has been rendered for, a debt of his deceased principal, may retain funds in his hands or a debt which he owes the estate, provided such estate is solvent;³ if not solvent, he may only retain his proportionate share of the assets thereof.⁴ The principal may assign a debt due him by the surety as an offset to any one particular debt of several for which the surety is liable, so that no injustice be done thereby to the latter.⁵ The surety is entitled to apply funds in his hands directly to the payment of the mutual indebtedness when the principal has directed such application.⁶

e. JOINT SURETIES.—When each of several cosureties has contributed to the payment of the debt, each has a separate right of action against the principal.⁷ Such right cannot be affected by any act of a cosurety,⁸ nor, in general, will any private arrangement between cosureties for the distribution of liability inter sese operate, unless expressly so stipulated, to release the liability of the common principal to them all.⁹ But if one surety has paid the whole debt without contribution, he alone can maintain suit;¹⁰ and if the debt has been paid from a joint fund or by means of money raised upon joint credit, the recovery must be by joint action.¹¹ The latter rule is not applicable, however, to a payment made from partnership funds in a matter without the partnership. Such a payment effects a severance of the joint funds pro tanto, and the partners must sue separately.¹²

Amount of Recovery.—A cosurety may recover no more than the amount actually paid by him,¹³ or his proportionate share of a joint fund used to discharge the debt.¹ He is entitled to judgment for the whole amount of the debt only when the other sureties have failed to contribute towards its payment.²

Duty of Principal to Cosureties. — The principal is not bound to any one surety to keep the original obligation in statu quo as to either the number or the solvency of his cosureties.³

f. JOINT PRINCIPALS. — A surety for two or more joint principals may recover from them either jointly⁴ or severally,⁵ even for the default of one of their number.⁶ But if the payment by the surety has been of a judgment entered against one principal only, a joint action will not lie.⁷ Where one principal has died the surety may proceed either against the estate of the decedent⁸ or against the survivors.⁹ Similarly, when one principal has absconded those remaining are liable to the surety.¹⁰

3. Extent of Principal's Liability — *a. surety is the measure of his damage against the principal, in the absence of fraud or collusion, or negligence of the surety in defending.¹ But the surety is not bound by the amount of recovery against the principal, and may recover the whole debt though judgment was entered against the principal for a less amount.²

Collateral Security. — Where the surety has received security from the principal, he may enforce the same for such amount only as is necessary to his complete indemnity against actual and probable loss.³

b. COMPROMISE OF DEBT. — If the surety compromises the debt for less than the amount due, he can recover from the principal only the sum paid in compromise,⁴ unless the principal has agreed to pay him the face value of the property devoted to the extinguishment of the debt,⁵ or unless the surety has stipulated with the creditor for all of the latter's rights against the principal.⁶ The surety must disclose the exact terms of his settlement,⁷ and if he falsely induces the principal to pay him the full amount of the debt, the latter may recover back the overpayment.⁸

Payment in Depreciated Paper. — Where the surety has paid the debt with depreciated paper, the actual value thereof is the measure of his damage against the principal.⁹

c. COSTS AND EXPENSES — Costs. — The surety may recover the necessary costs of an action brought against him upon the debt,¹⁰ particularly where he suffered judgment by default,¹¹ or where the principal agreed in writing to save him harmless.¹² But costs arising from the surety's having engaged in unnecessary litigation are not properly an item of his damages.¹³

Expenses. — The surety may also recover expenses which are reasonable and may be considered as additional losses, the necessary consequence of the failure of the principal to discharge his own debt.¹⁴

Attorney's Fees. — The surety may recover the attorney's fees allowed in a note indorsed by him where he paid the same,¹⁵ but he must show that the sum paid by him was the usual amount charged by attorneys in such cases.¹⁶

est on the sum paid by him from the time of payment.¹ The rate recoverable is the legal rate, though the contract or judgment, to the rights of which he is substituted, provides for a greater rate.² But the surety may recover such interest as was provided for in the original instrument and was actually paid by him.³

Usury.—Where the surety discharges a usurious debt of his principal without notice from his principal not to pay, he may recover the amount paid by him.⁴ But usury is not recoverable where it was paid by the surety in order to gain time to take up the original obligation,⁵ or where the surety knew that it was the intention of the principal to avoid the usury.⁶

Where Judgment Has Been Rendered Against the Surety, it has been held that the statute runs from the payment thereof. Reeves v. Pullian, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 119. But as the right of action against the principal accrues when the surety's liability is fixed (Keller v. Rhoads, 39 Pa. St. 513, 80 Am. Dec. 539), the statute has been held to run from entry of judgment instead of from the payment thereof. Cathcart v. Bryant, 28 Wash. 31.

specified time will not suspend the accrual of the latter's cause of action to that time.¹

What Statute Applicable. — As regards the surety's right of action at law upon the implied contract of indemnity, the statute applicable to such contracts governs;² as regards his right to proceed in equity upon the original obligation, through the operation of the doctrine of subrogation, the nature of such obligation determines the particular statute of limitations applicable in the premises.³

5. Statute of Frauds. — An agreement by the principal to save the surety harmless is generally held not to be within the statute of frauds and not to require writing;⁴ and the same is true of an agreement by a third person to indemnify the surety if he will become such.⁵

V. RIGHTS AND REMEDIES AS BETWEEN COSURETIES — 1. Contribution Between Sureties — *a. Indebtitatus Assumpsit will lie by one surety against another on the contract implied from their relation as cosureties to receive from him his share of the amount paid in settlement of the common liability. Weeks v. Parsons, 176 Mass. 570.

b. NATURE AND ORIGIN OF RIGHT — (1) Nature. — The doctrine of contribution rests on the principle that when the parties stand in æquo juri, the law requires under the maxim, "equality in equity," that one of them shall not be obliged to bear the burden in ease of the rest. It is founded not on contract, but on the principle that equality of burden as a common right is equity, and the obligation to contribute arises from the nature of the relation between the parties.¹

(2) Origin. — It was in courts of equity exclusively, according to the ancient practice, that a surety had a right to claim contribution from his cosureties. But the doctrine is now well settled that, while courts of equity have not been ousted of their jurisdiction, redress may be obtained at law.²

c. WHO LIABLE FOR CONTRIBUTION — (1) In General. — The duty of contribution on the one hand, and the right to demand it on the other, spring out of a common burden resting on two or more persons occupying a like position toward the creditor. It is essential that the common liability shall exist, and the parties must occupy toward the creditor exactly the same attitude.³

Privity with, or Knowledge of, the Liability of the Other Surety is not necessary to the existence of the right to contribution.⁴

(2) Sureties on Different Instruments. — If sureties are bound for a common principal to insure the performance of the same duty or obligation, the fact that they may be bound by different instruments given at different times is immaterial; the right of contribution exists.¹ But where the sureties are bound by different instruments for different portions of a debt due from the same principal, and the suretyship of each is for a separate and distinct transaction, there will be no right of contribution among the sureties.²

(3) Surety at Request of Cosurety. — If one becomes a surety at the request of his cosurety, he is not, in general, liable to the latter for contribution.³ But the cases on this point are in conflict; some courts holding that to relieve the surety from liability without contribution there must be a contract express or implied for such immunity. In such cases the mere request to sign does not affect the liability.⁴

(4) Surety of Surety. — A person who is a surety for another surety is not liable for contribution.⁵

10. Payment by Executor of Deceased Cosurety. — Dussol v. Bruguere, 50 Cal. 456.

f. EFFECT OF INSOLVENCY OF COSURETY. — At Common Law the insolvency of one of the sureties does not affect the amount for which each surety is liable.¹

But in Equity a surety who has paid the debt may compel the solvent sureties to contribute pro rata according to the number of such solvent cosureties.²

In Some Jurisdictions courts of law adopt the equitable rule and contribution is distributed equally between those sureties who are solvent.³

g. ABSENCE OF COSURETY FROM JURISDICTION. — Absence from the jurisdiction of the court is, for the purpose of contribution, equivalent to insolvency.⁴

h. EFFECT OF RELEASE OF PRINCIPAL. — Where the surety who has paid the debt agrees to release the principal, the cosurety is also released from liability even though it is expressly stipulated that he shall remain liable to contribution.⁵

i. WHEN RIGHT ACCRUES — (1) In General. — Before a surety can compel contribution from a cosurety, one of two circumstances must exist: first, that he has paid more than his proportion or pro rata part of the entire amount for which he and his cosurety were bound; or, second, that the amount paid by him, being less than the whole amount for which both were liable, was accepted in full satisfaction of the entire liability, and had the effect to discharge from further liability the surety against whom contribution is sought.⁷

Demand and Notice are not necessary before bringing a suit for contribution.⁹

on the doctrine of compulsory payment. The obligation is raised by the necessity which the paying surety is under of making the payment, and therefore he can have no contribution unless his payment is compulsory.¹ But a surety need not wait until payment is extorted from him. If he is legally liable to pay, then any payment made by him under such conditions is not a voluntary payment but is legally compulsory.²

(3) Payment by Note. — If one of the cosureties pays the debt by giving his note which is accepted by the creditor as payment, the surety thus paying may at once and before paying the note sue his cosurety for contribution the same as if he had paid the debt in money.³

j. INSOLVENCY OF PRINCIPAL. — It seems to be well settled that in a suit at law the right to bring an action for contribution in no way depends on the insolvency of the principal.⁴

Conversely, in equity, the weight of authority is that the insolvency of the principal is a prerequisite to the action.⁵

k. STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. — The limitation begins to run against the right of a surety to demand contribution from his cosurety as soon as payment is made by him.⁶

l. EXTENT OF RIGHT — (1) In General. — A surety who has paid the debt can recover from each of his cosureties only the aliquot portion of the whole amount paid, calculated on the basis of the number of sureties,⁷ unless it appears that some of them are insolvent.⁸ If a party attempts to enforce contribution for a greater amount than is due, he may be enjoined.⁹

Interest from the date of payment may be recovered by the surety who has paid the debt.¹⁰

Costs and Expenses of defending a suit for the debt may be included in the claim for contribution¹ unless the defense was needless or frivolous.²

Sureties Liable for Different Amounts cannot be required to contribute beyond the sums for which they have become bound,³ unless they agree between themselves to equalize the loss.⁴

(2) Money Borrowed to Prevent Breach of Bond. — Before the right of contribution arises, the cosureties are mere strangers, one to the other, and as one has no authority to make contracts for another he cannot bind a non-participating surety for money voluntarily borrowed to prevent a breach of the bond.⁵

(3) Misconduct of Surety. — Where a surety pays the damage which his own conduct was instrumental in causing, he cannot recover from his cosureties, who are innocent, their pro rata of the loss he has sustained.⁶

(4) Benefits Secured from Creditor. — A surety cannot speculate off his cosureties, and if in paying the debt he secured any benefits, his cosureties are entitled to their share therein.⁷

Action by Surety Holding Indemnity. — A surety may maintain an action against his cosurety for contribution regardless of any indemnity he may hold. In such case whatever may be afterwards received by a sale of the indemnity shall be accounted for and proportionately paid to the sureties. Williams v. Riehl, 127 Cal. 365, 78 Am. Surety Entitled to Attorney's Fees incurred in defending his title to security given him by the principal. Hoover v. Mowrer, 84 Iowa 43, 35 Am. St. Rep. 293.

Payment by Cosurety of Party Receiving Security. — Where there are two or more persons sustaining the relation of cosurety, and one of them has received security from the principal for his own indemnity, and the other surety pays the debt, he thereby becomes entitled to all the securities held by the first surety. Butler v. Birkey, 13 Ohio St. 514.

b. BEFORE RELATION OF COSURETY EXISTS.— Until the relation of cosuretyship exists, the sureties have a right to look out for their own separate indemnity, and a security or indemnity stipulated for before that time does not inure to the common benefit.¹

c. PRINCIPAL LIABLE TO SURETY ON DIFFERENT OBLIGATIONS.— Where a surety who obtains a security is the surety on a prior indebtedness of the principal, or where the principal is liable to him for an individual loan, such surety need not apply the security for the benefit of his cosurety.²

d. AFTER PAYMENT BY SURETIES IN EQUAL PROPORTIONS.— Where the debt is paid by several sureties in equal proportions the equities between them as cosureties cease, and each becomes an independent creditor of the principal for the amount he may have paid; so that if one of them subsequently receives indemnity from the principal for his own debt the others are not entitled to participate therein, providing such indemnity does not proceed from securities held by the surety previous to the payment of the debt.³ The sureties on so paying the debt may contract between themselves for an equal division of whatever may afterward be collected by either one upon the debt of the principal.⁴

3. Loss or Release of Security Given Cosurety.— The cosurety who holds the security becomes the trustee for the other cosureties, and as such must faithfully hold the securities for the benefit of all his cosureties, and he has no right without their consent to transfer, surrender, or cancel them. And as a general rule, if he misapplies them and is afterwards compelled as surety to pay the debt he cannot compel contribution from a cosurety.⁵

4. Fraudulent Conveyance by Cosurety.— A surety is entitled to protection against a fraudulent conveyance made by his cosurety at any time subsequent to the execution of the common obligation.⁶

Agreement to Obtain Indemnity Individually.— After two persons have become sureties for a common principal, they may by agreement between themselves renounce their right to take benefit from any securities they may respectively obtain, and each look out for himself exclusively for an indemnity from the principal or for contribution from another cosurety. McDowell County v. Nichols, 131 N. Car. 501, 92 Am. St. Rep. 785.

Property of the Principal Purchased by the Surety under an execution does not inure to the benefit of a cosurety as an indemnity against the joint liability. Crompton v. Vasser, 19 Ala. 259.

Security Given by Surety.— A security given by a surety for the payment of the debt does not inure to the benefit of the cosurety when the latter pays the debt. Bowditch v. Green, 3 Met. (Mass.) 360.

Good Faith in Releasing Security.— It has been held that where the surety releases security in good faith, and does not fraudulently conceal the fact of such release from his cosurety, he is not liable therefor. Brandon v. Medley, 1 Jones Eq. (54 N. Car.) 313.

Release under Judgment.— Where a surety has been adjudged to surrender security to another, he must show such other's superior claim, and that he was compelled to perform and did perform the judgment by surrendering the security. Cornett v. Holcomb, (Ky. 1901) 62 S. W. Rep. 477.

6. Fraudulent Conveyance by Cosurety.— Washington v. Norwood, 128 Ala. 383; Bowen v. Hoskins, 45 Miss. 183, 7 Am. Rep. 728; Neilson v. Williams, 42 N. J. Eq. 291.

VI. DISCHARGE OF SURETY — 1. In General — a. LEGAL AND EQUITABLE DISCHARGE. — Apart from statutory provision, the grounds upon which sureties may be discharged fall under two main heads: first, discharge by the extinguishment, satisfaction, release, or change of the principal contract; second, discharge by acts in pais. The first of these heads evidently includes purely legal defenses, while the term “act in pais” is used to indicate the fact that the act which constitutes the ground of discharge owes its efficacy to equitable considerations, but that it is nevertheless cognizable in the legal forum. The distinction between the legal and equitable defenses of the surety was at one time of some importance,¹ but in the first decade of the nineteenth century² courts of law began to discharge sureties upon equitable grounds, and since then there has been, save in a very few jurisdictions, a complete interfusion of legal and equitable principles. Hence, no absolute line of demarcation between legal and equitable discharges can now be drawn, though it often becomes necessary to ascertain the source of a particular rule. Equitable doctrines really irrigate the entire subject, and rules which would once have been able to stand upon a legal footing only are now supported by equitable considerations also. To illustrate: a binding agreement between creditor and debtor for an extension of time discharges the surety on the legal ground that the obligation is thereby changed. Nevertheless the discharge, in perhaps the majority of cases, is put on the purely equitable ground that the surety's right of immediate payment and subrogation is interfered with.³

b. EXTINGUISHMENT, PERFORMANCE, PAYMENT. — Whatever extinguishes the main obligation necessarily discharges the surety, as where a debt is canceled by will,⁴ or where the principal debtor succeeds in annulling the obligation in an action against him, although the surety may have suffered judgment by default.⁵ The surety may also be released or discharged from

1. At Law and in Equity. — The following are instances where relief could formerly be had by the surety only in equity: I. Where parol evidence was necessary in order to prove the fact of suretyship. Craythorne v. Swinburne, 14 Ves. Jr. 160; Clinton v. Hooper, 1 Ves. Jr. 173; Ashbee v. Pidduck, 1 M. & W. 564. See also the title ACCOMMODATION PAPER, vol. 1, pp. 344, 378, and supra, this title, II. 2. Relationship May Be Shown by Parol. Traces of this rule are still found in decisions to the effect that where the contract is under seal the remedy of the surety is in equity. Wittmer v. Ellison, 72 Ill. 301; Lewis v. Harbin, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 574; Devers v. Ross, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 252, 60 Am. Dec. 331; Parsons v. Harrold, 46 W. Va. 122; Cumberland First Nat. Bank v. Parsons, 42 W. Va. 137; Glenn v. Morgan, 23 W. Va. 467; Sayre v. King, 17 W. Va. 562. See also Maxwell v. Connor, 1 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 14. II. The right of the surety to be discharged where the creditor failed to bring suit upon request (not statutory) was of equitable origin. Bailey v. Edwards, 4 B. & S. 771, 116 E. C. L. 771; Wright v. Simpson, 6 Ves. Jr. 734; Strong v. Foster, 17 C. B. 201, 84 E. C. L. 201. In some jurisdictions this became also a legal defense early in the nineteenth century. Herbert v. Hobbs, 3 Stew. (Ala.) 9; King v. Baldwin, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 384, 8 Am. Dec. 415; Cope v. Smith, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 110, 11 Am. Dec. 582. In others it remained solely an equitable defense. M'Haney v. Crabtree, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 104; Hancock v. Bryant, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 476; Harris v. Newell, 42 Wis. 687.

But the rule now generally prevailing is that all defenses of the surety may be pleaded at law. Hempstead v. Watkins, 6 Ark. 317; Springer v. Toothaker, 43 Me. 381, 69 Am. Dec. 66; Harris v. Brooks, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 195, 32 Am. Dec. 254; Greely v. Dow, 2 Met. (Mass.) 176; People v. Jansen, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 332, 5 Am. Dec. 275; Steubenville Bank v. Hoge, 6 Ohio 17; Wayne v. Kirby, 2 Bailey L. (S. Car.) 551; U. S. v. Howell, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 620. Consequently equity will not release a surety who has no legal defense. Nor will it hold the surety liable on equitable grounds where he has a good defense at law. Leffingwell v. Freyer, 21 Wis. 392.

2. Lord Eldon said in 1818 that the courts of law had then only recently adopted the rule, always prevailing in equity, that an extension of time released the surety. Hawkshaw v. Parkins, 2 Swanst. 539. And in 1844 Vice Chancellor Wigram said that the rules of law and equity pertaining to the discharge of sureties by the improper disposition of securities were perfectly similar. Mackintosh v. Wyatt, 3 Hare 567.

liability by any agreement between him and the creditor sufficient to discharge a party in other relations.¹ Likewise an act of the principal or any transaction between him and the creditor which destroys the main obligation or discharges the principal from liability thereon will discharge the surety also;² or payment by him,³ or by the surety,⁴ or by a third person⁵ will have this effect.

The Application of Payments, as affecting the rights of sureties, has been discussed elsewhere.⁶

Tender of Payment made by the principal debtor will discharge the surety.⁷ The discharge, in this case, is based upon equitable as well as legal grounds. It is not necessary, therefore, that a tender to discharge the surety should be formally made,⁸ or that it should be made good by payment into court. But a mere offer of payment, refused by the creditor because he did not need the money, has, in New York, been held not to discharge the surety, there being nothing to show that the debtor insisted upon paying as a legal right.⁹ This view has also been taken in other jurisdictions.¹

2. SATISFACTION. — Any other mode of satisfaction besides payment will likewise discharge the surety. Thus, where a note or other security is taken for the debt,² the surety is no longer bound, although such security should prove of no value.³

Effect of Taking Note or Other Obligation. — Much controversy has arisen as to the exact effect to be attached to the mere acceptance by the creditor of a negotiable note or other obligation. Several difficulties arise. There may be doubt as to whether the note is accepted in satisfaction of the old obligation or as collateral security merely or in conditional payment. Again, there may be a question whether the acceptance of the security operates as an agreement on the part of the creditor to extend time. The liability of the surety on the principal debt can, of course, be enforced only where the obligation is taken solely as collateral or additional security. If it be taken in satisfaction or in conditional satisfaction the surety is discharged. The understanding of the parties at the time of the transaction will, of course, control,⁴ but in many cases it is necessary to resort to the legal presumptions that arise. Where the creditor takes new negotiable paper from the debtor, the surety is prima facie discharged. This is true whether the question arises in those states where negotiable paper operates as prima facie satisfaction,¹ or in those states where it operates as conditional payment only.² In the one case the debt is prima facie paid, in the other there is a prima facie extension of time. If, instead of being negotiable, the security taken consists of bonds, mortgages, or other choses in action, the presumption that it was taken in satisfaction or in conditional payment does not arise, and it is prima facie treated as collateral only.³ The fact that such collateral matures in the future is not of itself sufficient to raise the presumption of an extension of time such as to release the surety.⁴

Effect of Satisfaction. — An obligation once satisfied cannot be revived or reissued against the surety without his consent.⁵ And a secret agreement between the principal and creditor to keep the debt alive against him will be ineffectual.⁶ When the principal debtor takes up a note it is presumed to be paid, but if he in fact acts for another the surety is not discharged.⁷ In addition to discharging the surety from personal liability, the satisfaction or release of the principal obligation necessarily discharges additional security held by the creditor, such as a mortgage executed by the surety or collateral pledged by him.⁸

2. Release or Discharge of Principal — a. ACT OF CREDITOR. — The surety is discharged where the creditor discharges the principal upon compromise for less than the whole amount due,⁹ or where he enters into a composition,¹⁰ or makes an agreement for composition amounting to an accord and satisfaction of the debt.¹¹ The same result follows where the creditor executes a binding release or discharge of the principal debtor without receiving payment or satisfaction of any kind.¹² The surety is likewise discharged where the creditor releases a third person who, by joining with the principal in the commission of the act on which liability is predicated, becomes primarily liable with him as a joint tortfeasor.¹

Where the Surety Is Indemnified. — It has been held that where the surety is fully indemnified, the release of the debtor does the surety no damage and therefore does not discharge him;² nor is the surety discharged, if, previous to the release of the principal, the surety has paid part and given security for the remainder, as such act amounts to a substantial assumption of the debt.³

b. OPERATION OF LAW. — The surety is not discharged where the principal, instead of being discharged by the creditor, owes his discharge to an act of law, as where he is discharged in bankruptcy,⁴ or insolvency proceedings,⁵ or where the action against him is barred by limitation.⁶ An additional reason for the rule that a discharge of the principal by the statute of limi-

St. Louis Fourth Nat. Bank*, (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. Rep. 1.

Discharge "From Any Cause." — It has been held that a statute providing for the discharge of a surety where the principal is discharged "from any cause" applies to causes originating in the acts of the parties, and does not apply to a discharge by the act of the law. Phillips v. Solomon, 42 Ga. 192.

Fraudulent Concealment of Cause of Action. — Where the statute of limitations does not begin to run in favor of the principal, owing to the fraudulent concealment of the cause of action, it will not begin to run in favor of the surety. McMullen v. Winfield Bldg., etc., Assoc., 64 Kan. 298; Lieberman v. Wilmington First Nat. Bank, 2 Penn. (Del.) 416.

tations does not discharge the surety is found in the principle, elsewhere stated, that the creditor owes to the surety no duty of active diligence. Still another reason is that the bar of the statute does not extinguish the debt, but merely the remedy.¹ At common law a discharge of the surety by the act of law occurs when the debtor and creditor intermarry.² It has also been held that where the maker of a note payable to an estate becomes administrator de bonis non, the surety cannot be held liable on the note, he being then chargeable with the note as cash in hand.³

3. Alteration in or Deviation from Contract — a. GENERAL RULE. — Any material alteration in or deviation from the terms of the contract for whose performance the surety is bound will, if made without his consent, release him from his obligation.⁴

b. LIMITATIONS. — But if such alteration be made with his consent,¹ or if it is expressly provided for in the contract² or appears to have been within the contemplation of the parties when the contract was made and therefore implied therein,³ or if the change is colorable rather than real,⁴ or if the alteration charged consists in making or changing a subsidiary or independent agreement,⁵ or if it be immaterial and cannot affect the surety adversely,⁶ the surety is not discharged.

c. BUILDING CONTRACTS. — Probably in no other class of contracts have alterations in or deviations from the terms of the agreement been so often made as in building contracts. The general rule applies here as elsewhere, that such alterations or deviations discharge the surety,⁷ unless the change is provided for in the contract or is so slight as to have no material effect upon the liability of the surety.¹

Retaining Part of Contract Price.—Where the contract provides, as it usually does, that the owner shall withhold a certain per cent. of the contract price until the contractor has completed the building, the failure to withhold such money will discharge the surety, not only on the ground that it is an alteration of the contract, but that it is a surrender of security agreed to be held for his benefit.² There are cases, however, holding that the surety is not discharged by the failure to retain such money, either on the ground that the retention is for the sole benefit of the owner, or that the security has not thereby been impaired, or that the retention was not obligatory but merely allowed.³ And it has been held that such prepayment discharges the surety merely to the extent of the unauthorized payment or to the extent of the injury sustained.⁴

Paying a Contractor at an Earlier Date than that fixed by the contract has been held not to discharge the surety.⁵

d. ALTERATION IN NOTES AND BONDS.—The surety upon a note or bond is released by any material alteration therein made without his consent.⁶ Instances of such alterations are: erasing the name of a surety without the adding words to the instrument which alter its scope and effect.¹

Bond for Benefit of Several. — In some instances a bond is given for the protection of more than one person; as where the bond of the principal protects likewise materialmen or subcontractors engaged in furthering the same general object. In such cases a violation of the contract by the chief creditor or contractor which may release the surety may not have that effect as to the other parties.²

Official Bonds. — The same general principles apply to official as to other bonds. Thus it is a general rule that where an official bond is altered after it has been signed, but before its delivery and approval, by the erasure of the name of one of the sureties thereon, and the alteration is plainly noticeable, all the sureties are released who had no knowledge of or did not consent to the alteration nor ratify it.³ Moreover, if the penal sum is filled in or the amount thereof is altered after such signature the surety is discharged.⁴

e. ALTERATION IN LEASE. — The surety is likewise discharged by a material and unauthorized alteration in a lease.⁵

becomes bound, the duties of the principal are changed to some extent; as by assigning to a bank teller the duties of the cashier, or vice versa, or to a bookkeeper the duties of teller, etc. The general principle controlling in such case is that the surety for the performance of the original duties is not discharged unless the new duties materially affect the performance of the old or affect the obligation of the principal in respect of the old, thus increasing the risks of the surety.¹

g. ARBITRATION OF DEBT. — Neither an agreement to arbitrate the debt nor the fact that it is actually arbitrated will release the surety.² But where a surety guarantees the performance of an award by certain arbitrators he is discharged from liability if other arbitrators be substituted without his consent.³

4. Extension of Time — a. GENERAL RULE. — Any valid and binding agreement between the principal and creditor by which the time of payment is extended without the consent of the surety releases the surety.⁴

The Discharge of Accommodation Parties to negotiable paper as sureties is treated under the title ACCOMMODATION PAPER, vol. 1, p. 375 et seq.

In Oriental Financial Corp. v. Overend, L. R. 7 Ch. 142, it was held that the holder of a security who agreed with the principal to give time to the surety thereby discharged the surety.

Consent by the surety for one extension does not authorize a second unless he subsequently waives his rights. Oyler v. McMurray, 7 Ind. App. 645; Rochester Sav. Bank v. Chick, 64 N. H. 410; Parsons v. Harrold, 46 W. Va. 122.

Release of Collateral.—The extension that will release a surety will likewise release property pledged as collateral. Reed v. Cramb, 220 Ill. App. 34; Home Nat. Bank v. Waterman, 134 Ill. 461.

New Promise After Extension. — It has been held in some cases that where, after an extension has been granted to the principal, the surety agrees still to be bound, such agreement need not be based upon a new consideration to make it obligatory.¹

(2) Part Payment of Debt. — Neither part payment of the principal or interest of a debt due, nor the payment of another matured debt, nor a promise to pay interest for the period of extension constitutes a consideration for an agreement for extension.²

Payment Before Maturity. — But partial payment of the debt before maturity is sufficient consideration for an agreement for extension such as will release the surety.¹

Payment of Interest in Advance. — And likewise the payment of interest in advance has been held sufficient to support the extension and thus discharge the surety.² There are, however, cases holding that the surety is not discharged by the mere receipt of interest in advance, without a contract to that effect,³ and that the payment of interest in advance is not alone sufficient evidence of an agreement to extend the time.⁴

i. INDEMNIFIED SURETY. — A surety who holds indemnity or security from the principal is not discharged by an indulgence or extension which otherwise would have that effect.¹ But if the indemnity proves to be of no value he is discharged.²

j. NO REVIVAL OF OBLIGATION. — The liability of a surety once discharged is not revived by a subsequent arrangement between the principal and creditor.³

k. STATUTORY EXTENSION. — Where an extension is granted to a principal debtor by statute, it is a general rule that such extension does not release the suretyship.⁴

l. AFTER JUDGMENT AGAINST PRINCIPAL. — After recovery of judgment against a debtor and his surety, the relation of principal and surety is generally regarded as still continuing, so that an extension of time granted to the principal will discharge the surety.⁵

m. EVIDENCE. — It is not necessary to show an express agreement for extension, but this may be inferred or implied from the circumstances.⁶ The surety need not show that he gave notice of his dissent,⁷ and proof that the surety knew of the extension is not equivalent to consent on his part.⁸ Whether the parties intended to grant and accept an extension is a question for the jury.⁹ The burden rests upon the surety to prove the extension of time without his consent,¹⁰ and to prove that he is a surety.¹¹ It is generally recognized that the acceptance of a new note after the maturity of the guaranteed debt is evidence of an agreement to extend the time of payment.¹² There is, however, authority for the statement that the taking of such a note does not imply that the creditor agreed to give time.¹

5. Indulgence to Principal Debtor — a. IN GENERAL. — It is fundamental in the law of suretyship that the creditor owes to the surety no duty of active diligence. This principle is, of course, a legal one, but it permeates the entire law of discharge and is rarely violated. One small class of cases presents a real exception to the broad rule. By the weight of authority the failure of a creditor to record a mortgage or register a lien, whereby the security is lost, is an act of such gross and blameworthy negligence as to discharge the surety to the extent of the security thus lost.² It is also held by a very few courts that where the creditor suffers the debt to be barred as against the principal or his estate, the surety is discharged.³ Subject to these unimportant exceptions, it is universally true that a mere nonfeasance on the part of the creditor will not discharge the surety. Mere inaction, indulgence, delay, or forbearance on the part of the creditor to bring suit against the principal debtor,⁴ or his failure promptly to subject securities or to apply

(Miss.) 468; McGee v. Metcalf, 12 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 535, 51 Am. Dec. 122, holding that sureties on a forthcoming bond are not released by a failure to enroll the bond.

This exception rests upon purely equitable grounds and has taken form in the course of the development of the law pertaining to the subject of dealing with securities. See infra, this section, 7. Dealing with Securities.

The Burden of Proof is on the surety to show that the security was lost by sale to a bona fide purchaser. Burr v. Boyer, 2 Neb. 265.

Failure to Procure Deed. — It has been similarly held that the negligent failure of the creditor to take a deed to property purchased at an execution sale, whereby the lien is lost, will discharge the surety. Hendryx v. Evans, (Iowa 1903) 94 N. W. Rep. 853.

3. See supra, this section, 2. b. Operation of Law.

As will be seen farther on, the surety is discharged from future liability by the retention of a bonded employee after knowledge of his dishonesty. This, however, is a positive act of bad faith and is not viewed merely as a nonfeasance. See infra, this section, 9. e. Retention of Employee Known to Be Dishonest.

funds available for the satisfaction of the debt,¹ furnishes no defense to the surety, unless, by the terms of the contract with him, diligence and promptitude on the part of the creditor are required.²

Laches. — Expressions are sometimes seen to the effect that the surety may be discharged by the creditor's laches, the term being used in the sense of negligent forbearance.³ Such expressions are becoming rare, and the defense of laches is admissible in favor of the surety only under the same conditions as make it an effective defense in other relations. Mere failure to proceed, unaccompanied by other equitable circumstances, will not discharge the surety.¹ There must be some act which estops the creditor or is sufficient of itself to discharge the surety apart from the fact that he is surety.²

The Duty of Activity Is Imposed on the Surety, indeed, rather than on the creditor. As Lord Eldon once said: "The surety has no right to say that he is discharged from the debt * * * if all that he rests upon is the passive conduct of the creditor in not suing. He must himself use diligence and take such effectual means as will enable him to call on the creditor either to sue or to give him, the surety, the means of suing."³ The rule is the same whether the delay or indulgence be granted to the principal before, after,⁴ or during the prosecution of a suit.⁵ The liability of the surety is not affected by the fact that the creditor discontinues a suit already instituted,⁶ or allows the judgment lien to expire by limitation.⁷

Holder of Note.—Further illustration of the general rule is found in decisions to the effect that a surety is not discharged by the failure of the holder of a note to present it for payment at maturity,⁸ or to make demand upon the claim⁹ within the lifetime of the maker,¹⁰ or to notify the surety of nonpayment within a reasonable time,¹¹ nor by his mere failure to sue on the note at maturity.¹² The rule is, of course, different where there is an express agreement to bring suit without delay.¹³

b. FAILURE TO DISTRAIN FOR RENT.—The failure of a landlord to exercise the right of distraint or to enforce his statutory lien does not release a surety on the rent note,¹⁴ unless the contract with the surety imposes such duty on him.¹⁵ The fact that the surety requests the landlord to seize for his rent is immaterial.¹⁶

c. FAILURE TO PROCEED AGAINST ESTATE OF DECEASED OR BANKRUPT PRINCIPAL. — Where the principal is dead, the surety is not discharged by a failure of the creditor to present the claim and thus procure it to be paid out of his estate,¹ even though the surety requests him to do so.² The same is true of a failure to prove in bankruptcy,³ or in insolvent proceedings.⁴

Surety's Remedy. — In the absence of statute, the only course for the creditor to pursue in order to protect himself under such conditions is to pay off the debt and be subrogated to the creditors' rights.⁵

d. ACTIVE DILIGENCE NOT REQUIRED. — Further illustrations of the principle that active diligence is not required of the creditor, and that, in the absence of fraud or bad faith, his failure to do an act which would lessen the risk will not discharge the surety, are found in the cases cited below.⁶ The following decisions are perhaps worth noting. The failure of the creditor to prevent the debtor from wasting and removing his personalty will not discharge the surety.⁷ The same is true of his failure to notify the surety on a bond to secure a balance on a running account when the same is closed,⁸ and of his failure to notify the surety on a bond for title of the pendency of a suit involving the question of title.⁹ He owes the surety no duty to administer on the estate of the deceased principal;¹⁰ and a surety on an indemnifying bond cannot complain of the failure of the assured to interpose a merely technical defense in the suit which determines liability.¹¹

Negligent Loss of Fund. — If the claim is presented and allowed, there being sufficient funds to pay it, and the creditor negligently fails for two years to apply for the money, and it is then lost, the surety is discharged. Gillespie v. Darwin, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 21; Willis v. Chowning, 90 Tex. 617, 59 Am. St. Rep. 842.

6. Refusal to Sue upon Request by Surety — a. GENERAL RULE. — The fact that the surety, realizing his situation to be precarious, requests a dilatory creditor to bring suit against the principal,¹ and that the failure of the creditor to sue is followed by the insolvency of the principal debtor² or by a loss of remedies against him,³ does not operate to discharge the surety.

b. NEW YORK AND PENNSYLVANIA DOCTRINE. — A different rule prevails in New York, Pennsylvania, and Alabama, and the influence of decisions there made has been felt in various other states. In those jurisdictions it is held, on equitable grounds, that a request by the surety for suit to be brought imposes on the creditor the duty of enforcing his claim at once against the solvent principal, and if he fails to do so and damage results to the surety, as by the subsequent insolvency of the principal, the surety is thereby discharged.⁴ This doctrine had its origin in the equitable rule that after the debt was due, the surety, although not yet molested for the debt, might file a bill to have the debt discharged or to have indemnity,⁵ or might make a demand for the creditor to sue or to permit the surety to sue in his name.⁶

6. Indemnity Against Costs. — In such case it was always required that the surety should accompany his demand with an offer to indemnify the principal against costs. Ranelagh v.

From this principle, the New York courts at an early day deduced the corollary that the surety might impose on the creditor a legal duty to proceed merely by warning him to sue.¹ The same result was reached in Pennsylvania by reason of the fact that the courts of law there administered equitable principles.² The adoption of such a rule in the great commercial states just mentioned shows that their courts appreciated the need of some means of protecting the surety against prejudicial delay on the part of the creditor; and many other states would no doubt soon have adopted their conclusions had not legislation provided a satisfactory remedy by the giving of statutory notice. Since the enactment of these statutes the New York and Pennsylvania rule has not met with favor, and apparently a tendency towards its restriction has been shown even by the courts of those states.³

c. STATUTORY NOTICE TO SUE — (1) In General. — The statutory provisions for notice to sue⁴ differ but little in the several states, and inasmuch as such statutes contemplate a forfeiture of the right of action against the surety, where the creditor disregards the notice, they are, as a general rule, construed with some strictness.⁵ It has, for instance, been held that a statute authorizing a surety to give notice does not apply to one who becomes such by implication; as where the mortgagor of land conveys to a vendee who assumes the mortgage and thus becomes principal debtor, the original mortgagor thereafter being a surety.⁶ The right to give notice does not exist in favor of indorsers on promissory notes, their contract being one of guaranty rather than of suretyship.⁷

(2) Requisites of Statutory Demand. — The statutory provisions as to the person to give notice,⁸ the person to whom it is to be given,⁹ as well as the Requisites of Verbal Request to Sue. — In Pennsylvania it is held that the verbal request to sue should state that the surety intends to claim his discharge in case of a failure on the part of the creditor to institute suit. Eric Bank v. Gibson, 1 Watts (Pa.) 143; Cope v. Smith, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 110, 11 Am. Dec. 582. See to the same effect Jackson v. Huey, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 184, 43 Am. Rep. 301.

4. In Alabama it was held at an early day, contrary to the rule now elsewhere prevailing, that the statutory right of the surety to make demand upon the creditor to sue is merely a cumulative remedy. Herbert v. Hobbs, 3 Stew. (Ala.) 9; Strader v. Houghton, 9 Port. (Ala.) 334.

Principal Dead. — In Missouri, it is held that the right of the surety to be discharged does not exist where the principal is dead or dies before the time limited for bringing suit. Davis v. Gillilan, 71 Mo. App. 498.

8. Fish v. Glover, 154 Ill. 86.

In New York, where, as we have seen, a parol request is sufficient to impose duty without the aid of a statute, it is held that the right to make such demand extends to those who are sureties by implication. the parties liable.¹ The contract to be sued on must be clearly indicated,² though it need not be particularly described.³

(3) Institution of Suit; Time; Diligence.—The creditor, on receiving notice, must institute suit⁴ against the principal⁵ in a court where jurisdiction can be obtained over him.⁶ In most jurisdictions the statutes fix the time within which the creditor must begin action.⁷ If no period is fixed he must proceed with reasonable promptitude,⁸ and must prosecute the suit with diligence.⁹

(4) Nonresidence or Removal of Debtor.—The fact that the debtor lives in¹⁰ or has moved to another state¹¹ is a lawful excuse for not instituting an action; unless, as is held in a few states, the debtor has property within the jurisdiction subject to attachment.¹² The fact that at the time notice is given the principal debtor is insolvent will also justify a failure to sue, for in such case the surety is not damaged and is therefore not discharged.¹³

(5) Effect of Failure to Sue. — The effect of a failure to sue after proper statutory notice has been given is to discharge the surety giving notice from all liability on the contract.¹ If a surety after giving the creditor notice to sue subsequently requests the creditor to grant indulgence to the principal,² or acquiesces in the dismissal of the suit,³ he thereby waives his right to claim a discharge. But a request for indulgence made after the discharge is effected will not operate as a waiver thereof.⁴

7. Dealing with Securities — a. TAKING ADDITIONAL SECURITY. — The creditor owes no duty to the surety to acquire additional security and thereby decrease the risk. Nor if additional security is preferred is he bound to accept it.⁵ Usually, however, the creditor will not be found averse to accepting additional security, and may, of course, do so without discharging the surety,⁶ provided he is careful not to take the new security in satisfaction of the original obligation and does not estop himself from enforcing the main contract according to its terms. It is not necessary that the surety should know that additional security has been taken or that he should consent thereto.⁷

b. RELEASE OR IMPAIRMENT OF SECURITY. — One of the most vital applications of equitable principle in the law of discharge is found in the rule which prevents the creditor from increasing the surety's risk by an improper disposal of securities. It may be stated as follows: If a creditor without the consent of the surety parts with or renders unavailable any security or fund which he has a right to apply in satisfaction of the debt, the surety is exonerated or discharged to the extent of the value of such security or to the extent of the impairment in its value. This principle is a corollary from the equitable doctrine underlying the surety's right of subrogation, and the law of subrogation therefore both supplies a means of testing the fact of discharge and defines its extent. The creditor is treated as a trustee of all securities in his possession, for the indemnity of the surety as well as for his own protection; and he is in equity bound to apply them to the advantage of both. Accord-Disturbance. — The fact that the community is in commotion will not justify a failure to sue, where the courts are open. Cockrill v. McCurdy, 33 Mo. 365.

The Fact that the Principal Debtor Is a Married Woman and therefore not personally liable either to the creditor or surety does not alter the duty of the creditor in respect to maintaining a lien unimpaired. Sample v. Cochran, 82 Ind. 260.

Surety Becoming a Principal.—A surety who changes his position and becomes a principal is not discharged by the creditor's release of a lien or waste of collateral. Reade v. Lowndes, 23 Beav. 361; Crim v. Fleming, 123 Ind. 438; Wood v. Motley, 83 Mo. App. 97; Lamoille County Nat. Bank v. Hunt, 72 Vt. 357.

2. Discharge Pro Tanto.—The act of the creditor in improperly releasing, losing, or impairing a security operates only as a discharge to the extent of the loss or impairment, a result different from that which follows when the principal contract or duty is altered.

Means of satisfaction, as used in this connection, signifies money or property in the lawful control of the creditor which he may rightfully retain and apply to the satisfaction of the debt without subjecting himself to an action; or funds within his reach which he is in duty bound so to apply.¹ It is often said that the creditor must have an interest in the nature of a mortgage, pledge, or lien upon the securities before a surrender thereof will discharge the surety.² But the terms "pledge" and "lien" are here loosely used, and this form of expression should be avoided. The general doctrine is that the duty not to surrender exists whenever the creditor has the money or property in question under his control as security. This generally implies a delivery to and acceptance by the creditor.³ The principle just stated applies to securities acquired subsequent to the contract of suretyship as well as those obtained at the time the relation is formed; and it is immaterial that the surety may be ignorant of the fact that the securities are in the creditor's hands.⁴ Before, however, the surety can be discharged by the act of the creditor in parting with security, it is necessary that the creditor should know of the existence of the relation,⁵ and the act complained of must be done without the surety's consent.⁶

Release of Mortgage or Deed of Trust — Impairment of Lien. — In accordance with the general principle stated above, a surety is wholly or partially discharged where a mortgage or deed of trust on the debtor's own property is released by the creditor,⁷ or where a vendor's lien to which the surety might be subrogated is destroyed or impaired by the creditor,⁸ or where he surrenders collateral

Surety by Implication of Law. — In Iowa it is held that one who becomes surety by implication of law, e. g., a mortgagor, where the land is sold and the mortgage assumed by the vendee, cannot complain when part of the mortgaged property is released. James v. Day, 37 Iowa 164. See also as to the extension of time of payment under such circumstances the title MORTGAGES, vol. 20, p. 1058, and Corbett v. Waterman, 11 Iowa 87.

8. Vendor's Lien on Realty. — Denson v. Gray, 113 Ala. 608. This case illustrates the important principle that purely equitable grounds of discharge are available at law, and that consequently a creditor who has subjected other security at less than its value cannot subsequently come upon the surety for the balance, although from a legal standpoint his position is unassailable.

upon the renewal of a note by both principal and surety.¹ If a creditor permits his debtor to collect the money on the securities and apply the proceeds to another purpose than the payment of the debt,² or if the creditor misapplies it himself,³ the surety is discharged.

Qualifications. — The surety, however, cannot complain where the property itself⁴ or its proceeds are honestly applied to the satisfaction of the debt.⁵ The surety is not discharged where the debtor himself surreptitiously or fraudulently reacquires possession of the securities,⁶ or is permitted to have possession for a proper purpose;⁷ nor where the security parted with is valueless by reason of a defective title.⁸ If the creditor is bound by an independent contract entered into before the relation of suretyship is formed, or at the time when new security is taken, to surrender or substitute the same, he may do so without discharging the surety.⁹

Substitution of Security. — The substitution of one security for another, although it involves a release of the security parted with, stands upon a somewhat different footing from a naked release. If the exchange be made in good

Vendor's Privilege or Lien on Personal Property — Resale. — In Louisiana it has been held that the surety on purchase notes for personalty is entitled to be subrogated to the vendor's privilege, and that, as a consequence, he is discharged where the purchaser resells the chattels, or even only part of them, to the original vendor, leaving part of the original purchase money unpaid. *Hereford v. faith and in an honest effort on the part of the creditor to strengthen his position, the surety is not discharged unless he shows actual damage.¹ A release or diversion of security which results in no injury does not affect the liability of the surety.²

c. DUTY OF CREDITOR TO RETAIN AVAILABLE FUNDS. — An examination of the class of cases under consideration shows that the courts have not infrequently been governed by analogy, and have made decisions in the light of the general principle stated above, rather than under it. This is illustrated in a leading case, where it was held that if a creditor settles with his debtor and without the surety's consent pays to him a balance erroneously supposed to be due, when, as afterwards appears, the balance is on the other side, the surety is discharged.³ So, also, it has been held that the surety is discharged where the creditor, an insurance company, pays a policy to an insolvent estate without deducting a note for money previously loaned to the insured, although the company has no express lien.⁴

Bank Applying Deposit to Debt. — There is some difference of opinion as to whether a bank, the payee or holder of a note, discharges a surety by failing to apply money of the maker which happens to be on deposit at or after the time the note matures.⁵

Salary — Independent Contract. — The payment of a salary, or money due on a contract for service, which might be available to offset a secured liability, will not discharge a surety, since the salary is in the nature of a continuing consideration for the performance of service as rendered, and equity will not deprive a man of the means of earning a livelihood merely because he is in debt.⁶ The surety on notes for the purchase money of land cannot complain where the vendor delivers the deed without insisting on payment, since the vendor is bound to deliver the deed in order to perfect his right of action on the purchase notes.⁷ Similarly, a vendee of land may pay over the purchase money without discharging a surety on a bond given by the vendor as security against incumbrances.⁸

8. Judgment and Execution Liens — a. THE JUDGMENT AND JUDGMENT LIEN. — The doctrine that the surety is discharged pro tanto by a release of security extends to liens acquired in legal proceedings. If a creditor acquires a lien by judgment or by the levy of an execution, or even, in some jurisdictions, by mesne attachment, he must not release it or negligently impair its value, under the penalty of discharging the surety; for the relation of surety-ship is not terminated by judgment; and whatever will discharge a surety before judgment, while his obligation remains in contract, will discharge him thereafter.¹ In accordance with the foregoing rule, if, after judgment, the creditor extends the time of payment,² or permits the judgment to be set aside,³ or modified so as to give other incumbrances priority,⁴ or releases it or acknowledges satisfaction thereof,⁵ the surety is discharged. But the assignment of a judgment which does not interfere with the creditor's rights does not release him.⁶

b. CONTROL OF EXECUTION. — In conformity with the general doctrine that the creditor owes no duty of active diligence to the surety, it is held that he is not bound to sue out execution after judgment is recovered,⁷ in the absence of a statute to such effect.⁸ Nor when issued is he bound to have the execution levied. He may withdraw it before levy⁹ or suspend the levy, and if there be no binding agreement to give time, the surety, by the weight of authority, is not discharged,¹⁰ since it is the privilege of the surety at any time to pay off the judgment and be subrogated to the creditor's right of proceeding with the levy. In a few states a different rule prevails, and it is there held that a recall or suspension of an execution once issued, if done at the instance of the creditor, will discharge the surety where there is sufficient personalty available to satisfy it.¹ This doctrine is placed upon the ground that, in such jurisdictions, the execution is a lien upon personalty from the time of its delivery to the sheriff;² and perhaps the courts in these states do not give sufficient weight to the fact that such lien is inchoate and imperfect until a levy has actually been made.

c. DISCHARGE OF LEVY. — By a universal consensus of authority, when a specific lien is once fixed on property real or personal by an actual levy, a surrender of the property thereafter will discharge the surety.³ It results from this rule that a levy on sufficient property of the principal to satisfy the debt operates as a discharge of the surety.⁴ An apparent exception to the principle stated above is found in decisions to the effect that the release or dismissal of an execution levied on real property will not discharge the surety,¹ but it will be found in such cases that it is the judgment which gives the lien and that this lien is not strengthened by the levy of the execution nor impaired by its subsequent release.²

d. DISCHARGE OF ATTACHMENT. — On the question whether the discharge of an attachment will release the surety, there is direct conflict. The better view is that it will not. The lien acquired by attachment differs from ordinary securities in the circumstance that it cannot be preserved without active diligence. The prosecution of an attachment is attended by trouble and expense, and if the ground of attachment is doubtful, serious liability may be incurred. The creditor, it is said, is under no obligation to subject himself to such expense and liability or to continue the action after it has been begun.³ On the other hand, it is insisted that while the creditor is not bound to attach, when he has once obtained a hold upon the property of the debtor by attachment he becomes trustee for the surety as well as himself, and a release of an attachment is consequently followed with precisely the same consequences as the release of an execution.⁴

9. Discharge of Surety on Fidelity Bond — a. IN GENERAL. — The rule that the creditor owes no duty of active diligence to the surety is often applied in cases involving the liability of sureties on bonds given as security for the fidelity of officers, agents, and employees. This subject has already been treated from one point of view in this work,⁵ and will now be considered in its general aspect only. We shall here find an apt illustration of the distinction between the passive inactivity which does not discharge the surety and the negligent omission which does.

b. FAILURE TO DISCOVER SHORTAGE. — Where bonded employees turn out to be unfaithful, it often transpires that their peculation or embezzlement extends over a long period of time, and it has been insisted for the sureties that the employer, who is also the obligee in the bond, should be required to exercise diligence in discovering the dishonesty. This contention has not met with favor, and it is a universal rule that so long as the assured acts in good faith, he is not bound to detect and put an end to crookedness in any of its stages. The object of requiring a bond is to give protection, and the assured may safely repose on its security until something transpires to alter the situation. Mere negligence on the part of the obligee, either in exercising supervision over the employee to prevent irregularities or in discovering a shortage after it has occurred, is no defense.¹

C. FAILURE TO REQUIRE SETTLEMENTS. — In harmony with this doctrine it is also established that the surety is not discharged by the failure of the obligee of the bond to examine the accounts of his employee or to require a settlement, although such a precaution would disclose a shortage and thus save the surety from further risk.² The rule is of course different where the contract by which the surety is bound expressly provides that an examination or settlement shall be made.³ But the mere fact that the regulations put in force by the obligee of the bond require an accounting does not alter the situation,⁴ and it has been held that the incorporation of the by-laws and regulations of a corporation into the contract by reference will not result in the discharge of the surety where settlement is not made.⁵ There is some authority for a more stringent rule. Thus, in Minnesota it has been held not to be necessary that the stipulation imposing on the obligee the duty to require a settlement should be expressly inserted. It is enough if the surety knows that the contract between the principal and obligee calls for regular settlements and he enters into the suretyship in contemplation thereof.⁶

Notice that Settlement Is Required — Where a surety settles a claim incurred by the shortage of an agent and then gives notice to the employer that he will be no longer bound unless the agent is required to account at stated intervals, he will be discharged thereafter from all liability by a failure of the employer to bring

d. FAILURE TO NOTIFY SURETY OF DELINQUENCY. — It is also settled that, in the absence of a provision to that effect,¹ the obligee of a bond is not bound to communicate to the surety the fact of delinquency when it comes to his knowledge,² especially where the delinquency does not appear to be of a dishonest or criminal nature.³ But, of course, if inquiry is at any time made by the surety, the obligee is bound to disclose the true state of the account.⁴

Contract Imposing Duty to Communicate. — Where the contract of suretyship calls for the communication of facts increasing the surety's risk subsequently coming to the employer's knowledge, the latter is allowed a reasonable opportunity to ascertain with certainty whether the shortage or delay is of a dishonest nature.⁵

e. RETENTION OF EMPLOYEE KNOWN TO BE DISHONEST—(1) General Rule. — Closely connected with the subject just considered is the question whether the surety is discharged by the fact that the employer, having knowledge of a shortage, retains the employee in his place of trust. This brings us to the point where the balance changes in favor of the surety; since, by the weight of authority, the retention of the employee under such conditions is an act of bad faith; certainly so where the delinquency is clearly of a dishonest or criminal character. It follows that if the employee is retained the surety is not liable for defaults thereafter occurring.⁶ The rule is different where the default on the part of the employee is the result of oversight, inadvertence, or negligence,¹ or is a mere breach of contract² and involves no dishonesty.³

(2) Exception in Favor of Government. — A qualification of the doctrine just stated exists in the case of sureties on the bonds of public officers. These are not discharged by the negligent failure of those in authority to discharge a defaulting officer upon the discovery of his peculations;⁴ nor by their failure to discharge one surety and accept another after agreeing to do so.⁵ The reason for this is that the government is not estopped nor its interests affected by the laches or negligence of any of its servants.⁶

(3) Bonds Given to Private Corporations. — The exception which certainly exists in favor of the government has also been supposed to apply in favor of private corporations where the corporate authorities negligently fail to discharge a defaulting officer when found to be dishonest. This opinion had its origin in the powerful dictum of Chief Justice Sharswood: "They undertake that he shall be honest though all around him are rogues."⁷ His words have often been quoted with approval, but nearly always in cases of negligence merely,⁸ and the true doctrine doubtless is that the surety will be discharged from future liability where the corporate authorities retain an embezzler after the wrongful act comes to their knowledge, or the knowledge of their competent agent,⁹ unless there appears to be collusion among the wrongdoers to rob the corporation by their joint operations. Where the irregularity complained of is not dishonest or is due merely to the negligence or incompetence of the employee, the surety is not discharged by the fact that those in authority have knowledge of it and do not dismiss him.¹⁰ The same is true where a cashier, with full knowledge on the part of his superiors, habitually borrows money from the bank, depositing his note or debit slip and entering the transaction regularly on the books.¹¹ So where a bookkeeper obtains money from the bank upon an overdraft with the knowledge of the cashier, the bookkeeper's sureties are liable therefor.¹² given to secure the fidelity of officers, agents, and employees is a contract of suretyship or of guaranty. The surety is an insurer of the debt, whether present or future; the guarantor, an insurer of the solvency of the debtor. Judged by this test the obligor on such a bond is, it seems, by the weight of authority, a surety.¹ In some jurisdictions, however, he is treated as a guarantor.² This results in some conflict, for the law is more favorable to the guarantor than to the surety.³ The surety is bound from the delivery of the contract, without notice of acceptance, or of the default which fixes liability, and he is not entitled to terminate the relation by giving notice.⁴

10. Effect of Discharge of Cosurety — a. IN GENERAL. — If the act or circumstance discharging the cosurety impeaches the validity of the main obligation, as where his signature to an official bond is improperly made⁵ or the name is erased,⁶ the remaining surety is discharged also from all liability.⁷

Discharge by Operation of Law. — The liability of a surety is not affected, however, by the fact that a cosurety is discharged by an act of law or by authority of law, as where one surety obtains a discharge under a statute permitting it,⁸ or is discharged in bankruptcy or insolvency⁹ or by virtue of the statute of limitations.¹⁰ By the weight of authority the same rule prevails where one surety, after giving statutory notice to sue, is discharged by law upon the failure of the creditor to proceed. The surety who is not a party to the notice remains bound,¹¹ or, if discharged at all, only to the extent to which he would have been entitled to contribution from the surety who gave notice.¹²

b. ACT OF CREDITOR. — A surety is only partially discharged where the creditor releases a cosurety, and the result is the same whether the creditor obtains from the surety discharged by him his full proportion of the debt or merely executes the release voluntarily. As generally stated the rule is that the remaining surety is exonerated to the extent to which he would have been entitled to contribution from the released surety.¹³ Some of the older decisions hold or seem to hold that the remaining surety in such case is wholly discharged at law,¹ but the more equitable rule is now settled as stated above.² The courts have sometimes been puzzled where the creditor, upon payment by one surety of his proportion of the debt, gives him a release or discharge therefor in full. This in no way prejudices the creditor's right to sue the other surety for his full proportion of the debt.³ But, of course, the remaining surety is thereby absolved from liability for the part so satisfied, and may be said in a sense to be discharged pro tanto. The surety will not be discharged where the release of his cosurety is made under an order of court⁴ or in proceedings in equity,⁵ even though a reservation of rights against the other sureties be improperly omitted from the decree.⁶ An agreement for the extension of time in favor of a surety, as distinguished from an extension of time to the principal, has been held not to release the other surety.⁷ But the better view is that such extension discharges the remaining surety from liability for that part of the debt which the other ought to pay.⁸ In the present state of the authorities the law concerning the effect of discharging or releasing one of several sureties is obscure. It will, in the end, be found necessary entirely to change our point of view, and instead of saying that such act discharges the remaining surety we must say that, by discharging one surety, the creditor, so far as the contract of suretyship is concerned, thereby treats his proportion of the debt as satisfied and cannot thereafter recover it from the other surety though he might against the principal. In this view the remaining surety cannot be said to be discharged from any part of his personal liability, only the amount of the obligation being reduced.

11. Consent of Surety. — A qualification running through the entire subject of discharge is that the surety cannot complain of any act or agreement on the part of the creditor to which he himself gives assent. In conformity with this rule, the time may be extended,⁹ or the contract otherwise changed or

Conditional Consent.—If the surety gives consent to a discharge of the principal on the condition that he pay one-fourth of the debt in ten days, the surety is discharged, the Indiana court holds, if, after failing to pay the one-fourth within ten days, the creditor accepts it from him at a later day. *Cartmel v. Waiver. — In like manner, a surety who has been discharged by reason of any act of the creditor, or agreement between the creditor and principal, short of satisfaction of the main obligation, may, by subsequent acquiescence therein, waive his discharge or estop himself from claiming the benefit of it.¹

New Promise by Surety. — A new promise on the part of a discharged surety to pay the debt, although not based upon a new consideration, will operate to restore his liability where he has knowledge of the facts which entitle him to a discharge.² The mere fact that the surety takes security from the principal to indemnify him does not operate as a new promise,³ but he has been held liable in such case to the extent of the value of the security thus taken.⁴

Consideration for the New Promise. — An exception to the rule that no additional consideration is required for the new promise of the surety is recognized by some courts in those cases where the discharge results from the alteration of an instrument. These courts have acted upon the theory that the alteration annuls the obligation. Hence there must be a new consideration to revive it.⁵

12. Reservation of Rights Against Surety. — A further qualification of the law of discharge to be made in certain cases is found in the rule that the creditor, at the time of entering into an agreement with the principal which would ordinarily discharge the surety, may reserve his rights against the surety and subsequently proceed against him. This qualification is limited

1. Surety Waiving Ground of Discharge. — Decatur Bank v. Johnson, 9 Ala. 622; Hinds v. Ingham, 31 Ill. 400; Owens v. Tague, 3 Ind. App. 245.

Waiver in Original Contract. — A clause expressly waiving discharge by an extension of time is often inserted in promissory notes. It has been held that the term "any extension" in this connection applies to successive extensions. Winnebago County State Bank v. Hustel, 119 Iowa 115. Compare Hodge v. Farmers' Bank, 7 Ind. App. 94; Page v. White Sewing Mach. Co., 12 Tex. Civ. App. 327.

Knowledge of Departure from Contract. — A ratification of a departure from the main contract will not be inferred as against the surety on a contractor's bond from the fact that he approves orders for the payment of work not included in the original contract, where he is not aware of the departure from the contract. Erfarth v. Stevenson, (Ark. 1903) 72 S. W. Rep. 49; Stillman v. Wickham, 106 Iowa 597.

Rights of Third Person. — But a waiver by the surety will not be effective where the rights of a third person are concerned. Thus, where a mortgage given to secure a debt is released by an unauthorized extension of time by the creditor, the mortgagor cannot waive the discharge to the prejudice of his judgment creditor whose lien has attached to the premises in question. Campion v. Whitney, 30 Minn. 177.

In Tennessee it is necessary that the surety, in order to be bound by the new promise, should not only know the facts which constitute the ground of discharge, but he must know that he is in fact discharged. Hoss v. Crouch, (Tenn. Ch. 1898) 48 S. W. Rep. 724; Spurlock v. Union Bank, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 336; Rosson v. Carroll, 90 Tenn. 133; Williams v. Union Bank, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 441. Contra, Stevens v. Lynch, 12 East 38.

New Promise in Writing. — In some jurisdictions the new promise is required to be in writing, as in case of a promise to pay a debt barred by limitations. Mulkey v. Long, (Idaho 1897) 47 Pac. Rep. 949; Hooper v. Pike, 70 Minn. 84, 68 Am. St. Rep. 512.

In New York the new promise of the surety must be clearly proved and will not be inferred from the mere recognition of the obligation as a binding one. Crandall v. Moston, 24 N. Y. App. Div. 547.

to cases of release without satisfaction¹ and to extensions of time.² No reservation could be effectual in cases where the main contract is itself changed or discharged by an accord and satisfaction, or where the discharge results from the improper disposition of securities. It certainly is anomalous that under any circumstances an act or agreement between the creditor and principal, which as a matter of law would ordinarily operate to discharge the surety, can be given an entirely different effect by the mere fact that they agree that such legal consequence shall not follow. The explanation is found in the fact that the discharge of the surety in the ordinary case of release or extension of time is partly based upon the equitable grounds of impairment or postponement of the surety's right of subrogation. Now, when the creditor, by an express agreement with the principal, reserves his right to proceed against the surety, the surety's right of subrogation is not affected. By entering into such an agreement the debtor impliedly consents that whatever remedies his surety has against him shall remain intact. The surety is therefore at liberty to pay the debt at once and proceed against the principal for reimbursement.³ It would appear that where time is extended this reasoning would not quite suffice, inasmuch as the extension, in addition to postponing the surety in his right of subrogation, also involves a change of the main contract. The exception, however, is fully established. In order to evade the difficulty here indicated, the English as well as some American authorities have often said that an agreement to release the principal, accompanied by a reservation of rights against the surety, is to be given the effect of a covenant not to sue.⁴ This view, though plausible enough, is often inconsistent with the plain import of the release, and is now seldom advanced.⁵

How Reservation to Be Made.—A parol reservation of rights against a surety is sufficient,⁶ but, of course, parol evidence of a prior agreement is not admissible where the subsequent written release contains no reservation,⁷ nor is evidence of parol reservation admissible to vary a written release.¹ It is not necessary that the surety should have knowledge of the fact that the release reserving the right of action against him has been executed,² but the reservation should be explicitly made.³

13. Discharge of Surety by Estoppel of Creditor.—A creditor is precluded from enforcing an obligation against a surety where the surety, acting upon an agreement with the creditor or upon representations made by him, foregoes the purpose of seeking relief or of taking indemnity at the time when it may be had.⁴ Thus, if the surety withdraws an appeal on the promise of the creditor to look alone to the principal,⁵ or releases security already in his hands,⁶ or refrains from giving the creditor notice to sue,⁷ or gives merely a verbal instead of a written notice,⁸ he is in effect discharged, and the creditor cannot thereafter hold him liable. If the creditor tells the surety that the debt is paid or secured and that he need trouble himself no further, the surety may safely act upon the representation,⁹ as it would be a fraud on the part of the creditor were he allowed to call on the surety after lulling him into a sense of security and causing him to refrain from exerting himself to get indemnity.¹⁰

A Bare Statement or Promise which does not cause the surety to slumber on his rights or to alter his position for the worse will not estop the principal.¹¹

Some Detriment Must Be Incurred or Benefit Forborne by the surety or there will be no estoppel. Forbearance to sue when nothing could be recovered is no detriment to the surety. Hence no estoppel arises unless the principal is solvent at the time the surety foregoes the right to proceed against him to obtain indemnity or to compel the payment of the debt.¹²

An Estoppel by Misrepresentation in Favor of One Surety will not be extended so as to release another.¹

14. Condition Subsequent — Diversion or Misapplication of Proceeds. — Not infrequently it is expressly agreed between the surety and the principal debtor, at the time the relation of suretyship is entered into, that money to be raised on their joint obligation shall be used for a specified purpose. Agreements of this kind give the surety a right to insist that the proceeds shall be applied in accordance therewith,² and a subsequent holder with notice cannot enforce the obligation against the surety if the condition be not fulfilled. Liability in such cases is, however, usually determined on principles applicable to commercial paper, and the subject is elsewhere fully treated.³

VII. RIGHTS AND REMEDIES AS BETWEEN PRINCIPAL AND CREDITOR. — The principal is entitled, as against the creditor, to be credited, upon the full amount of the indebtedness, with any sum paid thereon by the surety.⁴ But a sum deposited by the surety with the creditor merely as an indemnity and not as a payment will not release the principal pro tanto.⁵

A Bill in Equity will lie against the principal, though there be an adequate remedy at law against the surety.⁶

Effect of Release as Surety. — Within the familiar principle that the release of one joint debtor will discharge the other only when the effect of the release will be to increase the original responsibilities of the latter, the release of a surety does in no wise increase the legal or equitable responsibilities of the principal and, therefore, does not discharge him from liability to the creditor.⁷ Nor is the operation of this rule excluded by the merger of the original contract of indebtedness in a joint judgment against principal and surety.⁸

or a definite term is expressed in the obligation, it is generally presumed that the surety intends to guarantee the due performance by the principal of the duties of the office for such term only, and the surety is not liable for acts committed after the expiration of the term.¹ But if the office is for an indefinite and not a fixed period of time, the surety on a bond, which does not contain any stipulation limiting the period for which he shall be liable, is liable so long as the principal shall continuously hold the office.²

Where the Term of Office Is Extended by Statute After the Execution of the Bond, the sureties thereon are not liable for the faults occurring during the extended term, though the statutes provide that the officer shall continue in office until his successor is elected and qualified,³ and though the bond is conditioned for the performance of such additional duties as might thereafter be imposed upon the officer, as such condition only applies to such duties as might be required to be performed during the period of liability fixed by the bond.⁴

Under Statutes Continuing the Term of an Office until a Successor should be elected or appointed and qualified, there is a conflict of authority as to how long the liability of the surety continues. In some jurisdictions, it is held that the liability of the surety continues subsequent to the expiration of the original term, so long as the principal holds over;⁵ in other jurisdictions it is held that the liability of the surety under such a statute continues for such a reasonable period as with due diligence would enable the successor to be appointed and qualified.⁶

On the Resignation, Suspension, or Removal of the principal from the office, his surety ceases to be responsible for any act of his done thereafter.¹

b. DIFFERENT BONDS GIVEN DURING SAME TERM — (1) Substitution of New Bond — (a) Liability of Surety on Original Bond. — When a new bond has been filed by an officer, in compliance with an order made on due application of the surety on the original bond, under statutory provisions, the liability of the surety on the original bond ceases when the officer gives the new bond in accordance with the order or when the office is declared vacant for a failure so to do, for all subsequent acts.² To work a release of the surety on the original bond from liability for future defaults, the provisions of the statute must be followed;³ such surety is not released when a voluntary bond is given for which he has not made application.⁴

(b) Liability of Surety on Substituted Bond. — The liability of a surety on a new bond, given in substitution of a prior bond during the same term, follows the general rule that, unless the bond given is retrospective in its terms, it does not cover past delinquencies.⁵ A bond given in lieu of a prior bond, in general terms conditioned that the principal shall well and faithfully in all things discharge the duties of the office during his continuance in said office, was held to be retrospective in its operation.⁶

(2) Additional Bonds — (a) Defaults Prior to Execution of New Bond. — The general rule is that a surety on an additional bond is not liable for any default occurring before he became surety, unless the bond was specially so drawn as to cover past as well as prospective delinquencies.⁷

(b) Defaults After Execution of New Bond. — On the giving an additional bond, the liability of the surety on the new bond and of the surety on the original bond is cumulative, and the sureties on the two bonds are liable for subsequent defaults.¹

(3) Annual Bonds. — When an officer, holding for a longer term than one year, is required by statute to give annual bonds, there is conflict in the cases as to the liability of the sureties on the respective bonds. It has been held on the one hand that such bonds are cumulative,² and on the other hand that the surety of each year is responsible for the defaults of his principal during the time between giving the bond passed by him and the execution of the next year's bond.³

c. BONDS GIVEN FOR SUCCESSIVE TERMS — (1) In General. — The general rule that a surety on an official bond is only liable for defaults of his principal occurring during the term for which he is surety applies where the principal is an incumbent of the office to which the bond relates for successive terms, and gives successive bonds with different sets of sureties.⁴

(2) As to Balance in Hands of Officer from Previous Term — (a) Where Balance Actually Exists. — As to moneys or property remaining in the possession of an officer serving for successive terms, at the beginning of a new term, which were, however, received in a previous term, the sureties for the new term and not those for the previous term are generally liable. And this liability continues throughout the new term or until such moneys or property are turned over to the proper authorities.⁵

But see Longmire v. Fain, 89 Tenn. 393, under a statute providing that "every such additional bond is of like force and obligation, * * * and subject to the same remedies as the first official bond;" and McClaskey v. Barr, 79 Fed. Rep. 408, an additional bond for costs.

(b) Previous Misappropriation of Alleged Balance. — A surety for a new term of an officer serving for successive terms is liable for any balance which is chargeable to such officer at the beginning of the new term as shown by his accounts or otherwise, although in fact such balance does not really exist, but was misappropriated during the previous term. But by the weight of authority such liability is prima facie only and may be overcome by evidence showing that such balance never really existed at the beginning of the new term.¹ There is some authority, however, to the effect that where the principal reports at the beginning of his new term a balance on hand from the previous term his surety for the new term will be estopped from afterwards showing that there had been a misappropriation of such alleged balance during the previous term.²

(3) Application of Payments to Defaults of Previous Term — Application Made by Principal. — Where moneys received by a principal in his subsequent term are applied by him to payment of defaults of his previous term, the sureties of the previous term are released from liability for such defaults and the sureties of the subsequent term are liable for the moneys so received and misapplied, provided such misapplication of moneys was not known to the proper government authorities receiving such payments.³

ferent rule applies, it being held that such application does not release the sureties for the prior term and charge those for the subsequent term, although the principal concurred in the application.¹

2. Voluntary Bonds — a. BOND NOT REQUIRED BY STATUTE. — There is some diversity of opinion as to the effect of a bond given by a public officer conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of the office, when no bond is required by statute. According to the weight of authority, a bond so given binds both principal and sureties, provided it was given voluntarily and was not the result of coercion of any sort.² There are some decisions, however, to the effect that official bonds are void in the absence of a statute requiring their execution either as a condition precedent to entering on or continuing in the discharge of official duty, or as a duty which the officer is required to perform.³

Coercion as Vitiating Bond. — The decisions make a clear distinction between official bonds and other obligations in respect to the nature of the coercion that will operate to invalidate a bond. The general rule is that a contract will be regarded as entered into voluntarily and therefore binding on the promisor or obligor, unless he acted under the influence of such threats or physical force as constitute duress in law.⁴ But in the case of official bonds the cases lay down the doctrine that an official bond given when no bond is required by law is void, if extorted by compulsion, though the compulsion falls short of duress.⁵

b. BOND NOT IN CONFORMITY WITH STATUTE — (1) General Rule. — It has frequently happened in respect to official bonds required by statute that there has been a want of strict conformity with the statutory provisions; and

It is sufficient to make the bond a valid obligation that it is voluntarily given, and that the office and the duties assigned to the officer and covered by the bond are duly authorized by law. U. S. v. Rogers, 28 Fed. Rep. 607.

Unauthorized Appointment of Officer. — If an officer is appointed wholly without authority of law, an official bond given by him is void. Thus where a city court appointed a collector of city taxes when there was no statute authorizing such appointment it was held that a bond given by such collector was not binding on the sureties. Com. v. Jackson, 1 Leigh (Va.) 485.

And the same rule was applied to a bond given by a person who had been appointed constable when no authority existed for the appointment of such an officer. In such a case, as well as in a case where the office does not exist, the appointee is not a de facto officer but a mere usurper. Tinsley v. Kirby, 17 S. Car. 1.

As to the liability in general of the sureties of de facto officers, see the title DE FACTO OFFICERS, vol. 8, p. 807.

5. Official Bond Avoided by Coercion. — U. S. v. Tingey, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 115. In this case a bond imposing conditions not authorized by law was required of the officer on pain of removing him from his office, and the court held that the bond was void.

And in Logan County v. Harvey, 6 Okla. 629, it was held that there was such coercion as avoided the bond where the officer was required to give it as a condition precedent to his being allowed to enter on and discharge the duties of the office and receive the emoluments thereof.

But in Moses v. U. S., 166 U. S. 571, it was held, where an administrative officer of the United States required of another, as a condition of his remaining in an office from which his superior had a right to remove him and substitute another in his stead, that he should give a bond for the faithful performance of the duties of such office, that a bond given by such officer for the purpose of retaining his office was a valid and binding obligation on him and his sureties though not required by any express statutory provision.

in such cases it has been uniformly held that the bond, though void as a statutory bond, is valid and enforceable as a common-law obligation.¹ The result of such nonconformity is that none of the statutory provisions for the enforcement of the bond are applicable, and no remedy can be had except according to the rules of the common law. Thus, the summary proceedings authorized to be taken in the case of official bonds will not lie,² and successive recoveries cannot be had, the liability of the obligors in a common-law bond being exhausted as soon as a recovery is had there.³ So, too, if the obligee named in the bond is not according to the statute, his successors in office cannot sue on it by virtue of a provision that an official bond may be sued on by the successors of the officer to whom the bond is required to be made payable.⁴

Instances of Nonconformity. — According to this rule official bonds have been held to be enforceable as common-law bonds when voluntarily executed though they vary from the statutory directions as to the penalties and conditions imposed,⁵ or are given to obligees other than the statute prescribes,⁶ or are not given within the time required by law.⁷

(2) Statutory Provisions. — In some states it is provided by statute that noncompliance with the statute in executing an official bond required by law shall not affect its validity as such.⁸

3. General and Special Bonds. — The general rule is, that where an officer is required to perform a duty which is special in its nature, and he is required to give a special bond for the faithful performance of such duty, in the absence of any declaration that the general bondsmen shall also be liable, no such lia-

Superadded Conditions Regarded as Surplusage. — Though incorrect recitals in the condition may sometimes vitiate the bond, as in case of the misdescription of a judgment in a writ of error or injunction bond, yet where a statutory bond merely superadds a condition which the statute does not require, its validity even as a statutory bond is not affected by the surplus matter, which will be rejected as surplusage. Walker v. ACTS OR OMISSIONS OF PRINCIPAL GENERALLY CONSIDERED — Acts of Principal. — A surety on an official bond is not in every instance liable for the wrongful acts of the principal. There are many instances in which the principal will be liable individually, wherein there is no breach of the surety's contract.³ The authorities are agreed, however, that for all acts of the principal done *virtute officii*⁴ the surety is liable,⁵ provided, of course, the surety's undertaking extends to all

Watts*, 23 Ark. 304, in which it was held, with much hesitation, that the sheriff, as public administrator, and the sureties on his official bond, were responsible for his misconduct in discharging the duties of public administrator, notwithstanding the execution of a special administration bond in each estate taken by him.

A sheriff gave general bond as tax collector, and special bond for collection of special taxes. the duties of the office.¹ But there is a conflict of authority as to acts done colore officii. There are some cases to the effect that the surety is not liable for such acts.² But there are other cases to the effect that the surety is liable.³

Omissions of Principal. — The surety on an official bond is liable for an omission by the principal to perform some duty imposed upon him by law and included within the terms of the surety's undertaking.⁴

b. PRE-EXISTING AND SUBSEQUENTLY IMPOSED DUTIES — Pre-existing Duties. — While it may be said generally that the duties of the principal for which the surety is responsible must be determined from the surety's contract as set out in the bond,⁵ yet where the bond does not otherwise specify it will be presumed that the surety contracted with reference to the duties of the office as they existed at the time his undertaking was entered into,⁶ and the law relating thereto becomes a part of such undertaking, though not expressly referred to.⁷

Subsequently Imposed Duties. — In the absence of express provisions in the bond to the contrary, a surety at the time of executing an official bond is presumed to contemplate subsequent changes and additions in the duties of the office to which the bond relates which do not essentially change the nature and character of the office, and to contract with reference to such changes and additions.⁸ But he is not presumed to contract with reference to subsequently imposed duties which are not fairly appropriate and germane to the office unless the words of his undertaking or the law in force at its date by a fair and reasonable construction bring such duties within its provisions.¹

By Statute in some states every official bond must bind the principal to perform all duties now or hereafter required of his office by law, and where such a statute exists the surety is liable for the proper performance of subsequently imposed duties though such duties are not appropriate to the office as it existed when the bond was executed.²

Effect of New Duties Not Germane on Surety's Liability. — Where subsequently imposed duties are not within a surety's undertaking because not germane to the office, the surety is generally held liable nevertheless to the extent of the duties which the bond was given to secure.³ But the rule in England is that the surety ceases to be liable for the duties which he undertook to secure.⁴

In Alabama every official bond is obligatory on the principal and surety thereon for the faithful discharge of any duties which may be required of such officer by any law passed subsequently to the execution of such bond, although no such condition is expressed therein. c. ACTS OR OMISSIONS OF OTHER OFFICERS. — The sureties on the official bond of a public officer are not exempt from liability for any default of their principal by reason of the fact that such default occurred in consequence of the act or omission of another officer, as where such other officer neglected to require a periodical accounting by the principal in the bond according to law, or permitted him to remain in office after knowledge of his incompetency, dishonesty, or dereliction of duty, instead of removing him, and without informing the sureties of the facts.¹ The principle here involved is that the statutory provisions for supervising the conduct of subordinate public officers are solely for the security and convenience of the government, and form no part of the contract of the sureties on the official bonds of such officers.² Furthermore, the government is not responsible for the wrongful conduct of its officers, and sureties are presumed to enter on their contract with full knowledge of this rule of law and to consent to be dealt with accordingly.³

In U. S. Kirkpatrick, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 720, it was held that where the laws require quarterly or other periodical accounts and settlements, a mere omission to bring a suit on the neglect of the officer or agent to account, would not discharge his sureties.

In Crown v. Com., 84 Va. 282, 10 Am. St. Rep. 839, it was held that a failure to require a county treasurer to make prompt settlement did not discharge his sureties.

In Wilson v. Glover, 3 Pa. St. 404, it was held that an agreement by county commissioners without authority of law to discharge a surety of a tax collector, and accept another in his place, does not in fact discharge him until the agreement has been performed, and the substituted surety has given a bond, for the new security must be such a one as would have been a good original security.

The General Rule is that the sureties on the official bond of a public officer can make no defense to an action on the bond that could not be made by their principal. Boone County v. Jones, 54 Iowa 699, 37 Am. Rep. 229.

2. Surface.—The surface of land has been held to mean that part of the land which is capable of being used for agricultural purposes. Murray v. Allred, 100 Tenn. 100. See also Midland R. Co. v. Checkley, L. R. 4 Eq. 19; Hext v. Gill, L. R. 7 Ch. 699; Atty.-Gen. v. Tomline, 5 Ch. D. 750.

Artificial Surface.—Under the Ohio statute providing that the owner of a city lot should be liable for damages occasioned to buildings on adjoining lots by excavations of more than nine feet below the surface of the adjoining lots, it was held that the word surface was to be understood as designating the actual existing surface, whether the natural surface or the result of filling or grading. Burkhardt v. Hanley, 23 Ohio St. 558. See the title LATERAL AND SUBJACENT SUPPORT, vol. 18, p. 547.

Surface Rights—Mining. (See also the title MINES AND MINING CLAIMS, vol. 20, p. 722.)—In Keweenaw Assoc. v. Friedrich, 112 Mich. 442, in a bill for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of the "surface rights" to certain land, a decree was refused, on the ground that the minds of the parties had not met upon the meaning of the term "surface rights." The court said: "If the term 'surface rights' has a definite meaning, as used in this agreement, it must be a right to a fee in the lands, subject to a reservation of the minerals in the grantor." Such a sale would carry no right to enter and explore for minerals at all times.

Subjacent Support. (See also the title LATERAL AND SUBJACENT SUPPORT, vol. 18, p. 555 et seq.)—In Yandes v. Wright, 66 Ind. 319, 32 Am. Rep. 114, discussing the right which a surface proprietor has to the support of the surface from the owners of lower strata in the same land, it was said: "The word surface, as used in the books, means not merely the geometrical superficies without thickness, but includes whatever earth, soil, or land lies above and superincumbent on the mine. Surface, therefore, includes the appellee's mine which lies above the appellants' mine and below the top surface, which still may remain undisturbed and uninjured in the original grantor."

The extent of the right of subjacent support is that enough minerals must be left in their place under the land to support the surface in its natural state. Marvin v. Brewster Iron Min. Co., 55 N. Y. 556, 14 Am. Rep. 322.

3. Surface Water.—In Gray v. McWilliams,

98 Cal. 163, it was said: "Surface water is usually defined to be such as falls from the clouds in the form of rain or snow, or rises to the surface in springs."

In Crawford v. Rambo, 44 Ohio St. 282, it was said: "Surface water is that which is diffused over the surface of the ground, derived from falling rains and melting snows, and continues to be such until it reaches some well-defined channel in which it is accustomed to, and does, flow with other waters, whether derived from the surface or springs; and it then becomes the running water of a stream, and ceases to be surface water." See also Case v. Hoffman, 84 Wis. 444; Hoyt v. Hudson, 27 Wis. 656.

Flood Water from River.—In O'Connell v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 87 Ga. 247, it was said: "It is contended by defendant's counsel that the overflow from a river in time of flood or freshet is surface water, against which, by the common law, a man may protect himself without regard to the consequences to his neighbor. * * * If the flood water becomes severed from the main current, or leaves the stream never to return, and spreads out over the lower ground, it has become surface water. But if it forms a continuous body with the water flowing in the ordinary channel, or if it departs from such channel animo revertendi, presently to return, as by the recession of the waters, it is to be regarded as still a part of the river."

Accordingly, overflowed waters from a river in time of flood have been held to be surface water in a number of cases. Taylor v. Fickas, 64 Ind. 167; Cario, etc., R. Co. v. Stevens, 73 Ind. 278; Shelbyville, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Green, 99 Ind. 205; McCormick v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 57 Mo. 433; Shane v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 71 Mo. 237; Abbott v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 83 Mo. 271, 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 108.

In the majority of cases, however, it is held that the flood waters of a river are not surface waters.

England.—Briscoe v. Drought, 11 Ir. C. L. 250; Rex v. Trafford, 1 B. & Ad. 874, 20 E. C. L. 498; Menzies v. Breadalbane, 3 Bligh N. S. 414; Lawrence v. Great Northern R. Co., 16 Q. B. 643, 71 E. C. L. 643.

2. Surgery. — In Hewitt v. Charier, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 353, it was held that a person who practices bonesetting and reducing sprains, swellings, and contraction of the sinews by friction and fomentation, but no other branch of the healing art, was a person practicing surgery, within the meaning of Stat. Mass. 1818, c. 113, § 1, which provided that no person practicing physic or surgery should be entitled to the benefit of law for the recovery of his fees unless he should have been licensed by the Massachusetts Medical Society or graduated a doctor in medicine in Harvard University. See also Bragg v. State, 134 Ala. 165.

Accumulated Surplus. — See ACCUMULATED SURPLUS (OF A CORPORATION), vol. 1, p. 481, and see State v. Bank of Commerce, 95 Tenn. 241.

Surplus Assets. — In In re New Transvaal Co., (1896) 2 Ch. 750, it was held that the term "surplus assets" when used in articles of association providing for distribution among the shareholders on winding up, had no such recognized technical meaning that a court was bound to construe it as referring to the assets after providing only for debts, liabilities, and costs, without recouping paid-up capital.

Corporations. — When applied to corporations surplus includes the entire surplus or assets over the liabilities. Leather Manufacturers Nat. Bank v. Treat, 116 Fed. Rep. 774.

Exempt Property. — In determining for purposes of taxation the surplus of a person's ratable personal estate over and above his actual indebtedness, it has been held that exempt shares in a corporation should not be included. Hall v. Bain, 18 R. I. 413. See also the title TAXATION (CORPORATE), post.

Insurance. — In speaking of the surplus of a mutual insurance company, the court said: "In a sense, all the funds in the possession of a mutual insurance company, over and above its immediate and present liabilities, may be regarded as surplus. * * * The word surplus, like the word 'liabilities,' has acquired a special meaning in this branch of the insurance business. * * * As applied in that class of insurance, the liabilities of a company do not represent the full amount of outstanding policies. So the word surplus is used to designate the amount of funds in the hands of the company after deducting its liabilities, as ascertained by certain rules adopted by the insurance department for determining the value of each risk. Obviously, the word surplus was not used in the defendant's charter or policy to designate the amount of money in the company's hands which was to be distributed among its policy holders, but to represent the amount which should remain after certain calculated liabilities were deducted." Greeff v. Equitable L. Assur. Soc., 160 N. Y. 33.

Where an insurance company was subject to be taxed on its capital and accumulated surplus, the court said: "The term surplus, as applied to an insurance company, is the fund it has in excess of its capital stock after payment of its debts." State v. Parker, 34 N. J. L. 482.

Same — Surplus Earnings. — In People v. Tax, etc., Com'rs, 76 N. Y. 74, it was said: "Surplus earnings is an amount owned by the company over and above the capital and actual liabilities."

Same — Expert Testimony. — In Fry v. Provident Sav. L. Assur. Soc., (Tenn. Ch. 1896) 38 S. W. Rep. 126, expert testimony was held to be admissible to the effect that the term surplus, as applied to life insurance, means a sum of money or assets which has been accumulated over and above all debts and liabilities of any and all kinds whatsoever.

Surplus Proceeds. — A statute provided that after a railroad should be completed, equipped, and in operation, it should be required to pay into the treasury of the state the surplus proceeds of all land sales. It was held that only so much of such proceeds was to be paid to the state as remained after deducting the amount of all expenses and obligations lawfully incurred by the corporation in completing, equipping, and putting in operation its railroad. Hannibal, etc., R. Co. v. Bartlett, 123 Mass. 10.

Will. — A testator bequeathed all his personality to his wife, "having full confidence that she will leave the surplus to be divided at her decease justly amongst my children." It was held that surplus in this devise meant what was left of the personal estate unconsumed or undisposed of by the widow in her lifetime, and not the balance left after the payment of the debts of the testator. Matter of Pennock, 20 Pa. St. 268.

But in Coate's Appeal, 2 Pa. St. 137, upon the construction of a similar clause in a will, it was held that the word surplus referred to the amount of money or personal estate which remained after the debts, funeral expenses, and legacies were paid, and hence that the sum to be divided was ascertained at the testator's death.

SURPLUSAGE. (See also the title SURPLUSAGE, IRRELEVANT OR REDUNDANT MATTER, 21 ENCYC. OF PL. AND PR. 223.) — Surplusage is defined as matter which is not necessarily relevant to the case and which may be rejected.¹

Same — Personal or Real Property. — The fact that the word surplus has a more appropriate application to personal property or money than to realty has been held not to be decisive against construing it to include real estate also. Lamb v. Lamb, 131 N. Y. 227. See also Chandler's Appeal, 34 Wis. 505.

1. Surplusage. — Adams v. Capital State Bank, 74 Miss. 307.

SURPRISE.

BY LAWRENCE W. WHITNEY.

I. SURPRISE IN EQUITY, 548.

1. Nature and Relations of Subject, 548.
2. Rescission, 549.
3. Specific Performance, 549.
4. Relief Against Forfeitures, 549.

II. SURPRISE IN PRACTICE, 549.

I. SURPRISE IN EQUITY — 1. Nature and Relations of Subject. — Surprise is sometimes classed as a ground of relief against contracts in equity. But to justify equity in interposing, the surprise must be accompanied with fraud and circumvention, or there must have been some influence or mismanagement to mislead the party asking relief, or at least the circumstances must demonstrate that he had no opportunity to use suitable deliberation.¹ The more correct view seems to be that surprise is but evidence from which a court may conclude that the element of consent is wanting in a contract through mistake,² or that the consent was not free because of the presence of fraud, undue influence, or the like vitiating element, and may therefore be warranted in its discretion in declaring the apparent contract rescinded.³ The term "surprise" has, indeed, no technical legal meaning, and it has been said that the ordinary meanings, namely, "the act of taking unawares, the state of being taken

1. Surprise as Ground of Equitable Relief. — 1 Story's Eq. Jur., § 251; McRae v. Malloy, 93 N. Car. 163.

In the circumstances mentioned last — no opportunity to use suitable deliberation — undue influence or advantage taken must appear on the other side. See cases cited infra.

In Bath's Case, 3 Ch. Cas. 115, Lord Somers said that surprise accompanied with fraud and circumvention may be a good ground to set aside a deed in equity, "but any other surprise never was and I hope never will be." To the same effect were the remarks of Baron Powell (p. 56) and Treby, C. J. (p. 74), in the same case.

The view that mere surprise is insufficient ground for rescission unless fraud, mistake, or illegality is present was taken in Graham v. Pancoast, 30 Pa. St. 89; Lynch's Appeal, 97 Pa. St. 349.

In Evans v. Llewellyn, 1 Cox Ch. 333, 2 Bro. C. C. 159, a bill was filed to set aside certain deeds as having been obtained "by fraud and imposition." No actual fraud was shown, but it appeared that the plaintiff, an uneducated man, was induced for a grossly inadequate consideration to deed away rights (of which he had no knowledge until negotiations were begun for the deed) in certain property without consulting his friends, and under moral pressure by the defendant, who reminded him of past favors. Lord Kenyon laid great stress on the position of the parties, and set aside the deed as "improvidently obtained" and because the plaintiff "was taken by surprise; he had not sufficient time to act with caution; and therefore, though there was no actual fraud, it is something like fraud, for an undue advantage was taken of his situation."

This case, which is the leading authority on surprise, was approved in Curson v. Belworthy, 2 H. L. Cas. 742 (Lord Sugden obiter); Baker v. Monk, 4 De G. J. & S. 392; Fry v. Lane, 40 Ch. D. 321.

2. Surprise but Evidence of Want of Consent. — See titles MISTAKE, vol. 20, p. 809; RESCISSION, CANCELLATION, AND REFORMATION, vol. 24, p. 618.

All cases of cancellation or rescission for surprise have been said to partake rather of the nature of mistake than of fraud. See title FRAUD AND DECEIT, vol. 14, pp. 94, 95.

3. Pollock on Contracts (4th Am. ed.) 590 et seq.

The same author says (p. 592): "It seems to follow that what is recorded in such a case as Evans v. Llewellyn, 1 Cox Ch. 333, 2 Bro. C. C. 159, is not an enunciation of law, but an inference of fact."

It must be remembered that cases of rescission are always addressed to the discretion of the court. See the title RESCISSION, etc., vol. 24, p. 610. And that in such a case fraud does not mean deceit or circumvention, but an unconscientious use of the power arising out of circumstances, such as weakness on the one side and advantage taken thereof on the other. Aylesford v. Morris, L. R. 8 Ch. 490. See also the title FRAUD AND DECEIT, vol. 14, pp. 20, 21.

unawares, sudden confusion or perplexity," sufficiently explain its sense in equity.¹

2. Rescission. — It will be seen from the above discussion that rescission on the ground of surprise is properly included under accident, catching bargains, fraud, mistake, undue influence, and other like subjects of equitable jurisprudence.² But instances wherein this element has been conspicuously prominent are collected in the notes.³

3. Specific Performance. — A court of equity will exercise its discretion in decreeing specific performance where the party seeking the decree has obtained by surprise an unconscionable bargain, or where the other party appears to have entered into the contract rashly and improvidently and the consideration is grossly inadequate.⁴ The remedies by specific performance and rescission are not reciprocal, and though relief to one party by specific performance may be denied, rescission may be granted at the suit of the other.⁵

4. Relief against Forfeitures. — On the ground of surprise or accident * relief against forfeitures may be decreed in equity.⁷

II. SURPRISE IN PRACTICE. — In practice, a judgment, verdict, or order may be set aside on the ground of surprise, if the court thinks that substantial injustice has been done.⁶ Surprise in this connection is said to denote an

1. Surprise Defined. — 1 Story's Eq. Jur., § 120, note, quoting Johnson's Dict. See also Davis v. Steuben School Tp., 19 Ind. App. 706; Pollock on Contracts (4th Am. ed.) 591.

Surprise "is a word of general signification, so general and so uncertain that it is impossible to fix it; a man is surprised in every rash and indiscreet action, or whatsoever is not done with so much judgment and consideration as it ought to be." Lord Somers in Bath's Case, 3 Ch. Cas. 114.

2. Grounds of Equitable Relief. — See titles ACCIDENT (IN EQUITY), vol. 1, p. 277; CATCHING BARGAIN, vol. 5, p. 764; FRAUD AND DECEIT, vol. 14, p. 12, especially pp. 20, 94; MISTAKE, vol. 20, p. 805; UNDUE INFLUENCE.

As to the Manner of Equitable Relief and the limits of equitable discretion, see the title RESCISSION, CANCELLATION, AND REFORMATION, vol. 24, p. 604.

3. Rescission for Surprise — Circumstances Showing Constructive Fraud. — Evans v. Llewellyn, 1 Cox Ch. 333, 2 Bro. C. C. 150; Willan v. Willan, 16 Ves. Jr. 84; Reese v. Wyman, 9 Ga. 430; Bailey v. Jones, 14 Ga. 384; Newman v. Claffin Co., 107 Ga. 89; Jordan v. Stevens, 51 Me. 78, 81 Am. Dec. 556; Coffman v. Lookout Bank, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 232, 40 Am. Rep. 31. See also the titles CONSTRUCTIVE FRAUDS, vol. 7, p. 3; FRAUD AND DECEIT, vol. 14, pp. 20, 21, 94; RESCISSION, vol. 24, p. 613 et seq.

A mistake of law accompanied by surprise, which renders the enforcement of the contract inequitable (which is nothing after all but fraud), will justify a decree for its rescission and cancellation. Willan v. Willan, 16 Ves. Jr. 84; 1 Story's Eq. Jur., § 134.

And see Carley v. Lewis, 24 Ind. 23, where, however, the cancellation seems to have been only on payment of the instrument, and not of the character in view here.

Use of Undue Persuasion or Influence. — Wheeler v. Smith, 9 How. (U. S.) 55; Gibbs v. New York L. Ins., etc., Co., (Supm. Ct. Spec. T.) 14 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 1. See also title UNDUE INFLUENCE.

Improvidence and Absence of Independent Advice. — Miller v. Simonds, 72 Mo. 669; Gibbs v. New York L. Ins., etc., Co., (Supm. Ct. Spec. T.) 14 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 1.

4. Specific Performance of Tainted Contracts Refused. — Twining v. Morrice, 2 Bro. C. C. 326; Townshend v. Stangroom, 6 Ves. Jr. 332; Mortlock v. Buller, 10 Ves. Jr. 305; Bowen v. Waters, 2 Paine (U. S.) 1. See also the titles FRAUD AND DECEIT, vol. 14, p. 95; SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE, vol. 26, pp. 22, 45, 68, 69.

5. See the title RESCISSION, etc., vol. 24, p. 612.

Specific Performance Is Often Denied where the court would not under the circumstances decree rescission. Bowen v. Waters, 2 Paine (U. S.) 1; Graham v. Pancoast, 30 Pa. St. 89; Lynch's Appeal, 97 Pa. St. 349.

6. That "accident" and "surprise" are often synonymous, see infra, this title, Surprise in Practice, and the title ACCIDENT (IN EQUITY), vol. 1, p. 278.

7. Relief Against Forfeitures. — Eaton v. Lyon, 3 Ves. Jr. 690; Hill v. Barclay, 18 Ves. Jr. 56; Bamford v. Creasy, 3 Giff. 675; Barrow v. Isaacs, (1891) 1 Q. B. 425. See also the title ACCIDENT (IN EQUITY), vol. 1, p. 279.

8. See in this work the title JUDGMENTS, vol. 17, p. 831. See also in the ENCYCLOPEDIA OF PLEADING AND PRACTICE the following titles: DECREES, vol. 5, p. 1012; DEFAULTS, vol. 6, p. 166; NEW TRIAL, vol. 14, p. 722, 839; OPENING, AMENDING, AND VACATING JUDGMENTS, vol. 15, pp. 234, 245; ORDERS, vol. 15, pp. 324, 354.

Continuance Granted for Surprise. — See title CONTINUANCES, 4 ENCYC. PL. AND PR. 863.

As to Equitable Relief Against Judgments on the ground of surprise, see in this work the title INJUNCTIONS, vol. 16, p. 374 et seq., especially p. 385. See also the title BILLS TO IMPEACH DECREES, etc., 3 ENCYC. PL. AND PR. 608.

Equity may also grant a new trial, but never where the matter claimed to constitute surprise was known in time to have obtained redress by applying for a new trial in a court of law Harrison v. Harrison, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 137.

unforeseen disappointment in some reasonable expectation against which ordinary prudence would not have afforded protection.¹

SURREBUTTER. — The surrebutter is the plaintiff's answer of fact to the defendant's rebutter.²

SURREJOINDER. — The surrejoinder is the plaintiff's answer of fact to the defendant's rejoinder.³

SURRENDER. — To surrender means to cancel or yield up.⁴ A surrender is the yielding up of an estate for life or years to him who has the immediate estate in reversion or remainder, wherein the estate for life or years may drown by mutual agreement.⁵

1. Surprise in Practice Defined. — Sheftall v. Clay, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 7; Peers v. Davis, 29 Mo. 184; Fretwell v. Laffoon, 77 Mo. 26; Patrick v. Boonville Gas Light Co., 17 Mo. App. 462. See also Gidionsen v. Union Depot R. Co., 129 Mo. 401.

Accident and Surprise, though not strictly synonymous, have been said to be the same in legal practice. McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225; Zimmerer v. Fremont Nat. Bank, 59 Neb. 661. And see the title ACCIDENT (IN EQUITY), vol. 1, p. 278.

2. Surrebutte — See the title REJOINDERS AND SUBSEQUENT PLEADINGS, 18 ENCYC. OF PL. AND PR. 70.

3. Surrejoinder. — See the title REJOINDERS AND SUBSEQUENT PLEADINGS, 18 ENCYC. OF PL. AND PR. 70.

4. Surrender. — Wells v. Vermont L. Ins. Co., 28 Ind. App. 620.

Surrendered means yielded, rendered, or delivered. Nolander v. Burns, 48 Minn. 17.

Actual Delivery. — Where a funding act provided that the state treasurer, upon surrender to him of outstanding bonds of the state by the holders, might issue new coupon bonds or certificates to the holders, it was held that surrender imported that the old bonds should be delivered up to the treasurer, as the legislative intent was to insist upon strict compliance with the requirements of the act. Lord v. Bates, 48 S. Car. 95. But in Ex p. Barnwell, 8 S. Car. 269, it was said: "When the legislature, through the act, speaks of 'the surrender' of such certificates, it meant nothing more than that the holder, on receiving his coupon bonds or certificate 'of stock' to the amount of fifty per centum for his interest due, should deliver to the treasurer an order to fund it as required by the act, so that it might be shown that the interest which had accrued on his old certificate had been paid and satisfied by the delivery of the new one, in conformity with the prescribed directions."

Return. — In holding that an officer who had attached chattels and removed them for keeping was not bound, on receiving a forthcoming bond, to return them to the place from which he had removed them, the court said: "The statute only says he shall surrender them. To surrender means to relinquish or give up, and it means nothing more, unless the meaning is extended by construction." Clark v. Wilson, 14 R. I. 13.

Surrender and Assignment Distinguished. — See Scott v. Scott, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 159, stated under the title ASSIGNMENTS, vol. 2, p. 1010. Compare Burgwyn v. Hall, 108 N. Car. 491.

Surrender of Charter or Franchise. — See the title DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATIONS, vol. 9, p. 560 et seq.

Surrender and Give Up. — In Simpson v. Hartman, 27 U. C. Q. B. 466, the court said: "We think the words 'surrender and give up to said Henry Simmons, his heirs and assigns,' may be upheld as equal to the statutable words 'depart with.'"

Preferences — Bankruptcy. — See In re Black, 17 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 399, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,459; In re Stein, 16 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 569, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,352. And see the title INSOLVENCY AND BANKRUPTCY, vol. 16, p. 690.

Shares of Stock. — See In re Dronfield Silkestone Coal Co., 17 Ch. D. 76.

Transfer of Title. — An indictment charged a defendant with unlawfully procuring the surrender and delivery to himself of the funds of a national bank of which he was a director. In holding the indictment sufficient, in Evans v. U. S., 153 U. S. 591, the court said: "The general words of a fraudulent misapplication to the use and benefit of the defendant, and of an intent by so doing to defraud the bank, are of themselves inconsistent with an honest purpose. Indeed, the word surrender carries with it something more than a bare delivery, and indicates a transfer of title as well as of possession."

Surrender Value — Insurance. — In Hazen v. Massachusetts Mut. L. Ins. Co., 170 Mass. 256, it was said: "The words 'shall be a surrender value payable in cash,' in Stat. 1880, c. 232, § 4, and in Pub. Stat., c. 119, § 164, must be held to import an obligation imposed upon the insurer to pay to some one, upon the surrender of the policy under the circumstances named in the statute, an amount or 'value' to be fixed in the method directed by the statute." See also the title LIFE INSURANCE, vol. 19, p. 83.

In In re Welling (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. Rep. 192, upon the meaning of the words "cash surrender value" as applied to the policy of insurance of a bankrupt, the court said: "The term 'cash surrender value,' therein employed, has a defined and legal meaning, namely, the cash value — ascertainable by known rules — of a contract of insurance abandoned and given up for cancellation to the insurer by the owner, having contract right to do so."

5. Surrender of Estate. — Fisher v. Edington, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 193; Scott v. Scott, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 159. See also Dayton v. Craik, 26 Minn. 133; Bedford v. Terhune, 30 N. Y. 462; Ex p. Gray, Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 89. And see the titles DEEDS, vol. 9, p. 100; MERGER, vol. 20, p. 590;

SURRENDER BY BAIL.—See the titles BAIL (IN CIVIL CASES), vol. 3, pp. 624, 628, 639; BAIL AND RECOGNIZANCE, vol. 3, pp. 708, 725.

SURRENDER OF CRIMINAL.—See the title EXTRADITION, vol. 12, p. 590.

REMAINDERS, REVERSIONS, AND EXECUTORY INTERESTS, vol. 24, pp. 413, 425, 451.

By Tenant to Landlord. (See also the title LANDLORD AND TENANT, vol. 18, p. 355 et seq.)—A surrender is defined to be a yielding up of an estate to the landlord so that the leasehold interest becomes extinct by mutual agreement between the parties. Martin v. Stearns, 52 Iowa 345.

Halstead, 5 N. Y. App. Div. 125, it was said: "The term surrender applies to the termination of a running term before it has expired by the acceptance on the part of the landlord of a surrender of the premises. In the case at bar the term was at an end." And it was held that a mere vacation of the premises was all that was required.

Surrender by Operation of Law.—See the title LANDLORD AND TENANT, vol. 18, p. 359.

I. DEFINITION AND SCOPE OF TITLE. — The word "surrogate," in its literal signification, means a substitute, or one who acts for another. In this sense it was applied in English law to the bishop's chancellor, an officer who usually presided in the bishop's diocesan court, and who, as the representative of the ordinary, performed the judicial duties of that official.¹ In the United States a surrogate was formerly an officer whose powers and duties were ancillary to those of the tribunal which exercised general probate jurisdiction.² But by a process of legislative evolution the surrogate's court has become a tribunal of original probate jurisdiction,³ and in this latter signification is the subject here under consideration.⁴ The general jurisdiction and powers, together with other matters relating to probate courts, have been treated in other titles in this work.⁵ There remains the equitable jurisdiction of these courts, which is treated in the succeeding section.

2. United States. — See Brick's Estate, (Surrogate Ct.) 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 12, which contains an interesting and instructive history of the Surrogate's Court of New York, from the earliest colonial period to the date of the opinion. See also 2 Kent's Com. 409; Judge Daly's historical sketch of the judicial tribunals of New York from 1623 to 1846, printed in 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) xvii.

In Wales v. Willard, 2 Mass. 120, Parsons, C. J., said: "The county courts of probate were never established by any statute until the Act of March 12, 1784. Before the Revolution the judges of probate were considered as surrogates of the governor and council, who derived from the royal charter the authority to prove wills and to grant administrations." See also Matter of Evans, 29 N. J. Eq. 571, holding that the Orphans' Court may review the surrogate's acts on appeal.

II. EQUITY JURISDICTION.—Probate courts are not, generally speaking, courts of equity, and therefore are not possessed of general equity powers.¹ In relation to matters within their limited jurisdiction they possess, however, many of the powers usually exercised by courts of equity,² and as to such matters they apply the rules and principles of equity and proceed in some respects after the manner of such courts.³ In some jurisdictions probate courts have the power to compel the specific performance, by the heirs or personal representatives, of contracts made by decedents.¹ Probate courts have not, as a rule, the power to grant injunctions.² Their power to issue writs of habeas corpus³ and certiorari⁴ varies in different jurisdictions.

SURROUNDING THE CASE.—See note 5.

SURVEY. (See also the titles BOUNDARIES, vol. 4, p. 756; DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE, vol. 9, p. 877; REVENUE LAWS, vol. 24, p. 883; SEAMEN, vol. 25, p. 83; SHIPS AND SHIPPING, vol. 25, p. 854; STATE AND PUBLIC LANDS, vol. 26, p. 197.)—Ordinarily, a survey is the act of making an official examination to determine extent, dimensions, form, situation, topographical features, quantity, condition, or value. The word is used also to denote an exhibit, diagram, or report setting forth the result of such examination.⁶

Right to Issue in Alabama.—Wilson v. Scott, 42 Ala. 348.

5. Circumstances Surrounding the Case.—Dufour v. Central Pac. R. Co., 67 Cal. 324. See generally the title INSTRUCTIONS, 11 ENCYC. OF PL. AND PR. 47.

6. A Survey of Land is the actual measure-ment of land, ascertaining the contents by run-ning lines and angles, marking them, and fixing corners and boundaries. Winter v. U. S., Hempst. (U. S.) 371.

A Chamber Survey is one that has never been made upon the ground; but where a survey has been returned and accepted without a caveat, the presumption after twenty-one years is juris et de jure that it was made on the ground. Packer v. Schrader Min., etc., Co., 97 Pa. St. 383.

Necessity of Map.—It has been held that the term survey does not ex vi termini mean a map, but also includes a description in words or figures of the lands located. Atty.-Gen. v. Stevens, 1 N. J. Eq. 369, 22 Am. Dec. 526.

So in Vines v. Whitten, 4 Cal. 230, it was said: "To admit in evidence a survey is certainly not confined to the presentation of a map or plat. A survey is the result of measure-ment and calculation, and can be detailed from memory by a witness as well as defined by a diagram."

One Line Left Open.—In Alford v. Dewin, 1 Nev. 214, it was said: "Now, if the three sides of a quadrilateral survey are run, the simple running of a straight line, connecting the ex-tremity of the two side lines, completes the survey. This may be done without difficulty by almost any one. All the data for determin-ing the exact location of the land in the survey is given. We are not prepared to say it is not a survey because one line is left open."

Fire Insurance. (See also the title FIRE IN-SURANCE, vol. 13, p. 107.)—In fire insurance, the word survey sometimes has been restricted to the plan of the premises which accompanies the application for insurance; but it oftener includes also the regular application, consisting of questions and answers, etc. Albion Lead Works v. Williamsburg City F. Ins. Co., 2 Fed. Rep. 479; Denny v. Conway Stock, etc., F. Ins. Co., 13 Gray (Mass.) 497; May v. Buckeye Mut. Ins. Co., 25 Wis. 307.

Marine Insurance. (See also the title MARINE INSURANCE, vol. 19, p. 957.)—In Potter v. Ocean Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 43, it was said: "A survey is a common public docu-ment, looked to both by underwriters and owners as affording the means of ascertaining upon the very spot, at the very time, the state and condition of the ship and other property at hazard. In some policies, as, for example, when what is technically called the 'rotten clause' is inserted, such a document seems in-dispensable, as the survey may amount to a discharge of the underwriters."

Survey to Ascertain Damages to Ship.—See the title SHIPS AND SHIPPING, vol. 25, p. 1030.

Logs and Lumber. (See also the title LOGS AND LUMBER, vol. 19, p. 542 et seq.)—In Antill v. Potter, 69 Minn. 192, it was held that the word survey in the Minnesota statute providing that no survey of any logs except that of the surveyor-general or his deputy shall be received in any court does not mean the scale bill, or the record thereof, or any other written document or record, but means the act of counting and measuring the logs and ascertaining how many feet they contain.

SURVEYOR. — See the title EXPERT AND OPINION EVIDENCE, vol. 12, p. 455.

SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS. — The general rule as to the survival of an action after the death of the plaintiff or defendant is that actions of contract survive and that actions of tort do not; but this strictness of the rule and the distinction has been relaxed and modified considerably by statutes and judicial construction, and is now subject to exceptions and explanation.¹

SURVIVE — SURVIVING — SURVIVOR. (See also the titles ISSUE (DESCENDANTS, vol. 17, p. 561; WILLS.) — To survive means simply to remain in life after the death of another, or after a particular date or the happening of a particular event.² The primary meaning of the word "survive" is to live beyond the life or existence of; to outlive;³ but it also has, according to some lexicographers, a secondary meaning, viz., to live after.⁴

Survivor. — In its ordinary as well as its legal signification, the word "survivor" means one who outlives another; one of two or more persons who lives after the other or others have died.⁵

1. Survival of Actions. — McConaughy v. Bennett, 50 W. Va. 186. See the title SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS, 21 ENCYC. OF PL. AND PR. 309. See also in this work the titles ASSIGNMENTS, vol. 2, p. 1020 et seq.; DEATH BY WRONGFUL ACT, vol. 8, pp. 854, 858.

2. Survive. — Hawley v. Northampton, 8 Mass. 31, 5 Am. Dec. 66.

3. Bailey v. Brown, 19 R. I. 669.

Survive means to live beyond, particularly to live beyond another person. Nes v. Ramsay, 155 Pa. St. 633, quoting Abb. L. Dict.

In Jordan v. Roach, 32 Miss. 613, it was said: "The word survive, in its popular signification, may mean 'overliving a specified individual,' or 'living beyond a specific event,' or it may mean 'still living,' or 'living at some designated period of time.'"

Must Be Living at Happening of Event. — Survive imports that the person who is to survive must be living (i. e., born, in being) at the death of the person whom or at the happening of the event which he is to survive. See v. Liddell, L. R., 2 Eq. 341.

In Den v. Combs, 18 N. J. L. 33, it was said: "Now by the word survivor it is manifest that the testator contemplated a person who should be in being at the time of the death of the devisee that should first die. He could not have supposed that either of the brothers would survive an indefinite failure of issue of the other; an event that might not happen in one hundred years or more."

Same — Who May Survive Me. — Where a testator gave the residue of his estate "to my nephews and nieces, the children of my brothers [named] who may survive me, * * * to be divided equally among them," it was held that the testator must have had in his mind only those who should be living at his decease, and that his directions were adapted to the distribution of his estate at the end of the usual period of one year from that event. Worcester v. Worcester, 101 Mass. 133.

Surviving Child — Unborn Child. — It has been held that an unborn child was included in the term "surviving child," as used in a statute giving an action for death by wrongful act. See the title DEATH BY WRONGFUL ACT, vol. 8, p. 897, and see Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Lehmberg, 75 Tex. 67.

Issue Surviving. — See the title ISSUE (DESCENDANTS), vol. 17, pp. 561, 573.

Surviving Members — Insurance. — "Surviving members," as used in the Virginia Act of May 18, 1887, relating to insurance companies, has been held to designate such as are not deceased, and not those whose policies are not lapsed. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Marye, 85 Va. 643.

4. Live After. — Bailey v. Brown, 19 R. I. 669. In this case, where a testatrix provided: "If either of my said sons should die without leaving any child who shall survive me, * * * then, as to the * * * share of him so dying, in trust for the other of my said sons," it was held that grandchildren of the testatrix who were not born at the time of her death were not cut off.

In Matter of Clark, 3 De G. J. & S. 111, the testator made a bequest with a limitation over after a life estate to "the children of the said Maria Clark who shall survive me," etc. It was held that the words "who shall survive me" meant "who shall be living after me," and that, therefore, the children of the life tenant who were born after the death of the testatrix were entitled to share in the estate under the bequest in question.

5. Survivor. — Keating v. Reynolds, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 87; Blanton v. Mayes, 58 Tex. 425.

In Reynolds v. Iowa, etc., Ins. Co., 80 Iowa 566, it was said that "the word survivor is usually applied to the longest liver of two or more partners or trustees, and has been applied in some cases to the longest liver of joint tenants, legatees, and to others having a joint interest in any thing." See also Salysers v. Monroe, 104 Iowa 74; Brown v. Allen, 35 Iowa 311.

Death of Last Survivor Without Issue. — In Maden v. Taylor, 45 L. J. Ch. 569, it was held that a gift to the survivor of ten people of a sum of money, or an estate with no previous gift, vests the sum of money or estate absolutely in the last liver, since, though the last liver does not survive himself, he survives all the rest, and in that sense is a survivor. Followed in Anderson v. Brown, 84 Md. 261.

Vesting Legacy. (See also the titles LEGACIES AND DEVISES, vol. 18, p. 731; WILLS.) — A provision in the will that in case of the death of

To What Time Words Refer. — Where the words "survivor," "survive," and "surviving" are used in a will, they are held to refer to the death of the testator, if no intent to the contrary is manifested.¹ But they have been held to refer to the period of distribution, and not to the time of the testator's death.²

either of the legatees in the lifetime of A his share shall go to the survivor or survivors does not prevent the vesting of the legacies. Beatty v. Montgomery, 21 N. J. Eq. 324.

Executors. — It has been held that the term survivors, as used in a will authorizing executors or the survivors or survivor of them to convey land, applied to those who had accepted the trust and qualified. Herrick v. Carpenter, 92 Mich. 440; Weimar v. Fath, 43 N. J. L. 1.

Survivors in Sense of Legal Representatives. — A testator devised all his estate among his seven brothers and sisters, nominatim, or their survivors. Four of them were dead leaving issue at the time when he made his will, and the fact was known to him. It was held that survivors meant legal representatives, though the court conceded that in strict legal sense the word survivor means the longest liver of two joint tenants, or of any two persons joined in the right of a thing; he that remains alive after the other is dead. In re Barr, 2 Pa. St. 428.

Survivors in Sense of Heirs of Body in Succession. — Warnock v. Wightman, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 350.

Intention. — The word survivor is a flexible term, to be moulded by the context and spirit of the will. Harris v. Berry, 7 Bush (Ky.) 113; Coleman-Bush Invest. Co. v. Figg, 95 Ky. 409.

Witnesses. (See also the title WITNESSES.) — In Seabright v. Seabright, 28 W. Va. 468, it was held that the word survivor, as used in a statute to designate persons against whom an interested person should not testify in his own behalf as to certain transactions, meant any person who, by reason of his surviving the deceased, would become as such survivor interested in the subject of controversy, as, for instance, a widow who claimed as distributee a share of her husband's estate, when the question in controversy was whether her husband in his lifetime had given away a portion of his personal property to one who was his executor, or whether such personal property was her husband's at the time of his death.

In Reynolds v. Iowa, etc., Ins. Co., 80 Iowa 563, it was held that a person insured might testify as to transactions between him and the agent of the company, since the company was not a survivor of the agent.

In Salys v. Monroe, 104 Iowa 74, it was held that a surviving partner was within both the letter and the spirit of the statute which provided that no party to an action should be examined as a witness in regard to any personal transaction or communication between such witness and a person afterwards deceased against the survivor of such deceased person.

A testatrix devised property to the surviving children of her brothers. It was held that she meant the children of those surviving at her death, and not those who were alive when the will was made. Eberts v. Eberts, 42 Mich. 406.

Devise to Wife for Life, Then to Surviving Children. — In Martin v. Kirby, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 67, a testator devised his estate to his wife during her widowhood, and then directed that at her death the whole should be sold and the proceeds equally divided between his surviving children or their heirs. It was held that in the absence of evidence to show a special intent on the part of the testator, in using the words "surviving children," to refer them to the period of the termination of the particular estate, they must be taken to refer to the testator's death.

Direction to Sell Real Property and Distribute Proceeds. — A testator, as to certain lands, declared that, should they not be sold by himself, "then I wish my executors to dispose of them to the best advantage, and when in funds for the same, I wish for them to divide the money among the whole of my surviving children, share and share alike, to them and their lawful heirs forever." It was held that by the term surviving the testator meant the children who survived him, and not those who were living when the funds arising from the sales were in the hands of the executors. Ballard v. Connors, 10 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 389.

Child of Survivor — Others. — The children or issue of a person afterwards deceased who would have taken under the terms "surviving," "survivor," or "survivors" have in a number of cases been held entitled to take such deceased person's share, the words being held in such cases to mean other or others.¹

South Carolina. — Selman v. Robertson, 46 S. Car. 262.

It has been held that where there is a clause of survivorship, prima facie survivorship means the time at which the property to be divided comes into enjoyment, that is to say, if there be no previous life estate, at the death of the testator; if there be a previous life estate, then at the termination of that life estate; or, in other words, the words of survivorship should be referred to the period for the payment or distribution of the subject-matter of the gift. Young v. Robertson, 8 Jur. N. S. 825; Sinton v. Boyd, 19 Ohio St. 30, 2 Am. Rep. 369.

Where the form of a gift is after the expiration of a prior interest to distribute a fund to the survivors, the word survivors refers to the period of distribution. Nicoll v. Scott, 99 Ill. 529.

So in Cripps v. Wolcott, 4 Madd. 11, a testatrix bequeathed personal property to her husband for life and directed that after his death it should be divided between her two sons and her daughter and the survivor or survivors of them, share and share alike. One of the sons died after the testatrix, but in the lifetime of the husband. It was held that the other son and daughter took the whole legacy, the survivorship being referred to the death of the tenant for life, and not to the death of the testatrix.

In Ballard v. Connors, 10 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 392, it was said: "In general, words of survivorship are significant of the death of testator, but when a future period of distribution is fixed by a will, such as the termination of a life estate, or when a legatee shall attain twenty-one years, then for the benefit of the legatees and in increase of the objects of bounty, the terms are referred to the period of distribution."

A devise was to J. and his heirs, and in case J. died before twenty-one or without issue, then the estate to be "equally divided amongst my surviving children." It was held that the words "surviving children" as here used meant the children surviving at the death of J., and not at the death of the testator. Holcomb v. Lake, 24 N. J. L. 686.

"If * * * property be given to several persons, with a proviso that, in case of the death of any without leaving children at their death, their shares shall go to the survivors, but in the case of the death of any leaving children, then their shares to belong to such children; if one of the devisees die leaving issue, and then another die not leaving children, the share of the latter will go as well to the surviving objects as to the children of the deceased objects; and, by parity of reasoning, if all the legatees were then dead, leaving children, so that there were in fact no survivors, the children would take the whole." Lapsley v. Lapsley, 9 Pa. St. 131, quoting 2 Powell on Devises 723. See also Beacon's Estate, 202 Pa. St. 535.

In In re Palmer, L. R. 19 Eq. 320, it was said: "There is no word more flexible than survivor. It is a doubtful word, used very often without being understood, and frequently it is obvious from the context that it must have been intended to mean other, and not survivor."

"The word survivors of her sisters includes the children of a sister not surviving." Naglee's Appeal, 33 Pa. St. 918.

Illustrations. — Where a testator devised property to his three grandchildren and provided that if either of them should die without issue, his share should go to the survivor or survivors, it was held that if two of the grandchildren died leaving children, and after their death the surviving grandchild should die without children, the children of the two who died first would take, this appearing to have been the intent of the testator from a consideration of the whole will. Louisville Driving, etc., Assoc. v. Louisville Trust Co., (Ky.) 1895) 29 S. W. Rep. 866.

A testatrix gave her property to her four children, and if either should die before the testatrix her estate to be "divided among the survivors or their legal representatives, share and share alike." One of the children died before the testatrix, leaving two children. It was held that the two grandchildren were entitled to the share of their mother. Rivenett v. Bourquin, 53 Mich. 10.

A devise was to the testator's sons equally,

But it is said that the words "survivor," "survivors," etc., are to be confined to their literal signification when it is possible to do so without violating the clear meaning of the rest of the will.¹

SUSPEND — SUSPENSION. — To suspend means to cause to cease for a time; to interrupt; to delay.³ Suspension from an office is a deprivation and if any of them died without issue their share to be divided among the surviving brothers. It was held that surviving brothers meant the other devisees as well as those who survived as the representatives of those dying before the devisees. Lapsley v. Lapsley, 9 Pa. St. 130.

Same — Surviving Heirs. — A testator devised land to his son for life and then to such son's issue, and upon his death without issue the land was to be sold and the proceeds distributed among the testator's surviving heirs. It was held that by surviving heirs the testator meant "his 'other' heirs, or rather devisees or legatees." Passmore's Appeal, 23 Pa. St. 383.

In Anderson v. Brown, 84 Md. 261, it was said: "All the cases to which we have been referred or [which we have] examined in which survivor has been construed as the equivalent of 'other' appear to have been so decided because there was something in the will to make it clear that the testator intended the issue of predeceased children to take, or that some other clearly expressed intention would otherwise be rendered inoperative."

Illustrations. — A testator gave legacies to each of his four daughters for life, with remainder to their children, and he provided that if either of the daughters should die without children, her share should go over to the survivors of his sons and daughters. It was held that survivors could not be read, "others," in consequence of the gift over being to a different class from those whose shares were to go over. De Garagnol v. Liardet, 32 Beav. 608.

A testator gave all his estate to his wife for life, with a direction that after her death it should be equally divided among his children or the survivors of them. One of the children died after the testator's death, but before that of the widow, leaving a child. It was held that no interest vested in the deceased child under the will, nor in the grandchild, she being neither one of the "children" nor one of the survivors. *Sinton v. Suspended and Postponed. — Where a contract of sale by which a purchaser agreed to take all the produce manufactured by the vendor provided that the deliveries contracted for might be suspended or partially suspended in case of strikes, accidents, etc., it was held that the word suspended was not synonymous with "postponed." *Hull Coal, etc., Co. v. court said: "It follows that State v. Daugherty, 106 Mo. 182, went too far, and should not be further followed on this point. 'Super-seded,' in the New York statute, is a stronger word than suspended, in ours, and yet we have seen the New York court hold that the first indictment was only 'liable' to be quashed by the finding of the second, and not in fact quashed—a view which has been three times reasserted since." *State v. Suspension and Extinguishment.—Appointment of Debtor as Executor or Administrator.—In Kelsey v. Smith, 1 How. (Miss.) 84, it was said: "A material difference is made in the authorities between an extinguishment and a suspension, according to the common-law doctrine on this subject, and this will be found to be the only difference between an executor and an administrator, a suspension being considered a temporary privation of the remedy, while an extinguishment is a total destruction of it. One arises by act of the party, and the other by operation of law from the necessity of the case." See also Loekier v. Smith, 1 Sid. 79, and see EXTINGUISH—EXTINGUISHMENT, vol. 12, p. 574, and the title EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, vol. 11, p. 787.

Operation of General Law. (See also the title STATUTES, vol. 26, p. 715.)—In Little Rock v. Parish, 36 Ark. 174, it was said: "The act in question paralyzes, with regard to the city, the force of section 5, with regard to all the territory belonging to it when the general act was passed, and which lies outside the line prescribed by the Act of 1877. We cannot resist the conclusion that the latter act suspends the operation of the former."

Statute of Limitations. (See also the title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 19, p. 212.)—In Hicks v. Pouncey, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 118, it was said: "On examination of the limitation acts relative to personal actions, I think the word suspend does not destroy such time as began to run, and which continued to run, between any of the said acts. The Act of 1784 declares that no time past shall be counted; but the remaining acts only declare the time which has begun to run to be suspended." And accordingly it was held that where a statute of limitations had been suspended, the time which elapsed prior to the suspension might be added to that which had elapsed since the suspension ceased, in order to complete the period requisite to the bar of the statute.

Suspension of Payment. (See also the title INSOLVENCY AND BANKRUPTCY, vol. 16, p. 672.)—Under a bankruptcy act providing that a banker, trader, etc., who suspended payment of his commercial paper might be adjudged a bankrupt, it was held that a general suspension of payment was not necessary, but that the suspension of payment of a single piece of commercial paper was sufficient. In re Wilson, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 390. Compare In re Clemens, 5 Chicago Leg. N. 511, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,878.

Suspension of Right in Estate.—The suspension of a right in an estate is a partial extinguishment thereof, or an extinguishment for a time. It differs from an extinguishment in that a suspended right may be revived, while one extinguished is absolutely dead. Dyer v. Dyer, 17 R. I. 550, citing Bac. Abr., tit. Extinguishment, A.

Suspension of Sentence. (See also the titles REPRIEVE, PARDON, AND AMNESTY, vol. 24, p. 547; SENTENCE AND PUNISHMENT, vol. 25, p. 313.)—In Matter of Buchanan, 146 N. Y. 273, it was said: "The distinction between a 'reprieve' and a 'suspension of sentence,' although the words are sometimes used interchangeably, is that a reprieve postpones the execution of the sentence to a day certain, whereas a suspension is for an indefinite time. See opinion of Edmonds, J., in Carnal v. People, (Supm. Ct. Gen. T.) 1 Park. Crim. (N. Y.) 262."

Sovereignty of Connection.—The presbytery of the Reformed Presbyterian church resolved to suspend its relations to the synod. Upon the effect of such suspension the court said: "That act did not operate to sever the connection of either of these bodies from the general organization; neither was it intended so to do. Suspension is 'temporary' cessation; delay; intermission; stay. Worcester's Dictionary. It but intermitted the relations of the presbytery and church with the synod, but it worked no dissolution of the organic connection." McAuley's Appeal, 77 Pa. St. 418.

1. Suspension of Officer. (See also the title PUBLIC OFFICERS, vol. 23, p. 428 et seq.)—Ex p. Diggs, 52 Ala. 383.

A suspension is an interruption in the exercise of an officer's duties, of his authority. State v. Richmond, 29 La. Ann. 706.

2. A Suspensive Condition, within the meaning of Civ. Code La., art. 2043, is the equivalent of the condition precedent at common law. New Orleans v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 171 U. S. 312. SWEARING THE PEACE.—See note 7.

348, in which case it was held that a charge of the trial court that the jury might find a verdict against the defendant upon the testimony of an accomplice, if the corroborating circumstances were such as to cast on the defendant a grave suspicion of guilt, was erroneous.

Of a statute in relation to the removal of cloud on title, the court said in Huntington v. Allen, 44 Miss. 662: "The terms used in the statute expressive of the scope of the jurisdiction, viz., 'cloud,' 'doubt,' suspicion, quite distinctly imply that the instrument which creates them is apparent rather than real; is semblance rather than substance; obscures rather than destroys or defeats." See generally the title CLOUD ON TITLE, vol. 6, p. 149.

1. Sustenance.—In Justice v. State, 116 Ga. 606, it was said: "In our opinion, there is a very great difference between depriving a child of sustenance and refusing to permit medicine to be administered to him. Sustenance is 'that which supports life; food; victuals; provisions;' while medicine is defined to be 'any substance administered in the treatment of diseases; a remedial agent; a remedy; physic.' Our statute, in the use of the word sustenance, means that necessary food and drink which is sufficient to support life and maintain health. And evidence that while a father fully provides for the wants of his children as to food he refuses to permit them to take medicine will not support a conviction under this statute; and we know of no provision in our penal laws enacted to meet a case of this character."

5. Swear.—An allegation that the defendant did "depose and swear" to the truth of the answers contained in a deposition does not show that the defendant was sworn to the truth of said answers. One may swear who is not sworn, and in such case the oath is not administered, but self-imposed, and the swearer incurs no legal liability thereon. U. S. v. McConaughy, 33 Fed. Rep. 168.

Formalities.—A record reciting that the jury was "sworn and charged well and truly the issue joined to try," etc., ex vi termini imports that the jury was sworn according to the formula observed in the courts of justice of the state. Washington v. State, 60 Ala. 16.

Evidence of Oath.—In Wilson v. Wheeler, 55 Vt. 452, it was held that under the Vermont statute a copy of the record of the election of a public officer in which the word sworn appeared immediately after his name was sufficient to show that he was sworn as the law required. See also Brock v. Bruce, 58 Vt. 268. But contra in New Hampshire. See the title PUBLIC OFFICERS, vol. 23, p. 361.

Sworn To.—In Powers v. Bryant, 7 Port. (Ala.) 15, it was said: "The words 'sworn to' clearly refer to the plea, and must be taken to mean that the testator declared on oath the facts it set forth were true."

Sworn and Sworn To.—In Com. v. Bennett, 7 Allen (Mass.) 534, it was held that a certificate of a magistrate that a complaint was "taken and sworn" before him was sufficient. The court said: "That sworn legally means 'sworn to' seems to have been denied for the first time in the present case."

Written Statement.—"To swear in and by a written statement can only mean to make a written statement under oath." Com. v. Carel, 105 Mass. 585.

1. Sweat—Ships. (See generally the titles CARRIERS OF GOODS, vol. 5, p. 154; CONTRACTS OF AFFREIGHTMENT AND CHARTER-PARTIES, vol. 7, p. 156.)—In Adrian v. The Live Yankee, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 88, it was said: "It was proved that the goods were stowed in the usual and proper manner, but on the top of the between-decks cargo, and immediately under the upper deck, and that the damage was caused by moisture in the hold of the vessel, or what is usually called sweat. On the general principle by which this cause must be determined this court has already expressed its opinion. In the case of Levy v. The Caroline, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,301, it was considered that the carrier is not liable for damage arising from sweat unless he is proved to have been guilty of negligence."

In La Motte v. Angel, 1 Hawaii 244, it was said: "A large portion of the damaged goods on board the 'Perla,' it appears, were injured by what is termed sweating, which may arise from various causes, such as the confinement, closeness, or newness of the ship and the nature of the goods conveyed. Where goods become deteriorated in value from any intrinsic principle of decay naturally inherent in the goods themselves, or the sweat of the hold, where there has been proper stowage and no negligence on the part of the carrier, the merchant must bear the loss, as well as pay the freight, for the master and owners of the vessel are in no fault, nor does their contract contain any insurance or warranty against such an event."

2. Sweating System.—In Collard v. Marshall, (1892) 1 Ch. 576, Chitty, J., said: "There may be, as the select committee of the House of Lords seems to have found, a difficulty in framing a precise and exhaustive definition of the term sweating system. It is obviously a figurative expression. It involves a system oppressive to the workman, whereby an unconscionable or unjust profit is wrung from the sweat of his brow by paying him insufficient wages for his work. There is generally a middleman taking advantage of the circumstances in which the workman is placed, and grinding down for his own profit the wages of those employed below the fair rate."

3. Sweepstakes.—Stone v. Clay, (C. C. A.) 61 Fed. Rep. 890. See generally the titles GAMBLING CONTRACTS, vol. 14, p. 614 et seq.; GAMING, vol. 14, p. 671; HORSE RACING, vol. 15, p. 746.

4. Sweetmeat.—Levy v. Robertson, 38 Fed. Rep. 715. This was upon a construction of the term in a tariff act.

5. Swift.—In holding that Swift & Co., an old established firm of meat packers, were entitled to an injunction restraining another firm from applying the name of Swift to its products, the court said that the name Swift in the combination "Swift Packing Company" or "Swift Union Stock Company" was likely to be understood as taken from a proper name and was not a very apt adjective to apply to any of the products manufactured. "The word goes further than 'quick' or 'rapid.' It gives the idea of continuance of a very rapid motion. * * * I am rather inclined to the impression that the name was used with the idea of taking advantage of the fact that the complainant company was a well-known company and largely engaged in business, and therefore it was an improper appropriation of the name of that concern." Swift v. Groff, 114 Fed. Rep. 606. See also the title TRADEMARKS.

6. Swindle.—Savile v. Jardine, 2 H. Bl. 531; Stevenson v. Hayden, 2 Mass. 408; Weil v. Altenhofen, 26 Wis. 710.

In Cunningham v. Baker, 104 Ala. 171, 53 Am. St. Rep. 34, it was said: "The word swindling has no legal or technical meaning; and commonly it implies that there has been 'recourse to petty and mean artifices for obtaining money which may or may not be strictly illegal.'"

Does Not Import Crime.—In Hall v. Rogers, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 430, it was said: "The term swindling, the charge made in the affidavit and in the warrant, is vague and indefinite. It does not import a crime. Such a charge is not actionable, not being a punishable offense."

Libel and Slander.—See the title LIBEL AND SLANDER, vol. 18, pp. 882, 928, and see Barnett v. Allen, 3 H. & N. 376; Odiorne v. Bacon, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 185.

Minnesota.—It is provided by statute in Minnesota that "whoever, by the means of three-card monte, so called, or of any other form or device, sleight of hand, or other means whatever, by use of cards or instruments of like character, or by any other instrument, trick, or device, obtains from another person any money or other property of any description, shall be deemed guilty of the crime of swindling." SYNDIC. — In the civil law a syndic is an assignee of a bankrupt.⁵

SYNDICATE. — A syndicate is a combination of persons united for the purposes of an enterprise too large for successful management by a single individual; also a number of persons who buy all of an issue of stock or bonds, in order, by advancing the market value, to make a profit to themselves as members of the company.⁶

In Blum v. State, 20 Tex. App. 390, 54 Am. Rep. 530, it was held that to constitute the offense thus described, four things were necessary: first, the intent to defraud; second, an act of fraud committed; third, false pretenses; and, fourth, the fraud committed or accomplished by means of false pretenses made use of for the purpose—that is, they must be the cause which induced the owner to part with his property. Switch Yard. — In Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Little, 149 Ind. 173, it was said: "'Railroad yard' and 'switch yard' we have no doubt are synonymous, and the latter term was used in the act under consideration as descriptive of the former. The term found its place in the allegations of the second paragraph of complaint, and was doubtless understood by the draughtsman of the pleading to describe a yard where switching is done by a railroad company." In this case the court had under consideration an exemption from the fellow-servant rule of servants in charge of switch yards.

Land Syndicate. — In Horner v. Meyers, 4 Ohio Dec. 405, it was said: "The motion raises the question as to the nature of the interests of owners of shares in a land syndicate of this character, where the land is vested in trustees with power of subdivision and sale, and division of the proceeds when they reach a certain amount. The arrangement between the shareholders and trustees never contemplated that the shareholders should be entitled to an interest in the land, but only to an interest in the proceeds of the sale thereof, and it therefore necessarily follows that no shareholder is entitled to a partition of the land."

System of Numbering.—In Davis v. Pacific Imp. Co., 137 Cal. 248, it was said: "There was no evidence before the court that any system of numbering the lots and blocks had been adopted or was at any time in existence in San Francisco, and it appears that the land described in the tax deeds was for many years assessed under the same description as in the deeds. The fact that a single block has been subdivided into lots would not constitute a system of numbering, or indicate that other blocks were subdivided or numbered." See also Klumpke v. Baker, 131 Cal. 80.

Schools.—The Constitution of Texas enjoined upon the legislature the establishment of a system of free schools. The court said: "The word system as used in the constitution means an organized plan, an institution, something established for the use and benefit of the people so long as the want of public education will continue." Peay v. Talbot, 39 Tex. 346.

In Kennedy v. Miller, 97 Cal. 432, it was said: "The term system itself imports a unity of purpose as well as an entirety of operation, and the direction to the legislature to provide 'a' system of common schools means one system which shall be applicable to all the common schools within the state."

Uniform System of Government.—The Constitution of Wisconsin provided that the legislature should establish but one system of town and county government, which should be as nearly uniform as practical. It was held that a statute providing for a county board of eight supervisors in a certain county which, under the general statute relative to county government, would have had only three, was in conflict with this provision; that the word system was not synonymous with "plan." Statute Forbidding Abduction.—In Couch v. Com., (Ky. 1895) 29 S. W. Rep. 29, the word take in a statute forbidding taking or detaining any woman against her will, etc., was defined as "to seize; lay hold upon; to catch."

Persuasion, enticements, and devices without force constitute a taking under these statutes. People v. Marshall, 59 Cal. 388. See the title ABDUCTION, vol. 1, p. 174.

Embezzlement at Post Office.—The expression "take the mail or any letter or packet therefrom" has been held to mean a wrongful and unlawful taking. In re Burkhard, 33 Fed. Rep. 27; U. S. v. Smith, 11 Utah 433. See generally the title EMBEZZLEMENT, vol. 10, p. 1023.

"Take" in Sense of "Arrest."—Take is the technical word used in all writs and precepts by which a sheriff or other officer is commanded to arrest the body. As thus used, the term is synonymous with "arrest." Com. v. Hall, 9 Gray (Mass.) 267, 69 Am. Dec. 285. Compare Hamilton v. Com., 3 P. & W. (Pa.) 148, infra, this note.

*Taken, capiatu*r, in the twenty-ninth chapter of Magna Charta, which reads: *Nullus liber homo capiatu*r, vel imprisonetur * * * nisi per legale iudicium parium suorum, vel per legem terra (see the title DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 10, p. 290, note 3), is used in the sense of "arrested," "restrained of liberty." The expression does not include the service of a process by which no imprisonment, no restraint of liberty, no bail is required, but which consists in notice merely. Legrand v. Bedinger, 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 540. See also the title ARREST, vol. 2, p. 834 et seq.

Game Is taken when it is snared, though it is neither killed nor removed. Rex v. Glover, R. & R. C. C. 269.

Taking Fish Spawn or Fry.—In the statute 3 James I., c. 12, which prohibited "taking, destroying, or spoiling any spawn, fry," etc., of sea fish, a taking for destruction was prohibited, and not a removal of oyster spawn from one bed to another for further growth. Bridger v. Richardson, 2 M. & S. 568.

And a charge of taking property does not per se impute larceny within the law of libel and slander. See the title LIBEL AND SLANDER, vol. 18, pp. 890, 891, and see Robertson v. Lea, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 141; Linville v. Earlywine, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 469; Coleman v. Playsted, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 26, appeal dismissed 40 N. Y. 341.

Take and Carry Away.—In larceny, these are the technical words used in charging the offense. See the title LARCENY, 12 ENCYC. OF PL. AND PR. 95 et seq., and see in this work the title LARCENY, vol. 18, p. 468 et seq.; CARRY, vol. 5, p. 724.

Same—Trespass.—In State v. Porter, 25 W. Va. 689, it was said: "The words 'take and carry away,' though not necessarily words of trespass, may be such, and when employed, as they are here, with other words importing acts of trespass, it is fair and reasonable that they should also be so construed. In fact, the technical meaning of these words 'take and carry away' in criminal law implies a trespass, and can only be supported by proof that the property was taken against the owner's will, and not by his consent."

Taken In—English Agricultural Holdings Act 1883.—See Masters v. Green, 20 Q. B. D. 807.

Taken in Execution.—A sheriff seized under a fi. fa. the goods of a judgment debtor who was liable to pay to the vestry, as the rating authority of the parish, a certain rate made up of a poor rate by virtue of the local act and a general rate under the Metropolitan Management Act, 1855. A demand was made on the sheriff by the rate collector for the amount of the rate; but the sheriff, having subsequently received from the debtor the amount of the judgment debt, withdrew from possession without having paid the rate. It was held that the goods had been taken in execution. St. Marylebone v. London, (1900) 2 Q. B. 591.

1. Hallenbeck v. Getz, 63 Conn. 388.

Transfer of Possession or Control.—In Jersey City v. Morris Canal, etc., Co., 41 N. J. L. 70, it was said: "In its usual signification, the word taken implies a transfer of possession, dominion, or control. A thing is not taken unless such a change of status is effected. In trespass, trover, or replevin the taking is not accomplished until the goods are within the power or control of the defendant. A devisee takes under a will only when the possession and control of the deviser has ceased."

Authority to Take Includes Power to Sell.—Jackson v. Brown, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 590, stated under the title BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 800, note.

Taken Possession of and Administered—Executor de Son Tort.—See New York Breweries Co. v. Atty.-Gen., (1899) A. C. 62.

Take and Convert in a statute authorizing arrest has been held applicable to personality only. See the title IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT AND IN CIVIL ACTIONS, vol. 16, p. 22.

Sale or Bailment.—In Norton v. Woodruff, 2 N. Y. 153, the defendant, the owner of a flour mill, contracted to take the plaintiffs' wheat and to give them one barrel of flour for every four and thirty-six sixtieths bushels. In holding that this contract imported a sale, and not a bailment, the court said: "If the word take, as it seems in this contract, is equally applicable to a bailment as to a sale or exchange, and therefore equivocal, the term 'give' requires some act of the defendant which should pass the property in the flour to the plaintiffs."

Agreement to Take Shares.—In Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Dudley, 14 N. Y. 336, it was held that an agreement to take a certain number of shares of a corporation created, if not an express, certainly an implied promise to pay for the shares.

Take, Own, and Hold.—An agreement preparatory to the formation of a corporation provided that associates in the undertaking should each take, own, and hold a certain number of shares. In construing this provision the court said: "The words 'take, own, and hold' are here, obviously, used synonymously. They only mean that the stock shall be issued to the two brothers and to Arts in the proportions therein provided, and are not intended as a restraint upon the power of alienation." Burden v. Burden, 8 N. Y. App. Div. 168, affirmed 159 N. Y. 287.

Take Held to Include Purchase.—Spencer v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 22 Ch. D. 142. Compare Com. v. Coleman, 157 Mass. 460.

2. See Abb. L. Dict.; And. L. Dict.

"Take Such Action as May Be Necessary" to Secure Employment of Veterans.—See Johnson v. Kimball, 170 Mass. 62, leaving undetermined whether this provision is mandatory and enforceable, and, if so, whether on complaint of one who has no further interest therein than as a veteran.

"Taken" Equivalent to "Taken in Invitum."—A statute provided that an estate by curtesy should not "be liable to be attached or in any way taken for the debts of the husband." It was held that taken meant "taken in invitum." Briggs v. Titus, 13 R. I. 136.

"Take" in Sense of "Require."—An averment that it will take all of specified property to pay the debts of a decedent is a sufficient averment of a necessity of ordering a sale. Take in this sense is equivalent to "require." King v. Kent, 29 Ala. 542.

"Taking Poison."—See the title ACCIDENT INSURANCE, vol. 1, p. 314. And that an accident policy exempting the company from liability for taking poison included only the voluntary taking of poison, see Traveller's Ins. Co. v. Dunlap, 160 Ill. 642; 52 Am. St. Rep. 357; Metropolitan Acc. Assoc. v. Froiland, 161 Ill. 30, 52 Am. St. Rep. 359.

Death from Anything Accidentally Taken, Administered, or Inhaled.—An exception to this effect in an accident policy has been held to imply voluntary action on the part of the insured or some other person. "The insured must take or inhale, or another must administer. The manifest purpose of the provision is domain, wills, etc., they are used in technical or quasi-technical senses.¹

to exempt the insurer from liability where the insured has voluntarily and consciously, but accidentally, taken or inhaled or something has been voluntarily administered which was injurious or destructive of life." Menneiley v. Employers' Liability Assur. Corp., 148 N. Y. 596, 51 Am. St. Rep. 716. See also the title ACCIDENT INSURANCE, vol. 1, p. 315.

Taking Down Testimony.—In Henderson v. Parry, 93 Ga. 775, it was held that the phrase "taking down the testimony," as used in the Georgia statutes providing for the compensation of official stenographic reporters, embraced both the making of stenographic notes by the reporter and the translation of these notes in ordinary language. See also the title STENOGRAPHERS, vol. 26, p. 773, note 3.

Taken in Sense of to Be Taken.—In Saffold v. Horne, 72 Miss. 470, it was held that an agreement of counsel that "any and all testimony taken in" another case "may be used in this" embraced a deposition taken in such other case after the date of the agreement, it appearing that this was the construction acted on by the counsel then engaged in the cause.

Taking and Entering Appeals. (See generally the title APPEALS, 2 ENCYC. OF PL. AND PR. 237 et seq.)—The Maryland statute providing that an appeal from a decree in equity should be taken and entered within two months is not complied with by filing an appeal bond. Humphreys v. Siemons, 78 Md. 606.

Appeal Taken.—An appeal cannot be said to be taken until it is in some way presented to the court, as by filing the papers, viz., the petition and allowance of appeal (where there is such a petition and allowance), the appeal bond, and the citation. Credit Co. v. Arkansas Cent. R. Co., 128 U. S. 261. See also Chow Loy v. U. S., (C. C. A.) 112 Fed. Rep. 356.

An appeal is taken by filing and serving the notice, but the appeal so taken does not become effectual until the undertaking is filed. Peran v. Monroe, 1 Nev. 487.

Taken Down.—English Public Health Act, §155. —See Atty.-Gen. v. Hatch, (1893) 3 Ch. 36.

Usury Taken or Reserved. (See also the title USURY.)—See Boag v. Lewis, 1 U. C. Q. B. 357, wherein it was said that the word taken is not necessarily equivalent to paid. And see as to a statute forbidding pawnbrokers to take excessive interest, Hallenbeck v. Getz, 63 Conn. 388, stated under the title PAWN AND PAWNBROKER, vol. 22, p. 509, note 5.

Taking in a statute against usury has been held to include cases of merely reserving interest. U. S. Bank v. Owens, 2 Pet. U. S.) 538. See also Bandel v. Isaac, 13 Md. 219.

The "taking, receiving, reserving, or charging" of usury has been held to imply something more to be done, to the loss or detriment of the debtor, than the mere presentation of an illegal claim which was neither recognized nor paid. Grant v. Morris, 81 N. Car. 150. See also Churchill v. Turnage, 122 N. Car. 426, where the facts were held to constitute such a taking or charging of usury.

1. As to What Constitutes a Taking for Public Use within the law of eminent domain, see the title EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 10, p. 1102 et seq.

Taken and Graded.—Exception from Mortgage.—A mortgage contained this clause: "This mortgage excepts from the within description all that part already taken and graded for Dakota avenue." This provision was held to exempt from the mortgage a strip of land along the avenue which the city had condemned for the purpose of widening it, and which the public was using, although the condemnation proceedings were afterwards abandoned. Lawrence v. London, etc., Mortg. Co., 71 Minn. 535.

Wills.—See the title WILLS.

2. Take Care.—Agent to Take Care Of.—In Brisbane v. Adams, 3 N. Y. 129, it was held that an agent to take care of property and to give to his principal notice of the existence of liens upon it had no authority to make an agreement with a third person to purchase the property on account of his principal, at a sale to which it was exposed to satisfy rent under a distress warrant.

Live-stock Shipments.—See Humphreys v. Fremont, etc., R. Co., 8 S. Dak. 103. And see the title CARRIERS OF LIVE STOCK, vol. 5, p. 427.

3. Take Charge.—A provision that a commissioner shall take charge of an insolvent bank has been held to mean that the commissioner shall take actual charge of the bank by going to the institution and there assuming control. Dodson v. Wightman, 6 Kan. App. 835.

4. Take His Own Life.—In Supreme Lodge, etc., v. Gelbke, 198 Ill. 365, it was said: "The word 'suicide' and the words 'to die by his own hand' or 'by his own act' or 'to take his own life' mean the same thing, and each conveys the idea of voluntary, intentional self-destruction." See also Pierce v. Travelers' L. Ins. Co., 34 Wis. 394, and see SUICIDE, ante, and the title LIFE INSURANCE, vol. 19, p. 77.

5. Taken as True.—An instruction, where the accused is examined on his own behalf, that what he testified to against his interest is to be "taken as true" is not prejudicial error. The court said: "To say that they are to be 'taken as true,' as was done in this instance, is saying no more than that they are 'presumed to be true' or are conclusive for the purposes of the case in hand." State v. Brooks, 99 Mo. 137, citing 1 Greenl. Ev., §§ 27, 32; Webst. Dict., tit. Presume.

6. Taken in Act of Adultery.—Under the Texas statute which provides that "homicide is

(See also the title JURY AND JURY TRIAL, vol. 17, p. 1191 et seq.) — "If by means of challenges or other cause a sufficient number of unexceptionable jurors doth not appear at the trial, either party may pray a tales. A tales is a supply of such men as are summoned upon the first panel in order to make up the deficiency."⁵ A talesman is a juror summoned to fill up a panel, for the trial of a particular cause.⁶

TALLAGE. — "Tallage" is a general word and includes all subsidies, taxes, tenths, fifteenths, impositions, or other burdens or charges put or set upon any man.⁷

TANGIBLE. — See the titles SUCCESSION TAXES, ante; TAXATION, post.

TANNING. — Tanning is the art or process of converting hides and skins into leather.⁸

TARE. — See DRAFT, vol. 10, p. 218.

TARIFF. (See also the title REVENUE LAWS, vol. 24, p. 883.) — The term "tariff" is applied to customs duties, tolls, or tribute payable upon merchandise to the general government; the rate of customs, etc., also bears this name, and the list of articles liable to duties is also called the tariff.⁹

justifiable when committed by the husband upon the person of any one taken in the act of adultery with the wife, provided the killing take place before the parties to the act of adultery have separated," it is held that in order to avail himself of the protection afforded by the statute the husband need not be an eye witness to the physical act of coition between his wife and her paramour, but it will be sufficient if he sees the paramour in bed with his wife, or leaving it, or in such a position as indicates with a reasonable certainty to a rational mind that they had just then committed the adulterous act, or were then about to commit it. Price v. State, 18 Tex. App. 474, 51 Am. Rep. 322. See also Massie v. State, 30 Tex. Crim. 64; Morrison v. State, 39 Tex. Crim. 519.

1. Takers — Prize. — In The Vryheid, 2 C. Rob. 21, Sir William Scott said that by the word takers in an Act of Parliament giving a prize to the takers are naturally to be understood those who actually take possession or those affording an actual contribution of endeavor to that event; any of these persons are naturally included under the denomination of takers. But the courts of law have gone further, and have extended the term taker to another description of persons — to those who, not having contributed actual service, are still supposed to have rendered a constructive assistance. See also The Iron-Clad Ram Atlanta, 2 Sprague (U. S.) 251, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 619; The Cherokee, 2 Sprague (U. S.) 235, 3 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 301.

2. The Phrase "Take Up and Use" in Texas statutes making it an offense to take up and use any "dumb animal the property of another" (Pen. Code Tex., art. 788) "or any animal coming within the meaning of an estray" (Pen. Code Tex., art. 918) has a definite meaning and was intended to prevent the taking up and using of such animals as are not confined in actual possession. Cochran v. State, 36 Tex. Crim. 115; Davis v. State, 30 Tex. 352.

For construction of other statutes regulating the taking up of estrays, see the title ANIMALS, vol. 2, pp. 379, 380.

One who pays negotiable paper, at the same time receiving the instrument into his own hands, is said to "take up the instrument." See the title BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND PROMISSORY NOTES, vol. 4, p. 496.

Taxes are the proportional and reasonable assessments and duties which may, by virtue of the constitution, be imposed from time to time on the inhabitants of the commonwealth, for the necessary defense and support of the government, and for the protection and preservation of the rights and to promote the interests of the people. Peirce v. Boston, 3 Met. (Mass.) 520.

of the government;¹ but this is obviously too narrow, since many purposes for which taxes are levied, while of a public nature, that is, for the benefit of the public generally, are not governmental, and it has been expressly held that the "support of the government" is not an essential element of the definition of the word "taxes."²

The Word "Taxes" is very comprehensive, and properly includes, as indicated in the foregoing definition, all burdens, charges, and impositions by virtue of the taxing power with the object of raising money for public purposes.³ It is commonly used, however, to designate those taxes which are based on value and are subject to the constitutional rule of uniformity; and to this extent such taxes are distinguishable from special assessments for local improvements,⁴ license taxes,⁵ excise, customs duties, and the like.⁶

2. Public Purposes Distinguished from Governmental Purposes.—Davidson v. Ramsey County, 18 Minn. 482.

What Is Public Purpose.—An object is public, in the sense that it will contribute to the convenience, prosperity, and general advantage of the "local public." Hawkins v. Carroll County, 50 Miss. 757. And see generally infra, this title, Purpose of Taxation.

3. Great Variety and Extent of Meaning are attached to the word "tax" or "taxes." It has been at different times applied to nearly if not quite every burden imposed on person, property, or business for the support of the government, and in acts for raising a revenue for public purposes it seems to be used as meaning the same thing as impost, duty, or excise. State v. Western Union Tel. Co., 73 Me. 527.

Water Rates paid to a city by consumers are in no sense taxes, but are nothing more than the price paid for water as a commodity, though by statute such rates are made liens on the property occupied by the consumer. No one can be compelled to take water unless he chooses, and the lien, though enforced in the same way as a lien for taxes, is really a lien for an indebtedness. Jones v. Water Com'rs, 34 Mich. 273; Dixon v. Kennett Square, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 414.

4. Taxes as Distinguished from Special Assessments.—Baltimore v. Green Mt. Cemetery, 7 Md. 517; People v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 419, 55 Am. Dec. 266; Astor v. New York, 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. 539; Hill v. Higdon, 5 Ohio St. 248; King v. Portland, 2 Oregon 155; Taylor v. Chandler, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 349, 24 Am. Rep. 308.

It is now well settled that special assessments for local improvements are a species of taxes, being a burden on property for public purposes. The only substantial distinction between a special assessment and a general tax is that general taxes are based on value and subject to the constitutional rule of uniformity, which is not the case with special assessments. Dalrymple v. Milwaukee, 53 Wis. 185, disapproving Hale v. Kenosha, 29 Wis. 605. To the same effect see Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701; White v. People, 94 Ill. 604; Jones v. Water Com'rs, 34 Mich. 273. And see generally the title SPECIAL OR LOCAL ASSESSMENTS, vol. 25, p. 1166.

5. See generally the title OCCUPATION, BUSINESS, AND PRIVILEGE TAXES, vol. 21, p. 775.

6. Excise, Customs, etc.—See the titles INTOXICATING LIQUORS, vol. 17, p. 189; REVENUE LAWS, vol. 24, p. 883.

An Excise differs from a tax as the word "tax" is ordinarily used. The ordinary meaning of the word "tax" is a charge apportioned either among the whole people of the state, or those residing within certain districts, municipalities, or sections, and is proportionate to the amount of property owned by them. An excise, on the other hand, is a fixed, absolute, and direct charge laid on merchandise, products, or commodities, without any regard to the amount of property belonging to those on whom it is levied. Oliver v. Washington Mills, 11 Allen (Mass.) 274. See also Pacific Ins. Co. v. Soule, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 433; Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 123; People v. Coleman, 4 Cal. 46, 60 Am. Dec. 581; Portland Bank v. Athorp, 12 Mass. 252; Com. v. People's Five Cents Sav. Bank, 5 Allen (Mass.) 431; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Com., 133 Mass. 161; Durach's Appeal, 62 Pa. St. 491. And see EXCISE, vol. 11, p. 579.

A tax which corporations were required to pay on the interest on their indebtedness (14 U. S. Stat. at Large 138) was held an excise tax on the business of the corporations, to be paid by them out of their earnings, income, and profits. Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Collector, 100 U. S. 595, affirming Holmes (U. S.) 231, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,527a.

The Term "Duties" in its widest significance is hardly less comprehensive than "taxes." It is applied in its most restricted meaning to customs, and in that sense it is nearly the synonym of "imposts." See DUTY, vol. 10, p. 351; IMPOST, vol. 16, p. 3; and the title REVENUE LAWS, vol. 24, p. 883. See also Sheffield v. Parsons, 3 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 302.

Customs Are Duties charged on commodities on their being imported into or exported from a country. Marriott v. Brune, 9 How. (U. S.) 619.

Tolls for the navigation of an improved stream are not taxes, duties, or imposts on the use of the stream, but are tolls for the enjoyment of improvements by which the stream has acquired a new value and increased navigability. Benjamin v. Manistee River Imp. Co., 42 Mich. 628. And see TOLLS.

The Distinction Between a Tax and a Toll is this: a tax is a demand of sovereignty, while a toll is a demand of proprietorship. State

Taxes Distinguished from Debts. — A tax, in its essential characteristics, is almost universally held not to be a debt or in the nature of a debt. The distinction between a debt and a tax is that the one rests on the contract and the other does not. A debt is a sum of money due by contract, express or implied, while a tax is a charge on person or property to raise money for public purposes, and operates in invitum.¹ Accordingly, taxes are neither the subject of nor liable to set-off;² they are not provable in bankruptcy,³ and are not assignable as debts.⁴ Unless it is so provided by statute, taxes do not bear

1. Distinguished from Debts. — See the title DEBT, vol. 8, pp. 995, 996. See also People v. Seymour, 16 Cal. 340, 76 Am. Dec. 521; New York v. McLean, 57 N. Y. App. Div. 601, affirmed 170 N. Y. 374; Danforth v. McCook County, 11 S. Dak. 264, 74 Am. St. Rep. 868.

There is none of the mutuality in the case of a tax that enters into a contract, and none of the legal incidents of a debt. A tax is not subject to attachment, is not an offset, bears no interest, and needs no solemn act of any court to enforce it. Whiteaker v. Haley, 2 Oregon 139.

Thus, an act which appropriates money for seed grain loans to farmers, provides for the levy of a tax against the land for which a seed grain loan may be granted, and declares the loan to be a lien on such land, is not taxation, but merely a statutory method of foreclosing a statutory lien for money borrowed from the state. Deering v. Peterson, 75 Minn. 118.

As to Taxes Due from a Decedent, see the title DEBTS OF DECEDENTS, vol. 8, p. 1048.

Statutes Relating to Imprisonment for Debt Not Applicable to Taxes. — Since taxes are not debts, they are not affected by statutes relating to imprisonment for debt, so that a statute abolishing imprisonment for debt does not prevent imprisonment for nonpayment of taxes. San Antonio v. Mehaffy, 96 U. S. 312; Appleton v. Hopkins, 5 Gray (Mass.) 530; Charleston v. Oliver, 16 S. Car. 47; Board of Education v. Old Dominion Iron, etc., Co., 18 W. Va. 441. And see Webster v. Seymour, 8 Vt. 135.

The Repeal of a Statute Imposing a Tax does not impair the obligation of a contract. Lane County v. Oregon, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 71; Ketchum v. Pacific R. Co., 4 Dill. (U. S.) 41; Mount v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 25; McQuilkin v. Doe, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 581; Abbott v. Britton, 23 La. Ann. 511; Augusta v. North, 57 Me. 392, 2 Am. Rep. 55. *Howe v. But the Repeal of a Statute Exempting Property from Taxation may impair the obligation of a contract. See the title EXEMPTIONS (FROM TAXATION), vol. 12, p. 271 et seq.; IMPAIRMENT OF OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS, vol. 15, p. 1042.

See also the title SET-OFF, RECOUPMENT, AND COUNTERCLAIM, vol. 25, pp. 504, 507.

The Principle on Which This Rule Rests is largely one of public policy, in that it would be subversive of the power of government, and destructive of the very end of taxation, were taxes subject to set-off like debts. Camden v. Allen, 26 N. J. L. 398.

In the Case of Taxes Due to the State, there is also another principle applicable, viz., that the government cannot be sued without its consent, and that it does not abandon its sovereignty in this respect even by coming into court as a plaintiff. See the title SET-OFF, RECOUPMENT, AND COUNTERCLAIM, vol. 25, p. 608.

3. Taxes Not Debts Provable in Bankruptcy. — In re Duryee, 2 Fed. Rep. 68. See also the title INSOLVENCY AND BANKRUPTCY, vol. 16, pp. 680, 681. But the bankruptcy statutes generally provide that taxes due by the bankrupt shall be paid out of the estate in preference to his other liabilities. See the title INSOLVENCY AND BANKRUPTCY, vol. 16, p. 693 et seq.

4. Taxes Not Assignable. — McInerney v. Reed, 23 Iowa 410.

The rule that taxes are not assignable seems to involve the proposition that such an important power of government as the taxing interest,¹ and cannot be enforced by means of an action of debt.²

2. Taxation. — Taxation is the act of laying a tax or imposing burdens or charges on persons or property for public purposes. It is the process or means by which the taxing power is exercised.³

3. Theory of Taxation. — The theory of all taxation is that taxes are imposed as a compensation for something received by the taxpayer. General taxes are paid for the support of the government in return for the protection of life, liberty, and property which the government gives. Assessment for benefits accruing to property by reason of public improvements rests on the same principle, and the only substantial distinction between the two forms is that general taxation is based on value and subject to the constitutional rule of uniformity, which is not the case with special assessments.⁴

III. SEVERAL KINDS OF TAXES — 1. Purpose of Tax. — Taxes, with respect to the purpose for which they are levied, are either general, that is, imposed throughout the state or some civil division thereof, and having in view the raising of a revenue for the support of the government and for public purposes generally;⁵ or they are special or local, that is, for the benefit of a part only of the body politic.⁶

power cannot be delegated to individuals. But this does not mean that an individual or corporation for whose use a tax has been laid, e. g., a tax in aid of a railroad company, may not assign the right to such tax. No reason is perceived why an assignment of such right may not be made in furtherance of the purpose for which the tax was laid, and this right has been expressly recognized by statute. Merrill v. Welsher, 50 Iowa 61. See also Sully v. Drennan, 113 U. S. 287.

1. Taxes Not Interest Bearing. — Crabtree v. Madden, (C. C. A.) 54 Fed. Rep. 426; Haskell v. Bartlett, 34 Cal. 281; People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171; Augusta v. North, 57 Me. 392, 2 Am. Peckett*, 26 Vt. 482; Board of Education v. Old Dominion Iron, etc., Co., 18 W. Va. 441.

Statutory Provisions. — In some states it is provided by statute that taxes shall bear interest. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Galveston, (Tex. 1903) 74 S. W. Rep. 537. And see generally the statutes of the several states.

2. Action of Debt. — Perry v. Washburn, 20 Cal. 318; Richards v. Stogsdel, 21 Ind. 74; Packard v. Tisdale, 50 Me. 376; Augusta v. North, 57 Me. 392, 2 Am. Rep. 55; Crapo v. Stetson, 8 Met. Federal Taxes. — But it has been held that an action at law will lie to recover taxes due the United States, though such action is not authorized by act of Congress. Dollar Sav. Bank v. U. S., 19 Wall. (U. S.) 227; Garrett v. Memphis, 5 Fed. Rep. 860.

Action Authorized by Statute. — A statute authorizing an action to recover taxes does not affect the nature of the tax as such. Meri-

A tax levied on the property in a township for the prevention of prairie fires is a general tax, being imposed throughout a civil division of the state, and its character as such is not affected by the fact that the township, for convenience, is divided up into fire districts. *Clark v. 2. Manner of Imposition. — With reference to the manner of imposition, taxes may be divided into two classes, viz., direct taxes which are demanded from the person,¹ and indirect taxes or those which are laid on commodities before they reach the consumer, such as import and export duties and excise taxes.²

3. Determination of Amount. — Taxes may also be classified as ad valorem and specific, according to the mode of determining the amount to be paid by each person.

An Ad Valorem Tax is a tax or duty on the value of the article or thing subject to taxation, the amount of the tax being fixed by a percentage of such value.³

A Specific Tax, on the other hand, is a tax of a certain amount on each and every article or thing taxed, without regard to value.⁴

4. Manner of Payment. — Taxes, according to the manner of payment, are either money taxes⁵ or taxes in kind.⁶

5. Subjects of Taxation. — Finally, there are various kinds of taxes with reference to the subjects of taxation, as property taxes,⁷ income taxes,⁸ capitation taxes,⁹ succession taxes,¹⁰ privilege taxes,¹¹ taxes on corporations and corporate franchises,¹² taxes on consumable commodities and

1. Direct Taxes. — Pollock v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 157 U. S. 429. And see DIRECT TAX, vol. 9, p. 461.

There are three general classes of direct taxes: capitation, having effect solely on persons; ad valorem, having effect solely on property; and income, having a mixed effect on persons and property. Glasgow v. Rowse, 43 Mo. 479.

A tax on property holders in respect of their estates, whether real or personal, or of the income yielded by such estates, and the payment of which cannot be avoided, are direct taxes within the general meaning of those words. Pollock v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 157 U. S. 558. See also Springer v. U. S., 102 U. S. 586; Scholey v. Rew, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 331; Hylton v. U. S., 3 Dall. (U. S.) 171; People v. Worthington, 21 Ill. 171, 74 Am. Dec. 86.

Direct Taxes Within Meaning of Constitution of United States. — The term "direct taxes" as used in the Constitution of the United States, which provides that "no capitation or other direct tax shall be laid unless in proportion to the census or enumeration," includes, besides the capitation tax expressly named, only taxes on land and its appurtenances. Hylton v. U. S., 3 Dall. (U. S.) 171; Loughborough v. Blake, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 317; Pacific Ins. Co. v. Soule, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 433; Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 533; Scholey v. Rew, 23 Wall. 2. Indirect Taxes. — Ordinarily, all taxes paid primarily by persons who can shift the burden on some one else, or who are under no legal compulsion to pay them, are considered indirect taxes. Pollock v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 157 U. S. 558.

3. Ad Valorem Tax. — Bailey v. Fuqua, 24 Miss. 497.

Thus, an act requiring telegraph and telephone companies to pay a tax levied on an assessment of their lines at the true cash value thereof, in lieu of all other taxes, imposes an ad valorem and not a specific tax. Pingree v. Auditor Gen., 120 Mich. 95.

4. Specific Tax. — Jones v. Water Com'rs, 34 Mich. 273; Bailey v. Fuqua, 24 Miss. 497.

5. Money Taxes. — Taxes are usually payable in money. State v. Halifax, 4 Dev. L. (15 N. Car.) 345; Bryan v. Sundberg, 5 Tex. 418; Davis v. Burney, 58 Tex. 364; Sawyer v. Springfield, 40 Vt. 305.

But the medium of payment may be prescribed by statute. Wallis v. Smith, 29 Ark. 354; Davis v. Burney, 58 Tex. 364; Marinette v. Oconto County, 47 Wis. 216. And see infra, this title, Payment and Tender.

6. Taxes in Kind. — See infra, this title, Payment and Tender. As to taxes payable in labor, see Fox v. Rockford, 38 Ill. 451; Moore v. Jarron, 9 U. C. Q. B. 233; Dickson v. Galt, 9 U. C. 7. Property Taxes. — The word "property" as used in a statute imposing taxes on property has been held to mean such as is visible and tangible and capable of assessment. People v. Hibernia Sav., etc., Soc., 51 Cal. 243, 21 Am. Rep. 704. See also People v. Park, 23 Cal. 138; Primm v. Belleville, 59 Ill. 142.

IV. POWER OF TAXATION — 1. Nature and Extent of Taxing Power — a. IN GENERAL — Inherent in Sovereignty. — The power of taxation is one of the essential attributes of sovereignty, and is inherent in and necessary to the existence of every government.⁵ Except so far as restrained by the provisions of the Federal Constitution, the power of the state as to the mode, form, and extent of taxation is unlimited where the subject to which it applies is within the jurisdiction of the state.⁶

Extent of Power. — Since the power to tax is an attribute of sovereignty, it is, in the absence of constitutional restrictions, plenary and without any limit except the discretion of those who use it,⁷ for the very obvious reason that no bounds can be set to the needs of the public or the necessities of the gov-

The sovereign right to levy and collect taxes grows out of the necessities of government — an urgent necessity, which admits no property in the citizen while it remains unsatisfied. The right to tax is coequal with all governments. It springs out of organization of the government. All property is a pledge to pay the necessary debts and expenses of government. Parham v. Justices, 9 Ga. 352. See also Philadelphia v. Tryon, 35 Pa. St. 401, in which it was said that every man holds his property subject to the taxing power.

ernment.¹ The theory of government in the United States is that socially and politically all are equal, and that the burden of supporting the government should be borne equally by all the individuals composing it, in proportion to the benefits conferred. This principle of justice and equality which requires each person to contribute towards the public expense his proportionate share according to the advantage which he receives lies at the foundation of our political system, and is usually expressed in the constitutions of the states by various provisions limiting the taxing power.² Such provisions, however, are not grants of power, but are restrictions or limitations of an existing power.³

The Power of Taxation as Regards Its Territorial Extent is necessarily limited to subjects, that is, persons, property, and business within the jurisdiction of the state; but it includes all persons within such jurisdiction, and embraces foreigners residing therein as well as citizens,⁴ except so far as the subject may Taxation is an incident of sovereign power which acknowledges no limits except the discretion of those who use it, unless it be as to those objects of taxation which have been withdrawn from the general power. Com. v. Mann, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 416.

Enforcing Payment.—For the nonpayment of a lawful tax, the property of the citizen may, without any judicial proceedings, and without personal notice to him, be sold to pay it. Proceedings so rigorous are anomalous in the law, and justify the remark of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, that the divestiture of ownership by tax laws and sales thereunder exhibits "the instance in which a constitutional government approaches most near to an unrestrained tyranny." Gault's Appeal, 33 Pa. St. 97.

Subjects of Taxation.—Since the constitution contains no restriction on the power to levy taxes except as to "property" as such, the legislature has plenary power in the levy of taxes as to other subjects of taxation, such as occupations, privileges, etc. Capital City Water Co. v. Board of Revenue, 117 Ala. 303.

Jacob*, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 427, 73 Am. Dec. 367.

b. DISTINGUISHED FROM EMINENT DOMAIN. — It has been observed that it is by no means easy to trace the dividing line between the power of taxation and the right of eminent domain,² and it is true that both rest on substantially the same foundation, that is, both are exercises of the sovereign power to take private property for public use.³ In other respects, however, there is a very clear distinction which may readily be pointed out. Taxation exacts money or services from individuals as and for their respective shares of contribution to any burden; operates on a community or on a class of persons in a community; and is governed by some rule of apportionment. On the other hand, private property taken for public use by virtue of the right of eminent domain is taken, not as the owner's share or contribution to the public burden, but as so much beyond his share, and the exercise of this right operates on an individual and has no reference to the amount or value exacted from any other individual or class of individuals.⁴ And, again, special compensation is required to be made when property is taken in the exercise of the right of eminent domain, because the government is the debtor to the amount of the value of the property thus taken; but the payment of taxes is a duty of the citizen, and creates no obligation on the part of the government, otherwise than to make a proper application of the taxes paid.⁵

Requirement of Compensation Not a Limitation of Taxing Power. — The clause of the Constitution requiring compensation to be made when private property is taken for public use is not a limitation on the taxing power,⁶ but it is held to principle stated in the text, held that such bonds were taxable in Pennsylvania though owned by nonresident aliens. The reasoning by which the court reached this conclusion was that the bonds were made valuable by the franchise which the railroad company derived from the commonwealth, were secured by mortgages on property and franchises within the commonwealth, and could be enforced only in the courts of the commonwealth. This view, however, is not sustainable, as was pointed out by the Supreme Court of the United States in State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 300, cited supra, this note.

c. DISTINGUISHED FROM POLICE POWER. — The distinction between the taxing power and the police power has been stated elsewhere in this work.²

2. Constitutional Restrictions — a. ENACTMENT OF TAX LAWS IN GENERAL. — The Constitution of the United States provides that "all bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives,"³ and the state constitutions generally contain similar provisions.⁴ A "bill for raising revenue," within this clause, is one that has for its chief object the raising of revenue for the purposes of the government, as distinguished from a bill under which revenue may incidentally arise.⁵ Accordingly a bill for reducing taxation has been held a bill for raising revenue where it provided for the collection of taxes.⁶ But an appropriation bill is not a bill for raising revenue, though it may lead to the necessity of taxation.⁷

b. TAXATION BY UNITED STATES. — The comprehensive power given by the Constitution of the United States to Congress "to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises,"⁸ is subject to but one restriction, namely, that "no tax or duty shall be laid on any articles exported from any state."⁹

In Gordon v. Cornes, 47 N. Y. 612, Rapallo, J., says: "It would be going too far to deny that the provisions of the Constitution which declare that no person shall be deprived of property without due process of law, and that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation, would afford protection to the citizen against impositions made nominally in the form of taxes but which were in fact forced levies upon individuals or confiscations of private property, as, for instance, if the general expenses of the government of the state, or of one of its municipal divisions, should be levied upon the property of an individual or set of individuals, or perhaps upon a particular district."

Revenue for State Purposes Distinguished from Municipal Purposes. — This provision of the Constitution applies only to the state or the revenue that goes into or properly belongs to the state treasury; therefore a bill authorizing a city to impose a license tax on certain occupations, the object of which is to raise revenue for municipal purposes, may properly originate in either house of the legislature. Rankin v. Henderson, (Ky. 1888) 7 S. W. Rep. 174.

Excise Distinguished from Export Duty. — In Pace v. Burgess, 92 U. S. 372, the court had under consideration a statute exempting from excise taxes manufactured tobacco intended for export, but requiring a twenty-five-cent stamp to be placed on each package of the tobacco so intended for export and forbidding such tobacco to be removed from the factory without being stamped. It was held that this statute did not impose an export duty, but required the stamp merely to separate and identify the tobacco intended for export, and thereby, instead of taxing it, to relieve it from the taxation to which the other tobacco was subjected, and that this was a means devised to prevent evasion of the excise law. See also Turpin v. Burgess, 117 U. S. 504.

9. Restrictions of Federal Power — Taxation of Exports. — Const. U. S., art. 1, § 9, par. 5; License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 471; Lane County v. Oregon, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 77; Veazie

There are several other provisions relating to the exercise by Congress of the power of taxation. These are that "all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;"¹ that "no capitation or other direct tax shall be laid unless in proportion to the census;"² and that "no preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one state over those of another."³ These provisions, it is to be observed, do not restrict or limit the power to tax, but merely regulate in some particulars the exercise of the power.⁴

c. TAXATION BY STATES—(1) In General.—It has already been seen that the power of the states to impose taxes is an attribute of sovereignty which they all possess. The constitutional provisions on the subject are not grants of power, but limitations of a power already existing.⁵

(2) Restrictions in Constitution of United States—(a) Duties on Imports and Exports—aa. CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS STATED.—The Constitution of the United States forbids the states, without the consent of Congress, to lay any duty on imports or exports.⁶

bb. WHAT ARE EXPORTS AND IMPORTS.—The constitutional provision referred to above is too plain and positive to admit of any claim that the states have power to impose duties on imports and exports as such; but many cases have arisen involving the question whether particular articles taxed by state authority were exports or imports within the meaning of those words as used in the Constitution, so as to bring the particular taxes within the prohibition.

Exports.—It is plain that a state has no authority to tax any goods by reason of their exportation or intended exportation, because that would amount to laying a duty on exports, which would violate the express terms of the Constitution.⁷ In the majority of cases, however, the question has arisen in regard to property taxed, not because of its exportation or intended exportation, but as a part of the general mass of taxable property in the state. Under these circumstances it becomes necessary to determine the precise point of time at which goods intended for exportation cease to be a part of the general mass of taxable property in the state, and it has been held that this segregation does not occur until the goods are actually started in the course of transportation.⁸

4. Regulation as Distinguished from Restriction.—Lane County v. Oregon, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 77; Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 541.

5. See supra, this section, Nature and Extent of Taxing Power—In General, paragraph Extent of Power.

6. Restriction as to Imports.—The full text of the constitutional provision in question is as follows: "No state shall, without the consent of the Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws: and the net produce of all duties and imposts laid by any state on imports or exports shall be for the use of the treasury of the United States; and all such laws shall be subject to the revision and control of the Congress." Const. U. S., art. 1, § 10, par. 2.

7. Taxes on Exports as Such.—Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517.

A Stamp Tax Imposed on Bills of Lading by a state law for the transportation of gold or silver to any place out of the state is an export duty on gold and silver. Almy v. California, 24 How. (U. S.) 169. See also Ex p. Martin, 7 Nev. 140, 8 Am. Rep. 707.

8. Exports Defined.—Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517; Turpin v. Burgess, 117 U. S. 504. And see EXPORT—EXPORTATION, vol. 12, p. 320. Compare Blount v. Monroe, 60 Ga. 61, in which it was held that timber in the hands of an exporter engaged in that business alone was within the term "exports," where it was ready and waiting for shipment out of the state, though it was not actually in transit at the time fixed by law for the return of all property for taxation.

Imports are things imported; they are the articles themselves which are brought into the country. And though the duties on the articles are usually secured before the importer is allowed to exercise his right of ownership, this is merely to prevent evasion of the law, and not because the articles lose their character as imports by coming into the possession of the importer.¹ But such goods retain their character as imports only so long as they remain the property of the importer and are held by him in the original packages. As soon as the importer parts with his ownership or breaks up the packages, the goods become a part of the general mass of property in the state and cease to be exempt from state taxation.² As long, however, as imported goods are "imports" within the meaning of that word as used in the Federal Constitution, they are wholly exempt from state taxation in any form, and the courts will not permit the use of any device whereby the exemption may be defeated.³

A Tax on the Occupation of an Importer is a tax on imports and therefore violates the constitutional provision in question.⁴

Termination of Character as Importer. — When goods which have been imported lose their character as imports and become a part of the general mass of property in the state, they become subject to taxation like any other property;⁵

Persons Not Included. — The terms "imports" and "exports" apply only to personal property and do not include persons. Henderson v. New York, 92 U. S. 259; New York v. Miln, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 102.

Taxation of Foreign Vessel Not Prohibited. — Aguirre v. Maxwell, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 140. And see the title SHIPS AND SHIPPING, vol. 25, p. 870.

2. When Character as "Imports" Ceases. — Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 419; License Cases, 5 How. (U. S.) 504; Pervear v. Com., 5 Wall. (U. S.) 479; Low v. Austin, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 29; May v. New Orleans, 51 La. Ann. 1064; State v. Pinckney, 10 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 474.

When Imported Merchandise Is Sold by the Importer, it thereby loses its distinctive character as an import and becomes subject to state taxation like other property of the purchaser, though it is still in the original packages. Waring v. Mobile, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 110.

3. Imports Not Taxable in Any Form. — A tax on insurance premiums is not a tax on the goods insured, because it is not a necessity to any dealing with the goods, and therefore it is immaterial that the insured goods are imports stored in bonded warehouses. People v. National F. Ins. Co., 27 Hun (N. Y.) 188, reversing 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 334.

Taxing the Sale of Imported Goods is the same in effect as taxing the goods specifically. Cook v. Pennsylvania, 97 U. S. 566; Gibbons v. Odgen, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Bank Tax Case, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 200; Pervear v. Com., 5 Wall. (U. S.) 478; Savings Soc. v. Coite, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 594; Waring v. Mobile, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 110; License Cases, 5 How. (U. S.) 504; Lin Sing v. Washburn, 20 Cal. 534; Daniel v. Richmond, 78 Ky. 542.

A tax in any shape on imports is a tax on the consumer, by enhancing the price of the commodity. And if a state is permitted to levy it in any form, it will put it into the power of a maritime importing state to raise a revenue for the support of its government from citizens of other states, as certainly and effectually as if the tax was laid openly and without disguise as a duty on imports. Such a power in a state would defeat one of the principal objects of forming and adopting the Constitution. It cannot be done directly, in the shape of a duty on imports, for that is expressly prohibited. And as it cannot be done directly, it could hardly be a just and sound construction of the Constitution which would enable a state to accomplish precisely the same thing under another name and in a different form. License Cases, 5 How. but such goods cannot be taxed merely because they have been brought from a foreign country.¹

Articles Brought from Another State. — Articles brought from one state into another are not imports within the meaning of the provision of the Federal Constitution forbidding the states to tax imports.²

cc. EXCEPTIONS IN CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS — (aa) Inspection Laws. — The Constitution of the United States expressly excepts from the prohibition of state taxation of imports and exports such taxes as it may be absolutely necessary to impose in order to execute the state inspection laws,³ that is, the Constitution in terms excludes from the category of duties on imports and exports such fees or exactions as a state may impose merely to pay for services performed in inspecting commodities.⁴

Test of Legality. — Since the charges imposed under inspection laws are unauthorized only for the purpose of paying the expenses of the inspection and not for the purpose of raising revenue, the test of legality in all cases where inspection is necessary or proper is the reasonableness of the charges.⁵

Jurisdiction to Determine Question of Legality. — Some doubt has been entertained as to whether it is not exclusively within the province of Congress, and not at all within that of a court, to decide whether a charge under an inspection law is or is not excessive;⁶ but in the later cases the courts have passed on the question without any suggestion of want of jurisdiction.⁷ The courts, however, will not go into an examination of the question whether the imposition is excessive, unless for the purpose of deciding whether the tax is only colorably an inspection charge.⁸

cation that the net produce of all such duties shall be for the use of the treasury of the United States, and that all such laws shall be subject to the revision and control of Congress.¹

(b) Regulation of Commerce.—The subject of the provisions of the Constitution of the United States relating to the regulation of commerce as affecting state taxation is fully treated in another part of this work.²

(c) Equal Privileges, Immunities, and Protection of Law.—The Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, which provides that no state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, or deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law, imposes a limitation on the exercise of all the powers of the state, including among them that of taxation.³ This prohibition against the denial by any state to citizens within its jurisdiction of the equal protection of the laws forbids, in a sense, the imposition of unequal taxes. The rule is that unequal taxes may not be imposed on property of the same kind in the same situation and used for the same purpose. But the protection afforded by the Fourteenth Amendment has never been carried to the extent of requiring that the same taxes shall be imposed in the same manner on every class of property irrespective of its nature or condition or class.⁴ This provision, however, was not intended to protect a citizen of any state against discrimination made by his own state in favor of the citizens of other states,⁵ or to prohibit discrimination between different classes of citizens of State May Tax Citizens of Other States Equally with Its Own Citizens.—The constitution does not exempt citizens of other states or of the United States from any burden which the law of the state imposes on its own citizens. Ex p. Thornton, 12 Fed. Rep. 538; Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 123; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 169; Jackson v. Bulloch, 12 Conn. 38; Com. v. Milton, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 212, 54 Am. Taxation of Unnaturalized Foreigners.—An act imposing a tax on the employers of foreign unnaturalized male persons over twenty-one years of age imposes on such persons burdens which are not laid on others in the same calling and condition, and therefore operates to deny to them the equal protection of the laws. Juniata

Rep. 777. And see Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97.

Inequality of Burden.—A tax which imposes inequality of burden operates as a denial of the equal protection of the laws, but the mere fact that inequality may result does not necessarily bring the statute within the constitutional prohibition. Thus, a state law which permits banks at their election to pay four mills on each dollar of the actual value of the shares of stock, or to collect from the shareholders a tax of eight mills on the dollar on the par value of all the shares, does not violate the constitutional provision, because any inequality of burden that may follow results from a privilege offered to all. Merchants' Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461.

But equal protection of the law is denied by a statute providing for the levy of a fire tax on all property, but excluding the property of railroad companies on which the tax is levied from the benefit and protection which the law should afford. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Clark, 60 Kan. 826.

(d) Impairment of Obligation of Contracts. — The provision of the Constitution of the United States that no state shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts² constitutes a limitation on the taxing power of the states.³

Contracts of Individuals and Private Corporations. — The general principle is that a law which directly deprives a party to a contract of any portion of the benefits to which he was by its terms entitled, or which indirectly produces the same result by subtracting from the effectiveness of the remedy, is a law impairing the obligation of the contract.⁴ Thus, a law imposing a tax on the interest stipulated to be paid on loans within the state, and requiring the debtor to deduct the amount of the tax from each instalment of interest or dividend, as it matures, impairs the obligation of the contract as to nonresident creditors so far as the law is applicable to loans made before its enactment, because it diminishes the amount of interest to which the creditors are entitled by the terms of their contract.⁵ But a contract between individuals is not impaired by being taxed, when the tax can be regarded as a tax on income derived from the contract or an excise tax, and not a tax on the creditor.⁶

Contracts of State. — The prohibition against laws impairing the obligation of contracts applies not only to the contracts of individuals and private corporations, but also to contracts to which the state is a party.⁷

The Distinction Between Resident and Nonresident Creditors is this: in the case of the resident creditor the debt due him is property in the state, which the state may lawfully tax, and the collection of the tax may be secured by requiring the debtor to pay the amount of the tax out of the interest as it accrues; but in the case of a nonresident creditor the debt is not property within the state, and the requirement that the debtor shall withhold a part of the interest money operates to deprive the creditor of a part of the benefits to which he is entitled under the contract. State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall. Michigan. — Robertson v. State Land Office Com'r, 44 Mich. 274.

Charters of Private Corporations. — The charter of a private corporation operates as a contract between the stockholder and the state that there shall be no revocation or impairment of any valuable right or privilege which constitutes the consideration in whole or in part for the acceptance of the charter.¹ Therefore, where such a charter provides that the corporation shall be taxed only as therein specified, and there is no revocation of power to alter or repeal the charter, a subsequent statute prescribing a different rule of taxation which does or may impose a greater burden on the corporation violates the constitutional prohibition of laws impairing the obligation of contracts.² The same rule applies to the case of a charter exempting the corporation from taxation. The exemption being the consideration, in whole or in part, for the acceptance of the charter, the contract obligation of the state is impaired by afterwards requiring the corporation to pay taxes.³

But a Mere Change in the Method of Taxation is not an impairment of the contract.⁴

Payment of Bonus for Charter. — The fact that a corporation has paid to the state a bonus for granting a charter of incorporation does not protect the grantee of the franchise from all taxation except such as the state has reserved the right to impose in the charter itself.⁵

But a statute declaring that property theretofore or thereafter conveyed for pious uses should be forever exempt from taxation has been held not to constitute a contract so as to prevent the legislature from afterwards subjecting such property to taxation. *Osborne v. A Change in the Character or Objects of the Corporation will not preclude it from claiming the benefits of an exemption;¹ but if, by a change in its character, a corporation has disqualified itself to comply with the conditions on the performance of which the exemption was granted, it must be considered as having waived the exemption.²

Exemptions from Taxation. — It is well settled that a grant of exemption from taxation may constitute a contract within the meaning of the provision of the Federal Constitution forbidding the state to pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts. The distinctive feature of such a grant is a consideration to support it. The necessity for a consideration is the same that exists in the case of contracts between private persons. If there is no consideration for the grant of exemption, it is a mere offer of a bounty which may be withdrawn at any time, though the recipient of the bounty may have incurred expense on the faith of the offer.³

State or Municipal Obligations Made Receivable for Taxes. — Where obligations of a state or municipality are issued pursuant to a statute which makes them receivable in payment of taxes, such statute constitutes a contract between the state or municipality and the holders of the obligations so issued that the holders may use them in the payment of taxes; and any subsequent statute passed for the purpose of preventing or obstructing such use violates the contract clause of the Federal Constitution and is void.⁴

(e) Due Process of Law. — The power of the state to levy and collect taxes is also limited by that clause of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution which forbids any state to deprive any person of his property "without due process of law." This limitation, however, is not in the nature of a restriction on the power itself, but merely regulates its exercise so as to avoid

The rule stated in the text is analogous to the purchase of land from the state. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 307; Chaffin v. Taylor, 114 U. S. 309, 116 U. S. 567; Allen v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 114 U. S. 311; McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, overruling Com. v.*

In McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 663, the commonwealth of Virginia issued coupon bonds for the purpose of refunding its debt. The refunding statute provided that the coupons should be receivable in payment of taxes. Afterwards a statute was passed which imposed on taxpayers, at the time of offering the coupons in evidence in court, the duty of producing the bond from which the coupons tendered by them in payment of taxes were cut, and declared that expert evidence should not be receivable as to the genuineness of such coupons. It was held that such provision imposed a condition so unreasonable and onerous as not only to affect but to destroy the value of the bonds in the hands of persons who had purchased them, and was therefore a violation of the obligation of contracts.

In Edwards v. Williamson, 70 Ala. 145, a statute provided for the issuance of county bonds in aid of a railroad and placed the holders of such bonds on equality with the state and county in the assessment and collection of the necessary and proper taxes, and gave the same remedies against the tax collectors for any neglect or breach of duty. A later statute authorized tax collectors to give separate bonds for the collection of the general state and county taxes, and for the collection of any special tax "authorized by law or required by the judgment of any court," and provided that when a collector should give a bond conditioned for the collection of the general tax only, a collector might be appointed for the special taxes. It was held that the latter injustice to individuals. It is a principle of natural justice, which this constitutional provision is designed to secure, that every person on whom the burden of taxation is laid shall have notice of the assessment and an opportunity to be heard.¹ This subject has special relation to the assessment of taxes, and will be fully considered in that connection.²

(3) Restrictions in State Constitutions — (a) Equality and Uniformity — aa. NATURE AND OBJECT OF CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS. — The constitutions of the various states usually contain provisions designed to secure equality of burden in the matter of taxation, and these constitutional provisions vary much in the different states.³ The most usual provisions found in state constitutions are that taxation shall be "uniform,"⁴ or shall be equal and statute impaired the remedies of the holders of such county bonds and therefore violated the constitutional provision against laws impairing the obligation of contracts.

Different Rates in Different Districts. — A constitutional provision requiring equality and uniformity does not prevent the legislature from establishing taxing districts¹ without regard to existing political or territorial divisions,² and imposing different rates of taxation in different districts, where there is reasonable ground for so doing.³ But when the effect of such legislative action will clearly lead to gross inequality the courts will interfere to prevent injustice.⁴

Conformity to Constitutional Requirements. — A law must, in its nature, formation, and purpose, conform to the constitutional requirements,⁵ but the mere fact is limited by its terms to state taxation, in which case it will not operate as a restriction on municipalities.¹

bb. EQUALITY AND UNIFORMITY DISTINGUISHED — (aa) In General. — There has been much discussion in the courts about the meaning of the words "equal" and "uniform." The true distinction would seem to be that "uniformity" requires all property, similarly situated, to be taxed at the same rate and in the same manner,² while "equality" requires a fair and equitable distribution of the burden of taxation, so that each taxpayer shall contribute in proportion to his property.³

(bb) Uniformity Clause Construed. — Where the constitution requires uniformity in distributing the burden of taxation the legislature is generally permitted to divide property into classes and impose different rates on the different classes.⁴ The constitutional provisions respecting uniformity are variously expressed,

Winnebago Lake, etc., Plankroad Co.*, 11 Wis. 35; Milwaukee First Dept. v. Helfenstein, 16 Wis. 137; Johnson v. Milwaukee, 40 Wis. 315; Donnelly v. Decker, 58 Wis. 461, 46 Am. Rep. 637.

Taxing Power the Same No Matter by Whom Exercised. — And the taxing power, therefore, when exercised by the city or county authorities, is but the exercise of the taxing power of the legislature delegated to them, and is subject to every constitutional limitation to which the taxing power of the legislature is subject. And if so, a tax levied for public purposes, whether levied by the state, county, or city authorities, must be equal and uniform throughout the state, county, city, or taxing district to which it applies. Daly v. Morgan, 69 Md. 460. See Weeks v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 256.

Shelton*, 76 Va. 325.

2. Uniformity. — Weaver v. State, 89 Ga. 639; Warren v. Henly, 31 Iowa 31; Pringhar State Bank v. Rerick, 96 Iowa 238; Kansas City v. Whipple, 136 Mo. 475, 58 Am. St. Rep. 657; State v. Whittlesey, 17 Wash. 447.

3. Equality. — "If the rate of assessment and taxation be equal, it is conceived it will be uniform; that is, that no meaning can be attached to the word 'uniform' which is not conveyed by the word 'equal.' If the rate is everywhere equal, or the same, it will be uniform necessarily. If the rate is varied so that property of different kinds or in different localities is valued or taxed at different rates, the rate will be unequal, and so not uniform; and so far as it is equal it will also be uniform." Crawford v. Linn County, 11 Oregon 485.

A state statute which permits banks at their election to pay taxes at a certain rate on each dollar of the actual value of their capital, or to collect annually from the shareholders a tax at a certain other rate on the par value of the shares, does not violate the constitutional requirement of uniformity. It is possible under the operation of this law that one bank may pay at a less rate on the actual value of its banking property than another, but this inequality in the burden results from a privilege offered to all, and in order to induce prompt payment of taxes and a payment without litigation. The inequality of result comes from the election of certain taxpayers to avail themselves of privileges offered to all. Merchants', etc., Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461.

What Is Absolute Equality and Uniformity. — Absolute equality and uniformity is declared by the Minnesota court to be where every piece of property bears its just and proportionate share of the public burden at the exact ratio of its cash value to that of the entire taxable property of the state. Rice County v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 23 Minn. 280.

The Effect of Both Is to Require a Uniform Rate. — "The requirement of uniformity means that all property belonging to the same class shall be taxed alike, so that all horses shall be taxed at the same rate, and all lands or stocks or merchandise. There is to be no discrimination between property of the same class, and it shall not be competent to levy one rate upon country lands and another upon city lands, or one rate upon horses of one breed and another upon horses of a different breed. If the uniformity requirement stood alone, it would be competent to affix different rates to different kinds of property, and so to impose one rate upon all lands, and another upon all horses, and still another upon all stocks, and still another upon all merchandise. But this kind of discrimination is prohibited by the requirement of equality, by which it is made obligatory that the same rate shall be imposed on every kind and species of property that is subject to taxation." Adams v. Mississippi State Bank, 75 Miss. 701.

4. Uniformity Clause Construed. — State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575; Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 322; Gibbons v. District of Columbia, 116 U. S. 404; Davenport Bank v. Davenport Board of Equalization, 123 U. S. 83; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 33 Fed.

but they are generally construed to permit such classification by the legislature. The most usual provisions are that property shall be taxed by uniform rules,¹ that all laws imposing taxes for general purposes shall be uniform in their operation throughout the state,² and that all taxes shall be uniform on the same class of subjects.³

cc. REQUIREMENT OF EQUALITY AND UNIFORMITY. — The requirement of equality and uniformity does not mean that all property in the state shall be taxed,⁴ but it

In Florida, under former constitutional provisions for an equal and uniform mode of assessment and valuation, such classification was permitted by legislation. Levy v. Smith, 4 Fla. 154.

Requirement of Uniformity Does Not Prohibit Specific Taxes. — Warren v. Henly, 31 Iowa 31; Davenport v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 38 Iowa 633; Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39 Iowa 56; Herriott v. Potter, 115 Iowa 648.

1. Uniformity Classes — Taxation by Uniform Rules. — State v. Parker, 32 N. J. L. 426; State v. Underground Cable Co., (N. J. 1889) 18 Atl. Rep. 581; State v. Readington Tp., 36 N. J. The constitutional provision does not take away from the legislature the power of selecting the subjects of taxation. It does require that all the members of the class selected shall be included in the taxing law, and that the rule applied thereto shall be uniform as to the whole of the class, and that the assessment shall be made at the true value of the property constituting the class. Assessors v. Central R. Co., 48 N. J. L. 146.

State*, 113 Wis. 205.

In Ohio it is held that taxation by a uniform rule requires that the rate of taxation shall be uniform, and such uniformity coextensive with the territory to which it applies, whether the tax is a state, county, township, or city tax; and that every species of property not exempt from taxation, whether lands, goods, money, or choses in action, and however used or employed, shall go upon the tax duplicate at its true value in money. *State v. is construed as meaning that whenever property has been selected for taxation, the rate of taxation on the different species of property shall be the same according to its value when such standard is presented.¹ Whether the constitutional provision requires uniformity in the imposition of taxes, in which case taxing classes at different rates is permitted, or whether such provisions provide for equality and uniformity, in which case the rate imposed on each class selected for taxation must be identical, such provisions unite in requiring that each member of a class in the one case, or each member of the classes in the other case, must proportionately bear its burden with each and every other member of the class or classes respectively as the case may be;² that is, no member of a class taxed can escape taxation.³

Discrimination Between Classes Prohibited. — The constitutions of some states expressly forbid the taxation of any class or species of property at a higher rate than that imposed upon other species or classes.¹

dd. POWER OF LEGISLATURE TO CLASSIFY PROPERTY. — Arbitrary classification by the legislature of property or persons for the purpose of taxation, without regard to any system, is not generally permitted, and any separation into classes must rest on reasonable grounds.² All property or premises of like nature or conditions naturally falling into a particular class must, of course, be included in such class in the imposition of a tax.³

principle that the benefit which each person derives from the government has direct relation to the amount of property which he possesses and enjoys under its protection.¹ Such provisions preserve equality and uniformity by prescribing a fixed, unvarying basis for the levy of taxes.² They are mandatory³ and cannot be evaded by any legislative subterfuge,⁴ and the substitution in the imposition of a tax of any requirement, in lieu of valuation, will render such tax void.⁵ But such a provision does not apply to the levying of special assessments,⁶ or to occupation, business, and privilege taxes;⁷ nor does it apply to a valid exercise of the police power.⁸

Valuation Cannot Be Arbitrary. — Where such a provision exists the legislature may not adopt arbitrary rules for estimation of values, nor may arbitrary values be attached to property.⁹ In whatever form a tax may be imposed, where property interests are affected, the scaling or grading of the tax should be on an ad valorem basis.¹ From the nature of the subject-matter, however, exact valuation is often impossible; in such cases reasonable approximation thereto is all that is required.²

Different Modes of Valuation Permissible.—Such provision does not forbid the listing and valuation of different classes of property in different modes and by different agencies. Different methods are often necessary to reach the value of property, on account of its nature and situation.³

The Power of the Legislature to Exempt Property from taxation where such provisions exist has already been discussed under another title.⁴

(c) Double Taxation—aa. POWER TO IMPOSE.—Since the power of the legislature to tax is limited only by constitutional restrictions, it follows that the courts cannot declare void a statute imposing double taxation unless it be in contravention of some constitutional provision. In some states the requirements that taxation shall be equal and uniform, according to valuation, or the like, are held to forbid double taxation;⁵ but in other jurisdictions such provisions

bb. CONSTRUCTION OF STATUTES IMPOSING DOUBLE TAXATION.—The courts always frown upon double taxation, and even in those jurisdictions where the legislature is held to have power to impose it, such a construction will be given to the statutes as to avoid double taxes if possible.² A purpose to impose double taxes will not be presumed,³ and to produce such effect the legislative intent must be clear and unmistakable.⁴

cc. WHAT DOUBLE TAXATION INVALID — (aa) In General — Imposing Unequal Burdens. — Whatever diversity of opinion may exist as to the general power of the legislature to impose duplicate taxation, there can be no doubt that to tax twice the same property in the same hands for the same purpose, while other property belonging to the same class is taxed but once in the same period, is entirely subversive of the principle of equality of burden, and cannot be allowed where such constitutional requirements exist.¹ Thus, property held in trust cannot be taxed to both the trustee and the cestui que trust, since their title is identical, the cestui being the sole owner and responsible for all taxes on the property.²

Different Interests in Same Thing. — But where two persons hold different interests in the same thing each may properly be taxed, as they do not hold by the same title.³ Thus, the legislature has power to tax a debtor in the full value of all the property owned by him, without deducting the amount of his indebtedness, and at the same time to tax the creditor on the amount due him;⁴ or to tax mortgages at their face value, while the property upon which

"It would be difficult to give one good reason why a man who sells his store and goods, or his farm and stock, and invests his money in securities, ought not to bear his just proportion of the public burdens; and it cannot be denied that if he does not so there is an unjust discrimination in favor of a class that is already strong. He is protected by the laws in his person, and their aid may be invoked at any time to enforce payment of his demands. The courts are open for his benefit, just as they were when his property consisted of store or farm." State v. Carson City Sav. Bank, 17 Nev. 159.

Tax on Credits Is Tax on Capital. — "The goods and wares of the merchant require his unremitting care and labor to make them profitable; a farm with all its implements and stock would be wholly unproductive without the unceasing toil of the agriculturist; and the materials, machinery, etc., of the mechanic and the manufacturer are made productive only by their being accompanied with the labor of the

they are secured is also fully taxed;¹ or to tax bank deposits to both the bank and the depositor, where the ordinary relationship of debtor and creditor exists between them.²

Corporate Stock. — The question whether the taxation of shares of stock to the stockholder and of corporate property to the corporation constitutes double taxation is treated elsewhere.³

Rule Applies to Property Taxes Only. — The rule against double taxation applies only to property taxes based on value,⁴ and not to income taxes,⁵ succession taxes,⁶ or privilege taxes;⁷ nor does the imposition of a burden which is not a tax, as, for example, an inspection fee or a toll, in addition to the general tax, constitute double taxation.⁸

Taxation for Special Purposes is not prohibited, although the same property is also taxed for general purposes,⁹ and the restriction has no application to special assessments.¹⁰

(bb) Taxation in Different States. — Each state has the power to tax property within its limits, although such property may be subject to taxation in another state.¹¹

(d) Restrictions on Rate — aa. IN GENERAL. — Provisions are found in some con-

operatives. A tax upon all those classes of property which derive their productiveness from labor is, to some extent, a tax upon labor. But a tax upon credits is a tax upon capital alone, in its most productive form, unmingled with labor. To exempt credits from taxation, and throw the whole burden upon those forms of property which derive their productiveness from labor, would afford a most unfair and unjust advantage to capital over labor, oppressive in its consequences to the productive interests of the country." *Exchange Bank v. stitutions restricting the exercise of the taxing power by providing that the rate imposed shall not exceed a certain amount.¹ And where there is a provision limiting the amount of indebtedness that may be incurred, this also operates as a restriction on the power of taxation.² But provisions which merely restrict the manner or mode of taxation do not affect the rate.³

66. WHETHER RESTRICTIONS SELF-EXECUTING. — Where the constitution itself sets a limit upon the rate of taxation, the provision is self-executing.⁴ But a constitutional provision merely permitting or requiring the legislature to restrict the power of taxation is not self-executing; legislative action is necessary to enforce it,⁵ and if the legislature fail to fix a limit, or provide inefficient that such separation cannot be made, the entire tax must fail.¹

3. Restriction by Treaty.—The Constitution of the United States provides that all treaties made or which shall be made under the authority of the United States shall be the supreme law of the land, and the judges in every state shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any state to the contrary notwithstanding.² Therefore, the imposition of taxes by a state law which is repugnant to the stipulations of any treaty made under the authority of the United States is void.³ The Federal Constitution makes no distinction, however, between treaties made under authority of the United States and the statutes enacted by Congress, but both are declared to be the supreme law of the land. Therefore, the power of Congress to impose taxes is not restricted by any existing treaty, though a subsequent treaty, as the latest expression of the law-making power, may operate to repeal a previous tax law.⁴

4. Exercise of Power — a. LEGISLATIVE FUNCTION.—The power to tax is essentially legislative in its nature,⁵ and it is vested in the legislature of every state by a general grant of legislative power, whether specifically enumerated

Executive and Ministerial officers may enforce tax laws, but they do not possess and may not exercise the power of taxation, and therefore they cannot add to or vary any tax lawfully levied.³

Judicial Functions Respecting Taxation. — The exercise of the taxing power is sometimes committed to a judicial body, but the action of such body in that respect is quasi-legislative and not judicial.⁴ The courts cannot, by virtue of their judicial power, interfere with the legislature in the exercise of the taxing power so long as no constitutional provisions are violated.⁵ Even a failure on the part of the legislature to perform the duty imposed on it by the constitution of the state in respect to taxation ordinarily lays no foundation for judicial correction,¹ though the levy of the taxes is a legal duty, the performance of which may be enforced by judicial action.²

Legislature Exceeding Constitutional Limits of Power.—The courts have the power in particular cases, to determine whether the legislature has exceeded the constitutional limits of its power and to declare a tax law void in case such limits have been transgressed,³ and when a tax has been judicially declared to exceed the constitutional limits, no subsequent statute can nullify such decision.⁴ But a tax law cannot be declared void merely because it is opposed to the spirit of the constitution;⁵ the conflict with the constitution must be clear.⁶

b. MODE OF EXERCISE. — The mode of exercising the power of taxation is vested exclusively in the legislature subject only to such limitations as may be imposed by constitutional provisions,¹ and therefore the legislature may at any time change the mode of imposing taxes, and may change the mode of collecting taxes already imposed.² It may classify property for the purpose of taxing it,³ and it may create a new system of taxation so as to bring in property of a new character theretofore untaxed with some other property incidental thereto and worthless without it.⁴

Retrospective Legislation. — As a general rule tax laws should be prospective in their operation,⁵ and they are to be so construed whenever it is possible to do so.⁶ But retrospective tax laws are valid, unless legislation of that char-

3. Classification of Property for Taxation. — The legislature has the power to classify property as personal and real for the purpose of taxation, and in such classification it is not controlled by common-law distinctions between these classes of property. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Miami County, (Kan. 1903) 73 Pac. Rep. 103. See generally supra, this section, Constitutional Restrictions — Restrictions in State Constitutions — Power of Legislature to Classify Property.

4. Subjecting New Property to Taxation. — People v. Tax Com'rs, 174 N. Y. 444, reversing 79 N. Y. App. Div. 183. This case holds that the home rule provision of the constitution of New York, that "all city, town, and village officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this constitution shall be elected by the electors of such cities, towns, and villages, or of some division thereof, or appointed by such authorities thereof, as the legislature shall designate for that purpose," when invoked in relation to taxation should be considered in connection with the supreme taxing power of the legislature, and that therefore such provision does not deprive the legislature of power to appoint a state board of tax commissioners for the purpose of general taxation of all special franchises, and declaring such franchises to be real estate and "to include the value of the tangible property * * * situated in, upon, under, or above any street, highway, public place, or public waters in connection with the special franchise."

5. Tax Laws Generally Prospective. — Clark v. Hall, 19 Mich. 356; Smith v. Humphrey, 20 Mich. 398; Auditor Gen. v. Monroe County, 36 Mich. 70; Com. v. Pennsylvania Ins. Co., 13 Pa. St. 165; Price v. Mott, 52 Pa. St. 315.

In Locke v. New Orleans, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 172, it was held that a statute which simply authorized the imposition of a tax accrued on a previous assessment was not a retrospective tax.

acter is prohibited by constitutional provision,¹ or unless the effect of the particular enactment is to divest rights or to impair contract obligations.² Accordingly, defects in a law authorizing a tax may be remedied by amendment, so as to validate a tax levied under it;³ and so, too, defective or irregular proceedings in the exercise of a valid authority to levy, assess, or collect taxes, and even the lack of such authority, may be cured retrospectively by an act of the legislature.⁴

Strict Construction of Tax Laws — The general rule is that laws imposing taxes are to be strictly construed.⁵ But a law open to more than one construction will be given that construction which will most reasonably tend to effectuate the legislative intent.¹

5. Delegation of Power — a. GENERAL RULE. — The general rule is that since the legislative power has by the constitution been committed to the legislature as a distinct department of government, such power cannot be delegated by the legislature to any other department of the government, or to any citizen or citizens in either a private or official capacity.² It is accordingly held that the power of taxation cannot be delegated to the judicial department,³ to ministerial or administrative officers,⁴ or to individuals or private corporations.⁵

What Constitutes Delegations of Taxing Power. — It is not a delegation of the taxing power where the legislature commits to executive or administrative officers the merely administrative details that are involved in the exercise of the power of taxation. Such details relate only to the execution of the law as distinguished from the power to make the law.⁶

Some of the earlier cases held that the legislature cannot delegate to the people of a state

b. POLITICAL DIVISIONS OF STATE. — The rule that the power to tax cannot be delegated relates only to other departments of government, private corporations, and individuals either in their private capacities or as public officers. Political subdivisions of the state, such as cities, counties, and towns, are instrumentalities for the convenient administration of local government, and on them the legislature may, subject to constitutional restrictions and limitations, confer the power to tax to such an extent as the necessities of government may require;¹ and the imposition of taxes by cities, counties, or towns for their support is as much an exercise of the taxing power of the state as a tax imposed directly by the state.²

For a Full Discussion of the subject of taxation by municipalities, see infra, this title, Municipal Taxation.

A Territorial Legislature may delegate the power of taxation to municipalities. Burnes v. Atchison, 2 Kan. 454.

Cannot Be Given to Part of Municipality. — In Illinois the power to assess and collect taxes for corporate purposes cannot be given to or exercised by a fractional portion of a municipality. Madison County v. People, 58 Ill. 456.

Power Vested in Private Corporation. — Although a power to tax vested in a private corporation is illegal and void, when it is transferred to a municipal corporation it is not so. Allentown v. Henry, 73 Pa. St. 404.

2. United States. — Gilman v. Sheboygan, a

Volume XXVII.

Extent of Delegation. — The state cannot authorize a municipal corporation to lay a tax which the state could not itself impose,¹ and an unlimited power to lay taxes and raise money, aside from and beyond what may be necessary and proper for legitimate municipal purposes, cannot be conferred.² Nor can the power to tax be delegated for any except local or corporate purposes.³

Constitutional Limitations. — Constitutional provisions authorizing corporate authorities of municipalities to lay taxes for corporate purposes constitute a limitation on the power of the legislature to grant the right to lay taxes to any other than the local authorities of the municipality or district to be taxed,⁴ or for any other than corporate purposes.⁵ So provisions limiting the rate of taxation operate as a limitation on the legislative power to authorize municipal taxation.⁶ Constitutional prohibitions against local and special tax laws, and against special acts conferring corporate powers, preclude the legislature from delegating the power to tax by special or local enactment.⁷

Creation of Political Divisions. — The legislature has full power, unless restricted by the constitution, to create political divisions of the state for the purpose of taxation; but it cannot establish a taxing district within an existing political corporation or division of the state in which to impose taxes without regard to the special benefits, unless such district is itself made a political division with appropriate powers of self-government.⁸ The legislature may, however,

6. Rate of Taxation. — State v. Van Every, 75 Mo. 530; Hebard v. Ashland County, 55 Wis. 145.

Under the North Carolina constitution, taxation for state and county purposes, combined for the current and necessary expenses of the county government and new debts, cannot exceed the constitutional limitation. French v. New Hanover County, 74 N. Car. 692.

The New York constitutional provision prohibiting the creation of debts except to a limited extent, unless the laws authorizing them are submitted to the people, does not apply to municipal debts. People v. Flagg, 46 N. Y. 401.

7. Hallo v. Helmer, 12 Neb. 87; Hammer v. State, 44 N. J. L. 667.

Constitutional provisions authorizing the legislature to confer the power to tax upon certain municipalities do not prohibit it from conferring the same power upon other municipalities. State v. Dodge County, 8 Neb. 124, 30 Am. Rep. 819; Darst v. Griffin, 31 Neb. 668.

8. Power to Create Taxing Districts. — People v. Salomon, 51 Ill. 37; State v. Fuller, 39 N. J. L. 576, 40 N. J. L. 615; State v. Drainage, etc., Com'rs, 41 N. J. L. 154; Vreeland v. L. 298.

In Carter v. Wade, 59 N. J. L. 119, it was held that the Act of April 4, 1873, was unconstitutional because it erected a part of a township into a taxing district for the improvement and repair of public roads therein without constituting the district a political corporation or division of the state and without endowing it with any power of local government.

Constitutional Restrictions. — Thus the con-without regard to the special benefits, create a taxing district for specified purposes out of a part of an existing political district, provided such part is itself made a political district with powers of local government.¹

Construction of Statute. — It is well settled that statutes delegating the power to levy taxes are to be strictly construed.²

Legislature Forbidden to Impose Municipal Taxes. — The constitutions of some of the states forbid the legislature to impose taxes for municipal purposes. Under such provisions the only power of the legislature is to authorize the local authorities to act, or to provide for submitting the question of taxation to the people of the locality.³ And in some states taxation for works of internal improvement is prohibited and local interests are required to be left in the hands of the proper local officers.⁴

6. Waiver or Relinquishment. — It is well settled that the legislature may waive or relinquish the power to tax in particular instances, unless restricted in that respect by constitutional provisions.⁵ Such waiver or relinquishment may be accomplished by an act operating as a contract,⁶ and any subsequent act in derogation thereof will be invalid as impairing the obligation of the contract.⁷

Expression of Legislative Intent. — There can be no relinquishment of the taxing power of the state unless the intention to relinquish is declared in clear and stitution of Tennessee, authorizing the legislature to delegate the power of taxation to counties and incorporated towns, is held impliedly to exclude delegation to any other agency, and, therefore, a levee district cannot be endowed with power to levy taxes. *Reelfoot Lake Levee Dist. v. Before any exemption or limitation can be admitted, the intent of the legislature to confer immunity or prescribe the limitation must be clear beyond a reasonable doubt. All public grants are strictly construed. Nothing can be taken against the state by presumption or inference. The established rule of construction in such cases is, that rights, privileges, and immunities not expressly granted are reserved. Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 225.

Personal Nature of Privilege. — The general rule is that a grant of exemption from taxation is a personal privilege, and not transferable, though the legislature may authorize a transfer or may attack the exemption to specific property. This subject is fully discussed elsewhere in this work.¹

V. PURPOSE OF TAXATION — 1. For Revenue. — The general object of taxation is the raising of revenue for governmental purposes.² Revenue has been defined as the annual produce of taxes, excise, customs, duties, rents, etc., which a nation or state collects and receives into the treasury for public use.³ Technically, therefore, taxation is only a method of raising revenue, but revenue must be the purpose of taxation, and it has been said to be possible that a statute might be violative of constitutional rights if it were so flagrantly beyond revenue purposes as to indicate other objects under the guise of revenue.⁴ It will be seen that the limitation of taxation to revenue is largely synonymous with its limitation to public purposes.

2. For Public Purposes — a. NECESSITY OF PUBLIC PURPOSE. — The power to tax is subject to the limitation that a tax must be laid for a public purpose only, and an imposition in the form of a tax for purposes of private interest is void and unconstitutional.⁵ This limitation of the taxing power has been based on the ground that its public purpose is inherent in the very definition

1. Personal Nature of Privilege. — See the title EXEMPTIONS (FROM TAXATION), vol. 12, p. 298 et seq.

2. Object — Revenue. — People v. Doe, 36 Cal. 222; Frost v. Flick, 1 Dak. 129; Palmer v. Stumph, 29 Ind. 329. See also King v. Portland, 2 Oregon 146.

Taxes are the revenue collected from the people for objects in which they are interested; the contributions of the people for things useful and conducive to their welfare. Hilbish v. Catherman, 64 Pa. St. 154.

For Current Expenses Only. — In Michigan it has been said to be "contrary to all our system to levy taxes for the purpose of accumulating funds for the future." Midland Tp. v. Roscommon Tp., 39 Mich. 424.

But that contingent expenses not yet incurred may justify taxation, see infra, this section.

Where the Object Is Not Revenue but Regulation, the police power is involved, and the restrictions upon the taxing power do not apply. See the title POLICE POWER, vol. 22, p. 917; and supra, this section, 1. c. Distinguished from Police Power. See also Youngblood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 406, 20 Am. Rep. 654.

and nature of a tax, so that a law authorizing a tax for merely private purposes would be an act of spoliation under legislative form and not within the legitimate scope of legislative authority.¹ For all taxation, whether local or general, is based upon the theory that it is in return for the benefit received by the person who pays the tax or by the property which is assessed.² Sometimes, however, this principle is explicitly stated in the constitution,³ and it has been held to be implicit in various provisions regulating taxation, as in those specifying the purposes for which the power to tax may be exercised, or for which the revenue collected may be employed, as well as in provisions which guard the liberty and property of the individual.⁴

1. Inherent in Definition of Tax. — Citizens' Sav., etc., Assoc. v. Topeka, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 664, affirming 3 Dill. (U. S.) 376; Cole v. La Grange, 19 Fed. Rep. 871, affirmed 113 U. St. 104; Sharpless v. Philadelphia, 21 Pa. St. 147, 59 Am. Dec. 759.

This principle "underlies all government that is based upon reason rather than upon force." Lowell v. Boston, 111 Mass. 461, 15 Am. Rep. 39.

2. Matter of Madera Irrigation Dist., 92 Cal. 296, 27 Am. St. Rep. 106.

3. Constitutional Provisions. — See, for instance, State v. Switzler, 143 Mo. 314, 65 Am. St. Rep. 658, holding that the provision of the Missouri constitution applies to all taxes by whatever name levied.

4. Lowell v. Boston, 111 Mass. 461, 15 Am. Rep. 39, when these various constitutional provisions were quoted as underlying the principle stated in the text. But compare, as to some of these provisions, Sharpless v. Philadelphia, 21 Pa. St. 147, 59 Am. Dec. 759.

In Kentucky the constitutional provision that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation has been held to render void taxes for other than public purposes. Cheaney v. Hooser, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 342; Covington v. Southgate, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 498. In New York the same reasoning has been validity, and not the magnitude of the interests to be affected, nor the degree to which the general advantage of the community, and thus the public welfare, may be ultimately benefited by their promotion.¹

Course and Usage of Government. — The solution of the question must be governed, it has been said, mainly by the course and usage of the government, the objects for which taxes have been customarily and by long course of legislation levied, what objects or purposes have been considered necessary to the support and for the use of the government, whether state or municipal.²

Courts Should Not Approach This Question in a Narrow or Illiberal Spirit, or condemn whatever is not absolutely needful for the continued existence of organized government, for wise statesmanship must look beyond immediate needs and embrace objects which tend to make the government subserve the general well-being of society and advance the present and prospective happiness and prosperity of the people.³

(2) Benefits Merely Incidental. — Merely incidental benefits to the public or to the state from the promotion of private enterprises do not render the purposes of a tax public.⁴ But any direct public benefit, no matter how slight, as distinguished from such merely incidental benefits, will sustain the tax,⁵ and the fact that private interests are incidentally benefited⁶ or incidentally injured⁷ cannot render it void.

used. People v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 422, 55 Am. Dec. 266; Astor v. New York, 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. 559.

1. Lowell v. Boston, 111 Mass. 454, 15 Am. Rep. 39; Minneapolis v. Janney, 86 Minn. 111.

A Public Purpose Within the Law of Eminent Domain has been held not necessarily within the law of taxation. People v. Salem Tp. Board, 20 Mich. 452, 4 Am. Rep. 400; Whiting v. Sheboygan, etc., R. Co., 25 Wis. 167, 3 Am. Rep. 30.

In the former case Cooley, J., distinguishes the two powers. The important consideration in eminent domain is the necessity of accomplishing some public good which is otherwise impracticable, the power being akin to the police power rather than to that of taxation. In respect to taxation the criterion is not necessity but public policy, for while some taxes are strictly matters of necessity, others are purely matters of policy and enlightened discretion.

But in Stewart v. Polk County, 30 Iowa 24, 1 Am. Rep. 238, it was said that the taxing power may be exercised "for any object that will justify the exercise of the right of eminent domain," thus making a public purpose to be the same in each case.

These cases all arose on the question of municipal aid to railways, and the question with these and other authorities is discussed in the title MUNICIPAL AID, vol. 20, pp. 1087, 1088.

That the Public Must Pay for a Use in aid of which taxation is imposed, does not render the use private; the test is not enjoyment wholly at the public expense, but a common and equal right free from unreasonable discrimination. Perry v. Keene, 56 N. H. 514; Holt v. Antrim, 64 N. H. 284.

Instances are grist mills, schools, and turnpikes. See the title MUNICIPAL AID, vol. 20, pp. 1085, 1086.

Public Purposes in the Law of Taxation Defined. — The term "public purposes" in the law of taxation "has no relation to the urgency of the public need [as in the law of eminent domain] or to the extent of the public benefit which is to follow. It is, on the other hand, merely a term of classification to distinguish the objects for which, according to settled usage, the government is to provide, from those which, by the like usage, are left to private inclination, interest, or liberality." People v. Salem Tp. Board, 20 Mich. 485, 4 Am. Rep. 400, per Cooley, J.

See also the title MUNICIPAL AID, vol. 20, p. 1084.

Where the Purposes are Partly Private and Partly Public, the act must wholly fail, unless, perhaps, where the part to be raised for the private purpose can be distinguished and severed. Coates v. Campbell, 37 Minn. 498. And see MacKenzie v. Wooley, 39 La. Ann. 944, where such purposes were held separable.

The Power to Tax Is the Power to Destroy. — M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 431; Citizens' Sav., etc., Assoc. v. Topeka, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 663. And the national government in the exercise of the taxing power has driven out

(3) Functions of Legislature and Judiciary. — The question whether the interests of the public are sufficiently involved to justify the exercise of the taxing power is in the first instance for the legislature to decide; but, since the requirement of a public purpose in taxation is a limitation upon the power of the legislature, the courts must ultimately decide whether the legislature has overstepped its constitutional powers and whether the purpose is public or private.¹ The wisdom or policy of a tax is entirely in the determination of the legislature,² and the least possibility that it will promote the public welfare renders the question one of policy beyond the sphere of the courts.³ All doubts are to be resolved in favor of the legislature,⁴ and an exercise of the taxing power will be declared unconstitutional only when the absence of all possible public interest is clear and palpable.⁵

c. PURPOSES HELD TO BE PUBLIC OR OTHERWISE. — Applying the statement already made, that the question of the public nature of a purpose is to be determined less by the application of principles than by the settled usage of government, there is given in the notes a list of many subjects which have been held to be private,⁶ as well as a more numerous list of purposes which or existence state banks of issue. Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 533, the court saying that even though the prohibitory purpose of the tax was plain, the judiciary could not prescribe to the legislature limitations on the exercise of its acknowledged powers. rarely find a ground for judicial interposition.¹ But where it is palpably and clearly apparent that a statute has imposed a local burden on a community for purposes in which the community has no interest, the statute may be annulled.²

(4) Apportionment of Burdens—Between State and Taxing Districts or Between Taxing Districts. — As the power of taxation and the power of apportioning taxation are identical and inseparable,³ the apportionment of the tax between the general public and the local division of the state, and between different local divisions, is a matter entirely in the discretion of the legislature.⁴

VI. PERSONS AND THINGS TAXABLE — 1. In General — The Taxing Power of a State Extends to All Persons and Property within the state, except so far as the power is limited by the constitution either by express words or by necessary implication.⁵ Taxes may be imposed directly on persons, in the form of capitation or poll taxes; on property directly, as revenue taxes and assessments⁶ on the owner in respect of his property,⁷ or on business or the owner in respect of only a liability in rem and not a personal liability is created by a local or special assessment,¹ and the same has been held as to taxes on "nonresident" or "unseated lands."²

2. Polls. — A poll tax or capitation tax is a tax of a specific sum laid upon the individual simply, without reference to his property, business, or employment.³ The imposition of poll taxes is not prohibited by a constitutional requirement that taxes shall be in proportion to the value of property owned.⁴ The constitutions of two states declare the imposition of poll taxes grievous and oppressive,⁵ but in many states they are provided for by constitutional provision,⁶ and the application of the proceeds may be directed.⁷

Liability to Poll Tax. — The right to levy a poll tax depends on residence and not on citizenship.⁸

3. Property in General — a. MEANING AND CONSTRUCTION OF "PROPERTY." — The term "property," standing unqualified in constitutions or statutes designating subjects of taxation, includes both real and personal property or estate, and intangible as well as tangible rights of value.¹ But it has been said that the word "property" must receive a construction in accordance with its context, and whether a specific right is subject to taxation may depend upon whether it is capable of valuation bearing a definite relation to other things and property² or whether the legislature has provided a method for its valuation.³

Monuser. — The fact that no use is made of property by the owner does not affect its character as taxable.⁴

b. PROPERTY WITHIN JURISDICTION OF STATE. — Tax laws have no extraterritorial force,⁵ and the taxing power of the state is generally limited in terms to property within the state. The question of what property is taxable within such a power is considered elsewhere in this title.⁶ It may be stated generally that debts and credits, as to which controversy has frequently arisen, are not property within the state of the debtor's domicile or residence, but in that of the creditor's domicile only.⁷ Yet such debts when evidenced by mortgages, bonds, notes, etc., may be taxable in the state where such choses in action are found, when proper provision is made therefor in the statutes.⁸

c. REAL OR PERSONAL PROPERTY. — Whether particular property is taxable as realty or personalty must depend on the tax statutes of the state, for

In Mecartney v. Caskey, 66 Kan. 412, after deciding that a tax-sale certificate owned by a nonresident of the state was not taxable, the court said that this doctrine admitted of exception: "An owner may separate his certificates from himself, attach them to some locality apart from his residence, and employ them there in such manner as to effect a permanent submission of them to the latter jurisdiction; or the legislature may express a purpose to regard the presence in the state of tax-sale certificates belonging to a nonresident as a submission of them to the jurisdiction, and therefore require a contribution upon them to the support of the government."

Evidences of Debt, such as bank notes, bills of exchange, or bonds, when situated in the state, the legislature has power to tax; but the legislature has no power to tax debts reduced to no such concrete form except at the domicile of the creditor. *Rayley v. the legislature has the right to classify property for the purpose of taxation.¹ Where the machinery of the statutes permits agreements between parties as to the nature of particular interests, for instance growing trees or houses, such agreements may control,² but they cannot work a change in the nature of the property so as to prejudice the state's claim thereon for taxation.³

Good Will. — In New York the good will of a business is not taxable either as real or personal property under the general tax law,⁴ but under the corporation franchise tax law it is taxable with the franchise as forming a part of the value of the shares.⁵ In Indiana it has been held that good will is not per se property and that its taxation has not been authorized by statute.⁶

4. Personal Property — a. IN GENERAL. — The state has a right to tax all personal property within its jurisdiction without regard to the place of the owner's domicile.⁷

Visible Property Only Held to Be Taxable. — Under some grants of authority to tax property or personal property, or enumerating nominatim the subjects to be taxed, it has been held that only visible, tangible property was taxable, the term not embracing debts, money, or choses in action.⁸ The power of selecting the subjects of taxation is purely legislative, and whether special articles or rights are taxable depends on the construction of the statute.⁹ The position

Retrospective Effect of Tax Law. — A loan of money made before the passage of a tax law, which renders loans taxable, is within the law, since it "operates upon all property within the state which comes within its provisions." U. S. Bank v. State, 12 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 461.

A So-called "Dog Tax," laid as a police regulation to discourage keeping dogs, does not recognize dogs as property. Ex p. Cooper, 3 Tex. App. 489, 30 Am. Rep. 152. And see Crawford v. Ligonier, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 369, and the title POLICE POWER, vol. 22, p. 918. But see Mullaly v. People, 86 N. Y. 365; People v. McMaster, (Supm. Ct. Gen. T.) 10 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 132.

8. Confined to Tangible Property. — U. S. Bank v. Huth, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 444; Johnson v. Lexington, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 521; Covington v. Powell, 2 Met. (Ky.) 226; Louisville v. Henning, 1 Bush (Ky.) 381; Pullen v. Raleigh, 68 N. Car. 451. These were all cases of municipal taxation and turned on the construction of clauses in the charter.

Under the Borough Act of 1851 in Pennsylvania, conferring the power to tax "all property," it was held that only property capable of manual occupation was included. Goepp v. Bethlehem, 28 Pa. St. 249; Mifflintown v. Jacobs, 69 Pa. St. 151. See, for discussion of the cases in this note, the title PROPERTY, vol. 23, p. 266.

9. Articles Used in Performance of Public Contract. — Lanterns owned and used by a foreign corporation in connection with the performance of a contract to light streets for a term of years (the contract being primarily a contract to render service) have been held not "personal property within the commonwealth leased for profit," under the Massachusetts statute rendering such property taxable. Rising Sun Lighting Co. v. Boston, 181 Mass. 227.

Associated Press Membership. — A contract of membership in the Associated Press is not taxable property within the laws of Colorado. Arapahoe County v. Rocky Mountain News Printing Co., 15 Colo. App. 189.

Insurance Premiums are not taxable as personality in Iowa, being in the nature of income.

of personal property as within the sphere of state or national laws¹ or the connection of such property with realty² may sometimes raise a question of the right to tax or of the category within which a thing falls.

b. ABSTRACT BOOKS.—Abstract books containing valuable information as to the history of real property titles, and having a market value, have been held taxable as personal property although in manuscript,³ though a contrary conclusion has been reached in Michigan.⁴

c. CREDITS, DEBTS, AND SECURITIES.—Credits, debts, and securities are, under one form of expression or another, universally rendered taxable as personal property.⁵

Dubuque v. Northwestern L. Ins. Co., 29 Iowa 9; Burlington v. Putnam Ins. Co., 31 Iowa 102.

Insurance Policies are not taxable in Indiana, no method of valuation having been provided. State Board of Tax Com'rs v. Holliday, 150 Ind. 216.

Intoxicating Liquors not kept for sale illegally are taxable as personal property. Dunbar v. Board of Aldermen, 101 Mass. 317.

Money as a subject of taxation is defined in the statutes of Ohio. See Patton v. Commercial Bank, 7 Ohio N. P. 401, 10 Ohio Dec. 321.

See generally infra, this section, Real Property.

2. Grain Elevators owned by other parties, situated on the right of way of a railroad company, are, under the Minnesota statutes, for purposes of taxation, personal property. State v. Red River Valley Elevator Co., 69 Minn. 131, overruling Minneapolis, etc., Elevator Co. v. Clay County, 60 Minn. 522. But see as to elevators owned by the railroad company. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Houston County, 38 Minn. 531.

Mineral Ores after being detached from the land are personality and taxable as such. Forbes v. Gracey, 94 U. S. 762. See also infra, this section, Real Property; and ORE, vol. 21, p. 1007.

Rent.—Rent arrear is a chose in action and taxable as a credit, but rent to grow due is a part of the land and not taxable as personality. Scully v. People, 104 Ill. 349; People v. McComber, (Supm. Ct. Spec. T.) 7 N. Y. Supp. 71.

3. Abstract Books.—Leon Loan, etc., Co. v. Board of Equalization, 86 Iowa 127, 41 Am. St. Rep. 486; Booth, etc., Abstract Co. v. Phelps, 8 Wash. 549, 40 Am. St. Rep. 921 (though the books were largely in cipher).

4. Perry v. Big Rapids, 67 Mich. 146, 11 Am. St. Rep. 570; Loomis v. Jackson, 130 Mich. 594.

5. Credits are often rendered taxable to the creditor. Hamersley v. Franey, 39 Conn. 176 ("Moneys, credits, choses in action, bonds, notes," etc.); Buck v. Miller, 147 Ind. 586, 62 Am. St. Rep. 436; Perrine v. Jacobs, 64 Iowa 79; Albia First Nat. Bank v. Albia, 86 Iowa 28 (shares of national bank stock are "credits"); Liverpool, etc., Ins. Co. v. Assessors, 51 La. Volume XXVII.

Property Only as to Creditors. — Debts and securities are taxable only to the creditor or holder and not to the debtor, for as to him they are not property.¹

Security Given for Debts and Credits. — The fact that debts and credits in the state are secured by property without the state does not affect their liability to taxation in the state,² and if debts are owing to nonresidents they are not rendered taxable as mere debts or credits by the fact that they are secured by mortgages of property within the state,³ although laws specially framed for the taxation of the security in the state of its situs will not be unconstitutional.⁴

Debts Secured by Non-Taxable Property. — Debts or credits are none the less taxable because secured by pledges of property which is by law exempt from taxation.⁵

Meaning of "Debt." — The word "debt" in an enumeration of taxable property includes as well sums the payment of which is promised at a future day, as sums already due and payable, but it does not extend to money payable upon a future contingency.⁶ Thus mere claims for damages are not

The right of an owner of land under an agreement by which a city occupies the land and may acquire title by completing certain payments, but is under no obligation to make such payments, is not taxable as a "debt." Perrigo v. Milwaukee, 92 Wis. 236.

An Annuity is a debt under a tax law only so far as payments are actually due, future payments depending on the contingency of life or death. State v. Cornell, 31 N. J. L. 374; State v. Shurts, 41 N. J. L. 279. But see Wetmore v. State, 18 Ohio 77 (distinguished in Chisholm v. Shields, 67 Ohio St. 374, reversing 11 Ohio Cir. Dec. 361, 21 Ohio Cir. Ct. 231), estimating taxation upon the basis of the calculated present value of an annuity. See also infra, this title, IX. 6. e. (2) (f) Separate Estates or Interests in Same Property.

A Certificate of Purchase under a Foreclosure Sale is taxable, since the only contingency is whether the purchaser shall receive a deed or his bid with interest. Wedgbury v. Cassell, 164 Ill. 622.

Debts Due are taxable as credits.

An Award by the Court of Commissioners of the Alabama Claims is not taxable as a "debt due" until Congress has made a specific appropriation for its payment. Bucksport v. Woodman, 68 Me. 33.

Debts, etc., Not Due are so taxable. New Jersey Hedge Co. v. Craig, 51 N. J. L. 437; People v. McComber, (Supm. Ct. Spec. T.) 7 N. Y. Supp. 71; Rheinboldt v. Raine, 52 Ohio St. 160, 3 Ohio Cir. Dec. 577.

Money Due or Owning for Sale of Realty. — Ouachita County v. Rumph, 43 Ark. 525; Perrine v. Jacobs, 64 Iowa 79; State v. Rand, 39 Minn. 502; People v. Ogdensburgh, 48 N. Y. 390; Rheinboldt v. Raine, 52 Ohio St. 160, taxable,¹ but a specific award for damages for lands taken under eminent domain may be taxed, although the property owner declined to accept the award for inadequacy.²

d. MONEY DEPOSITED IN BANK.—Cash on deposit with a bank is usually regarded as a chose in action, the relation between bank and depositor being merely that of debtor and creditor,³ and deposits are so taxable;⁴ but in some states deposits are, under the tax laws, held assessable as money on hand or cash.⁵

e. MORTGAGES.—Under some statutes a mortgage is considered as a mere security for money loaned, and is taxed to the mortgagee as personal property,⁶ but in other states it is regarded for purposes of taxation as an interest in the realty.⁷

f. STATE AND MUNICIPAL BONDS.—State and municipal bonds have been held not to be embraced in a general enumeration of things taxable in a statute of the state wherein such bonds were issued,⁸ but they may be specifically included.⁹ Bonds of another state and of municipalities situated in

A deposit of United States Legal Tender Notes in a bank was, if the deposit was special, not taxable before the act of Congress rendering them taxable (28 U. S. Stat. L. 278), but if the deposit was general, the bank mingling them with its other funds, though agreeing to repay in legal notes, they were taxable even before the act. Carpenter v. Lewis, 9 Ohio Dec. 498.

Money Deposited in Saving Banks is sometimes made an exception to this rule. Burke v. Badlam, 57 Cal. 602. And see the title SAVINGS BANKS, vol. 24, p. 1246.

Where a statute made taxable "all public loans whatsoever, except those issued by this commonwealth or the United States," municipal bonds were held taxable. Wilkes-Barre Deposit, etc., Bank v. Wilkes-Barre, 148 Pa. St. 601.

another state, however, are subject to taxation without regard to whether they are taxable or not in the latter state.¹

g. INVESTMENTS IN FEDERAL SECURITIES. — Investments in securities of the United States are free from taxes by the states.²

h. PATENT RIGHTS AND COPYRIGHTS. — Tangible articles produced under letters patent of the United States are subject to taxation by the several states, but the incorporeal right conferred by the patent is not subject to state taxation.³ Capital invested in United States patent rights has been held not liable to state taxation.⁴ Copyrights stand on the same basis as patent rights with reference to the subject of state taxation, and are exempt.⁵

5. Real Property — a. DEFINITION. — Real property, within the meaning of a statute providing for taxation, has been held to embrace every species of title, whether inchoate or complete.⁶

The Term "Property in Lands" is not confined to title in fee, but is sufficiently comprehensive to include any usufructory interest, whether it be a leasehold or a mere right of possession.⁷

Several Distinct Interests in the Same Land. — Several persons may have in one tract of land distinct interests⁸ which are the subject of taxation, such as

4. See references in the last note.

In New York, People v. Campbell, 138 N. Y. 543, followed in People v. Wemple, 148 N. Y. 690, would seem to lead to a contrary conclusion. The question was alluded to but not decided in People v. Barker, 139 N. Y. 35. In People v. Assessors, 156 N. Y. 417, affirming 19 N. Y. App. Div. 599, it was held that the value of patent rights owned by a corporation may not be included in assessing the same, the question being left open whether when "the capital stock of an electric company is used to pay for the use of methods and appliances of a parent company, protected by patents, [it] can be said that this stock is invested in patent rights within the general principles that patents are not taxable."

Maryland. — In Crown Cork, etc., Co. v. State, 87 Md. 687, 67 Am. St. Rep. 371, it is held that a tax upon shares of a corporation whose capital represents patent rights is in no sense a tax upon such patent rights, and is constitutional. In its opinion the court goes further, and declares that it fails "to see how a state tax upon patent rights themselves would directly or indirectly conflict with the power conferred upon the federal government" to grant and control patents. U. S. Const., art. 1, § 8.

c. EASEMENTS. — Easements, if appurtenant, are a part of the realty to which they are attached, and in general are taxable as such; but easements in gross are taxable apart from the land.²

d. FIXTURES. — In Determining Whether an Article Is a Fixture under a tax law, and therefore whether it is taxable as realty or as personalty, the principles to be applied have been declared to be as rigid as those which determine the question of fixtures between vendor and vendee.³ But it has been said that the determination of what are fixtures between various classes of persons can be of little aid on questions of taxation, "because the tax law has set up a standard of its own which must govern the case."⁴

e. LEASEHOLDS. — Leaseholds, though not properly real estate, may by statute become such and be so taxable.⁵

f. LICENSE TO USE LAND. — A License to Go on Land and Sever and Remove the Products Thereof has been held to be not such an interest in the land as is taxable as real property.⁶

Vail*, 57 Vt. 41 (license to quarry and manufacture slate). See also supra, this subdivision, a. Definition. As to license generally, see the title LICENSE, vol. 18, p. 1127.

g. MINING AND MINERAL RIGHTS. — Mining claims and the right to minerals beneath the surface of land are capable of ownership separate from the surface soil.¹ The interest of an occupant of a mining claim or a right to minerals lying in situ is property in lands and may be subjected to taxation as such.² An interest in ores actually separated from the soil is taxable as personalty³ in accordance with its nature. A grant of a freehold interest in minerals in situ has been held to render the grantee taxable for realty, while under a lease for years of mineral rights he is not so taxable.⁴

h. MORTGAGES. — A Mortgage on Real Estate in some states is taxable as an interest in the property covered thereby.⁵

6. Public Property and Instrumentalities of Government — a. GENERALLY EXEMPT FROM TAXATION. — The right of public property and of the various instrumentalities of government to be free from taxes has been treated in another title.⁶

b. TAXATION WITH ASSENT OF GOVERNMENT. — The property of the United States is absolutely exempt from taxation, except with the consent of Congress. A state may, however, if it sees fit, subject its own property and the property of its municipal divisions to taxation in common with other property in its territory, but general expressions in statutes enumerating subjects of taxation will not be construed as intended to include public property.¹

c. PUBLIC LANDS — (1) General Principles. — Public Lands of the United States are not subject while in the ownership of the United States to taxation by the states,² but such lands become taxable to an individual when he has acquired a complete legal title thereto by the issuance of a patent, or even before a patent is issued when his right to the patent is complete and he has the full equitable title, although the United States still holds the dry legal title as trustee.³ So long as the equitable title is incomplete, the state cannot tax such lands.⁴

beneficial title to the lands taxed passes from the United States,¹ and a prior patent or warrant vitiated by fraud or mistake does not render the lands taxable from its date.² So public lands are not taxable so long as a condition precedent to the acquisition of title by the grantee remains unfulfilled.³

Defeasible Title.—The owner's right of property in lands granted by the government is taxable, although he may be excluded by the happening of some future contingency, as the discovery of minerals in a section of land granted to a railroad,⁴ the avoidance of an unconfined Mexican land grant,⁵ or the happening of a condition subsequent which is to revest the United States with title.⁶

The Taxation of State Lands Is Governed by the Same Principles, and so long as the legal or the equitable title remains in the state such lands are not taxable.⁷

1. Date When Lands Taxable.—Bronson v. Kukuk, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 490; Scott v. Chickasaw County, 46 Iowa 253; Reynolds v. Plymouth County, 55 Iowa 90; Kohn v. Barr, 52 Kan. 269; Donovan v. Kloeke, 6 Neb. 124; Duncan v. Newcomer, 9 S. Dak. 375; Danforth v. McCook County, 11 S. Dak. 258, 74 Am. St. Rep. 808; Calder v. Keegan, 30 Wis. 126. Compare Wheeler v. Merriman, 30 Minn. 372; Polk County v. Hunter, 42 Minn. 312 (stated under the title EXEMPTIONS (FROM TAXATION), vol. 12, p. 378).

From Reinstatement of Entry.—Davis v. Magoun, 109 Iowa 308.

From the Time at Which Right to Patent Perfected.—Hoskins v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 78 Miss. 768, 84 Am. St. Rep. 644 (homestead grant).

A Mere Relocation Without Declaring the Prior Patent Invalid does not affect the validity of the date of the original patent. Vinton v. Cerro Gordo County, 72 Iowa 155.

A Trust Deed to a Railway Land Grant for the full value of the property, the cestuis que trustent being empowered to appropriate the whole property, warrants taxation by the state. Chippewa County v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 42 Minn. 295.

2. A Land Warrant Procured on False and Fraudulent Papers does not divest the title of the United States and confers on the state no right of taxation. Bronson v. Kukuk, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 493; Kohn v. Barr, 52 Kan. 269 (forged assignment).

3. Payment of Purchase Price is such condition. Hussman v. Durham, 165 U. S. 144, affirming 88 Iowa 29; U. S. v. Milwaukee, 100 Fed. Rep. 828; Dyer v. Friedheim, 43 Ark. 203; Page v. Pierce County, 25 Wash. 6 (Indian lands assigned in severalty); unless the purchase price is payable by instalments and no instalments are overdue. See the title EXEMPTIONS (FROM TAXATION), vol. 12, p. 379, note.

Payment of Costs of Survey may be such condition precedent. Union Pac. R. Co. v. McShane, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 444 (modifying Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Prescott, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 603); Colorado Co. v. Cowlitz County, 14 Wash. 230. But see Cass County v. Morrison, 28 Minn. 257.

Railroad Land Grants.—But Act Cong. July 10, 1886 (24 U. S. Stat. L. 143), has rendered railroad land grants subject to this condition taxable by the state. Central Pac. R. Co. v. Nevada, 162 U. S. 512, affirming 21 Nev. 247; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Myers, 172 U. S. 589, affirming 48 U. S. App. 620; State v. Central Pac. R. Co., 20 Nev. 372. See also Wells County v. McHenry, 7 N. Dak. 246.

Indemnity Lands (see STATE AND PUBLIC LANDS, vol. 26, p. 325) are not taxable by the state until a selection is made by which they are pointed out and ascertained and the selection approved by the secretary of the interior, but they then become taxable. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hemenway, 117 Iowa 598; New Orleans Pac. R. Co. v. Kelly, 52 La. Ann. 1741; State v. Sage, 75 Minn. 448 [citing Sioux City, etc., R. Co. v. Chicago R. Co., 117 U. S. 406]; Wells County v. McHenry, 7 N. Dak. 246; Oregon, etc., R. Co. v. Lane County, 23 Oregon 386.

Railroad Land Grants.—Where lands have been granted by the United States to a state, to be granted by the state to railroads which should comply with certain conditions, a tax may be imposed on a portion of such lands which have been earned by a railroad, and for which the state has issued a patent, before the United States has approved the selection. Elkhorn Land, etc., Co. v. Dixon County, 35 Neb. 426.

Exemption of Land Granted until "Sold and Conveyed."—Where by act of the legislature

(2) Indian Lands. — The taxation and exemption of Indian lands have been treated in other connections.¹

Becoming Citizens. — Generally Indians become taxable by becoming citizens and by receiving allotments in severalty under the laws of the United States.² But where these acts provide for a term during which the title is held in trust by the United States for the Indians, allotments and improvements thereon and personal property issued by the government to allottees are not taxable until the expiration of such term.³

Personalty on Indian Lands. — The exemption of Indian lands from taxation does not apply to personal property found thereon, in which the Indians are not interested, unless used in such a manner as to make it an agency of the government.⁴

d. AGENCIES OF GOVERNMENT. — Under the complex system of government in the United States, the federal government and the governments of the states are reciprocally forbidden to employ the power of taxation so as to hinder the exercise of any powers belonging to each other. Taxes cannot be imposed, therefore, on the agencies of the state or of the national government which deprive them of the power to serve the government as they were intended to do, or hinder the efficient exercise of their powers. But this principle is observed if a tax on the operation of such agencies is forbidden, while a tax on their property, leaving them free to discharge their duties, may be rightfully laid.⁵

7. Incomes. — An income tax, whether on real or personal property, has been held by the Supreme Court of the United States to be a direct tax within that clause of the Federal Constitution which requires direct taxes to be apportioned lands were granted to a railroad, and they were rendered exempt from taxation until "sold and conveyed," it was held that the exemption was continued only until the full equitable title was transferred, and that the railroad company could not thereafter, by neglecting to convey the legal title, postpone the exemption indefinitely. Winona, etc., Land Co. v. Minnesota, 159 U. S. 526, 40 Minn. 512; State v. Winona, etc., R. Co., 21 Minn. 472.

The United States has no power to tax either the instrumentalities or the properties of a state or of a municipality of the state. Pollock v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 157 U. S. 584.

State Tax on the Offices of Postal Clerks Unconstitutional. — Ullsh v. Perry County, 7 Pa. Dist. 488.

State Tax on Lands of Another State. — A land grant by the United States for school purposes to the state of Alabama within the territorial limits of Nebraska cannot be taxed by the latter when a state, the public purpose of the grant

among the states in proportion to population.¹ Taxes on incomes are an ordinary form of taxation by the states,² and have been held not to infringe constitutional provisions requiring taxation of property to be uniform or in proportion to its value.³ Under the former United States income tax law the income must have accrued during the year for which the tax was imposed.⁴

The Measure of the Income upon which the tax is to be imposed is frequently held to be the income of the preceding and not of the current year.⁵

8. Occupation, Business, and Privileges.—The discussion of taxation in relation to these matters has been fully considered elsewhere.⁶

9. Litigation.—Statutes imposing a tax of a certain amount on each person procuring the issue of an original writ or an execution have been held not to impose taxes within the meaning of a constitutional clause requiring property to be taxed ad valorem.⁷ Such statutes merely impose and regulate exempting such lands "to the same extent as if they were within the state of Alabama." Stoutz v. Brown, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 445.

1. Income Tax of United States.—Pollock v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 158 U. S. 601, 157 U. S. 429, distinguishing or overruling Springer v. U. S., 102 U. S. 586, supposed to sustain a previous income tax of the United States. As to the construction of former acts, see Northern Cent. R. Co. v. Jackson, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 262; U. S. v. Smith, 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 277 (perjury in taxpayer's return); Doll v. Evans, 15 Int. Rev. Rec. 143, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,969 (assessor may declare penalty provided by the act for false return).

Income and Property Distinguished.—Waring v. Savannah, 60 Ga. 93 (quoted under INCOME, vol. 16, p. 150); Glasgow v. Rowse, 43 Mo. 479.

Mere Advance in Value in no sense constitutes gains, profits, or income. Gray v. Darlington, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 63.

English Income Tax.—Tennant v. Smith, (1892) A. C. 150. See GAINS, vol. 14, p. 575; PROFITS, vol. 23, p. 189.

Delegation of Power to Impose.—A city charter authorizing property taxation does not confer the right to tax incomes. Savannah v. Hart-ridge, 8 Ga. 23.

Double Taxation.—A tax on income, e. g., wages, commissions, brokerage, etc., derived from certain personal services and from dividends, etc., "upon stocks in money corporations not taxable under this act," was not intended to institute double taxation, and property already taxed is not taxable thereunder. New Orleans v. Fassman, 14 La. Ann. 878.

Foreign Sources of Income.—A person residing in England who receives income from sources entirely abroad is liable to the income tax upon such profits as are received in England. Colquhoun v. Brooks, 14 App. Cas. 493.

Salaries of Public Officers are not included under city ordinances taxing incomes arising from the "pursuit of any faculty, profession, occupation, trade, or employment." City Council v. Lee, 1 Treadw. (S. Car.) 57.

3. Constitutionality.—Waring v. Savannah, 60 Ga. 93; Glasgow v. Rowse, 43 Mo. 480.

An Exemption of Incomes Below a Certain Amount does not invalidate the tax. New Orleans v. Fourchy, 30 La. Ann. 910.

An Income Tax on Judges does not diminish their compensation during office within the prohibition of the constitution. Northumberland County v. Chapman, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 73.

4. Annual Gains, etc., Taxed.—When an act taxes only annual gains, profits, and incomes, profits on bonds purchased and sold after retention for four years are not taxable for the year in which they are sold, for the advance in value represents fluctuation extending over the whole period. Gray v. Darlington, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 63.

Promissory Notes, Account Books, etc., becoming due during the year, which are available and convertible into money, should be included. U. S. v. Frost, 9 Int. Rev. Rec. 41, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,172.

Otherwise as to notes not to become due during such year. U. S. v. Schillinger, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 71.

Bad Debts made during the year may be deducted. U. S. v. Mayer, Deady (U. S.) 127.

The Income Tax of a Person Dying Within the Year may be collected from his estate for the time preceding his death. Mandell v. Pierce, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 134.

fees and costs, and are not obnoxious to constitutional provisions that justice shall be without purchase.¹ A tax of a specified amount on the parties to every suit in the Supreme Court is not properly collected from litigant counties, municipalities, and subdivisions of the state.²

VII. PLACE OF TAXATION — 1. Property Must Be in Jurisdiction — a. IN GENERAL. — The taxing power of the state is limited to property within the state, and all such property may generally be taxed.³ The same is generally true of subdivisions of the state, such as municipalities, counties, school districts, etc.⁴

b. DATE WHEN PRESENCE NECESSARY. — The date at which the presence of personal property in a jurisdiction or taxing district determines its taxability is generally regulated by statutes which provide for the day of assessment.⁵ So where the rule that personal property follows the person is applicable, the residence or the owner at that time is decisive as to whether his personalty is taxable or not.⁶

2. Real Property. — Real estate is taxable in the state, town, ward, or other subdivision in which it is actually situated, whether belonging to a resident or a nonresident.⁷

A Succession Tax is not sustainable as "a tax on all civil suits," nor as an exaction of probate fees. State v. Mann, 76 Wis. 469, 498. See also State v. Gorman, 40 Minn. 232.

A Tax on "Criminal Cases" does not impose a tax on proceedings to enforce a municipal ordinance. State v. Mason, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 649. And see CRIME—CRIMINAL, vol. 8, p. 253.

A Tax on Law Suits Becomes Due when the suit is begun, and the fact that no issue was reached does not excuse payment. Elliston v. Winstead, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 472; Nashville v. Davis, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 474.

Lands Transferred to New County. — Land lying in one county when taxes accrue does not change its taxable situs for that year by being thrown into a new county cut off from the old after the assessment.¹

Lands Owned by Nonresidents are taxed according to statutory provision either to the owner or the occupant.²

Land Lying Partly in Each of Two Districts. — Where land is separated by a line between adjoining towns or other taxing subdivisions, it is the general rule that the whole body of land is taxable in the subdivision in which the owner or occupant of the land resides, or in which the mansion house is located.³ If unoccupied, each part of such body of land is assessed in the town or other subdivision where it lies.⁴

Where Land Lies in Doubtful or Disputed Territory over which two counties claim jurisdiction, both of which have assessed the property, the owner may pay taxes in either county, provided he can show that the land lies in the county in which he pays the taxes, and such payment will bar an action in the other county.⁵

Water Power may be taxed either at the place where it is created by a dam,⁶ or where it is applied to machinery, as a part of the plant.⁷

Water Works and Appurtenances. — A system of water works in a city, including buildings, machinery, mains, pipes, hydrants, etc., has been held taxable as real estate as an entirety in the township where the main works are located.⁸

Bridge Between Two States. — Where a bridge extends over a river which separates two states, the taxing power of each state extends only to the middle of the current or channel.⁹

Under the Georgia Code such land is taxable where the improvements or most of the improvements are, and where the county line is not definitely ascertained the land may be returned for taxes in either of the counties which the owner may elect. If such land is parceled out to tenants, it does not constitute one plantation, and each portion is then taxable in the county where it lies. Robson v. Du Bose, 79 Ga. 721. See also *State v. sonal property for purposes of taxation depends on the domicil of the owner or on the actual situs of the property itself. In general and in the absence of statute, the maxim mobilia sequuntur personam governs;¹ but the modern tendency, under constitutions and statutes declaring the state's taxing power to extend to all property within its jurisdiction, is to consider the actual location of the articles taxed,² and even evidences of debt, such as bonds, stocks, notes, and mortgages, may be taxed within the state at the place where they are situated.³ With regard, however, to intangible personal property not reduced to such form, such as simple debts not evidenced by note or the like, the domicil of the owner must determine the place of taxation in accordance with the fiction embodied in the maxim mobilia sequuntur personam, that is, they must be taxed at the domicil of the owner.⁴ These principles will find more ample illustration in the discussion of the taxation of particular classes of personal property which follows.

Minnesota.—Minneapolis, etc., Elevator Co. v. Clay County, 60 Minn. 522.

New Jersey.—Mayer v. Jersey City, 61 N. J. L. 473.

New York.—People v. Tax Com'rs, 23 N. Y. 224; People v. Feitner, (Supm. Ct. Spec. T.) 32 Misc. (N. Y.) 84.

Pennsylvania.—Maltby v. Reading, etc., R. Co., 52 Pa. St. 140; Com. v. American Dredging Co., 122 Pa. St. 386, 9 Am. St. Rep. 116.

Washington.—North Western Lumber Co. v. Chehalis County, 24 Wash. 626.

Wisconsin.—Torrey v. Shawano County, 79 Wis. 152.

In Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, Gray, J., for the court, said: "In modern times, since the great increase in the amount and variety of personal property not immediately connected with the person of the owner, that rule [that the situs of personal property was determined by the owner's domicil] has yielded more and more to the lex situs, the law of the place where the property is kept and used."

The requirement that personal estate should be "within the state" should be interpreted in the light of fact and not on the basis of the fiction that the domicil of the owner draws to it his personality. People v. Tax Com'rs, 23 N. Y. 224, overruling Wilson v. New York, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 675.

Illustrations.—Though the owner may reside in the state, his capital invested elsewhere and evidenced by securities there is not taxable in the state of his residence. People v. Gardner, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 352. And though he may reside elsewhere, his property in the state is taxable there. Redmond v. Rutherford, 87 N. Car. 124; Catlin v. Hull, 21 Vt. 152.

3. Buck v. Miller, 147 Ind. 586, 62 Am. St. Rep. 436; Liverpool, etc., Ins. Co. v. Assessors, 51 La. Ann. 1028, 72 Am. St. Rep. 483; State v. St. Louis County Ct., 47 Mo. 594; People v. Ogdensburgh, 48 N. Y. 397.

In People v. Tax Com'rs, 23 N. Y. 224, it was held that the actual situs of personal property of a character capable of having an actual situs determined its place of taxation; but property merely in transit through the state

6. RESIDENCE OR DOMICIL FOR PURPOSES OF TAXATION. — The general principles which determine the owner's place of residence or domicile have been elsewhere discussed.¹

Residence Alone Sufficient for Taxation. — Personal property may be taxed at the residence of the owner, although he may have no intention of making such residence his domicile.²

The Residence of a Man, for Purposes of Taxation, is in the county where he spends practically all his time, where his interests are, and where he allows himself to be assessed for a small amount of his property, and not in a city where certain of his trunks and a small amount of his clothing are kept.³

Plantation in Two Counties. — Personal property on a large farm or plantation extending over portions of two counties is taxable in the county in which the owner resides, although he may have changed his residence from one county to another for the express purpose of residing where the taxes were the least.⁴

Consent to Taxation at Place Other than Residence. — A person may consent to the taxation of a portion of his personal property at a place other than his residence, but such a consent does not affect his right to object to the taxation there of other personal property as to which he has given no consent.⁵

Two Residences. — Where one has two or more residences, he is taxable either at the one in which his principal business is transacted⁶ or at the one where he spends the greater portion of his time.⁷

A Change of Domicil or Residence cannot be effected by intention alone without actual removal, and one continues taxable at the same place who has merely formed an intention of changing his domicile but has not done so.⁸ Resicannot be said to have an actual situs therein, and debts and choses in actions generally follow the domicile of the owner.

One who has resided in the city for nearly two years is taxable there, although he has a domicile in another state where he votes and pays taxes and to which he intends to return. Matter of Austen, 13 N. Y. App. Div. 247.

Domicil Is Said to Be the Test of Liability to Taxation in Massachusetts. — Borland v. Boston, 132 Mass. 89, 42 Am. Rep. 424, citing Opinion of Justices, 5 Met. (Mass.) 590, and disapproving Briggs v. Rochester, 16 Gray (Mass.) 337.

3. King v. Parker, 73 Iowa 757; People v. Barker, 70 Hun (N. Y.) 397.

Absence of Two Years from State. — When one leaves his domicile in a state with the intention of returning after an indefinite time (probably two or three years), and actually returns after an absence of two years, taxes for the two years of his absence are rightly assessed to him as a person "residing in this state." Culbertson v. Floyd County, 52 Ind. 361.

House on Town Line. — Where a town line passes through the house of a taxpayer, his residence will be in that town in which the most necessary part of his house and the other buildings are situated. Judkins v. Reed, 48 Me. 386; Chenery v. Waltham, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 327.

4. People v. Caldwell, 142 Ill. 434.

5. Phelps v. Thurston, 47 Conn. 477.

Taxes Fraudulently Assessed at Place Other than Residence. — Where, however, one fraudulently procures his property to be assessed at his former residence because the rate is lower there, payment of taxes there will not protect him against assessment and collection of taxes at his actual residence. Mahany v. People, 138 Ill. 311.

6. Residence at Principal Place of Business. — Bartlett v. New York, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 44; Douglas v. New York, 2 Duer (N. Y.) 110; Bell v. Pierce, 51 N. Y. 16, affirming 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 51; People v. O'Rourke, 32 N. Y. App. Div. 66; Bowe v. Jenkins, 69 Hun (N. Y.) 458; Paddock v. Lewis, 59 N. Y. App. Div. 430. But see Huckins v. Boston, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 543.

Personal property at the residence, and other personal property at the place of business may be taxed separately under the New Jersey statute although both places are in the same taxing district. Mullins v. Jersey City, 61 N. J. L. 135, where it was said: "In such a case a single assessment might not be invalid but clearly it is not enjoined."

7. Residence Where One Spends Most Time. — Bowman v. Boyd, 21 Nev. 281; Greene v. Gardiner, 6 R. I. 242; Arnold v. Davis, 8 R. I. 341; Ailman v. Griswold, 12 R. I. 339. But see Thayer v. Boston, 124 Mass. 132, 26 Am. Rep. 650.

dence continues until a change is affirmatively shown or until there is satisfactory evidence of the abandonment of the former place as a residence.¹

c. ENUMERATION OF CLASSES OF PERSONALTY — (1) Animals. — Cattle in stockyards, held for sale, are taxable there as stock in trade.² Where it is provided that animals shall be listed where usually kept, the place of taxation, as between two ranches, is the one upon which they are kept the greater part of the year.³ At one time cattle pastured in two adjoining counties in Texas might have been assessed at the owner's residence.⁴ But under a later act they are assessable in each county, in the proportion that the land in each county bears to the whole pasture.⁵

Cattle Shipped into the State, under a bill of lading which allows of their being fed for an indefinite time and then shipped to a point in another state, at a through rate from the original point, the balance of the freight not to be paid if they are not so reshipped, are taxable in the state while there being fattened at the owner's pen.⁶

Cattle Owned by a Nonresident, within the state, are taxable there.⁷ When grazing over a county adjoining that containing the home ranch or the residence of the owner, they are taxable at the latter place, although when assessed they are in the other county.⁸

(2) Corporate Property. — The taxable situs of corporate property of all kinds, including corporate stock, railroad property, stock in national banks, etc., is discussed fully elsewhere in this work.⁹ Property in the hands of a receiver of corporate assets is assessable as it would have been before payment to such receiver.¹⁰

(3) Debts and Credits. — The general rule is that debts attend the person of the creditor and are taxable at his domicile. Such is the rule in the absence of some contrary statutory provision, whether the evidence of the debt is in the state or not, and whether it is negotiable or non-negotiable in form, and whether or not the property securing the debt is within the state, and whether the evidences of the debt are deposited in the state or without.¹¹ But the application of this rule has been much narrowed under the influence of statutes considered to lay emphasis rather on the actual situs of the personal property than on the domicil of the owner.¹ Thus it has been held that debts owned by nonresident creditors may be taxed within the state, if the evidences of such debts — notes, bonds, etc. — are within the jurisdiction, as where they are in the hands of agents or employed in business therein.² On the other hand, applying the same principles to another state of facts, where the owner resides in the state, his domicil has been held not to draw to it for purposes of taxation debts due him out of the state and evidenced by notes and the like which are also beyond the state's jurisdiction.³ The domicil of the owner, however, has been held to be the only possible criterion of the liability to taxation of a simple debt not reduced to or evidenced by any written instrument.⁴

is taxable in the hands of the executor or administrator.¹

As Between the Administrator or Executor and Those Beneficially Entitled to the estate of the decedent, it is taxable in the hands of the former so long as the estate is in process of settlement and before distribution, but where there is no further need of an administrator, and the distributee or beneficiary can legally demand his share, the property is no longer taxable to the administrator.² Although the deceased was a resident of the state, his property in course of administration is not taxable therein, where neither the executor nor any of the beneficiaries are residents, and the property itself is not in the state.³

Where There Are Two or More Executors residing in two or more taxing districts, each should return such personal property of the decedent as may be in his immediate possession in his township.⁴ It has been held, however, that where there are two or more administrators living in different counties, the tangible personal property belonging to the estate should be listed in the county of the administrator having actual possession and control at the time of the listing.⁵

(5) Guardianship Property. — In some jurisdictions personal property of a ward is assessed in the jurisdiction where the guardian resides,⁶ in others its situs is that of the ward and not of the guardian.⁷

(6) Logs and Lumber — Timber Cut. — Logs piled ready for transportation to the owner's mill, or in a storage pond appurtenant to the mill, are taxable at the mill,⁸ and logs in camp are taxable there if there is an office or building for transacting local business.⁹ Logs cut and shipped, before the date for assessment, to a neighboring town to be manufactured, are taxable at the town,¹⁰ and logs intended to be manufactured and sold in some other town than that in which the owner resides may be there taxed even if not there on taxing day, provided they are brought there and manufactured during the year.¹¹ Logs cannot be taxed where they are temporarily left afloat for sawing, if the firm to which they belong has its place of business in another township.¹² But whether logs piled upon the bank of a river, to be transported when the river opens, may be taxed there or not, depends upon whether or not they can be regarded as in transit. If not regarded as in transit, they are taxable.¹³ Likewise, logs piled along a railroad track, awaiting the

Several Permissible Places of Taxation. — When assessed at any one of several permissible places, a vessel is not subject to taxation at another such place.²

Taxation as Regulation of Commerce. — The imposition of a tax upon every ship entering a designated port, to be collected upon entry, is a regulation of commerce, and as such unconstitutional and void.³ But taxes levied by a state upon ships or vessels owned by the citizens of the state as property are not within the prohibition of the constitution. Such assessments, however, when levied for municipal purposes, must be made against the owner of the property, and can only be made in the municipality where the owner resides.⁴

VIII. EXEMPTIONS. — The subject of exemptions from taxation has been fully discussed in another title.⁵

IX. ASSESSMENT — 1. Requisites of a Tax — Scope of Treatment. — Three Things Are Essential to a tax: first, the ascertainment of a sum certain, or that can be rendered certain, to be imposed on the collective body of taxpayers; second, a legal imposition of that sum on the collective body of taxpayers; third, an apportionment of the amount among the individual taxpayers, so as to ascertain the part or share due from each. Under the constitutional distribution of governmental powers, the law-making function is the proper authority to determine to what extent the public property and revenue shall be applied to meet the pecuniary wants of the state, and how far the collective body of taxpayers shall be called upon to contribute; and the first two requisites are essentially legislative. The third is usually administrative, and delegated to public officers and boards, who act under specific statutory directions as to time and mode of performance.⁶

The Main Purpose of This Subdivision is a discussion of the apportionment of the tax among the individual taxpayers by these administrative officers and boards. The powers and duties of the legislative bodies are discussed elsewhere in this title and will be incidentally touched upon only.⁷

2. Definitions — a. GENERAL MEANINGS. — The Words "Assess" and "Assessment" are used repeatedly in the tax laws and decisions of the courts with different significations. As sometimes used, they are words of general import, and have substantially the same meanings as "tax" and "taxation,"⁸ or are synonymous with the word "levy" in the sense of being merely descriptive

The Terms "Tax" and "Assessment" are also used in contradistinction to each other, the former referring to the general burden of taxation imposed for public purposes, the latter denoting a charge or special tax, predicated upon the principle of equivalents or benefits, imposed to pay the cost of a local improvement.²

b. IN APPORTIONING TAX.—In the terminology of the proceedings to apportion the amount to be raised by taxation among the individual taxpayers, the words "assess" and "assessment" are often used in a general and extended sense, implying the completed tax list, including every ministerial act necessary to charge each with his proper share or proportion, and sometimes including also the legislative function of imposing the amount to be raised upon the collective body of taxpayers.³

The Technical Meaning in This Connection, however, of the word "assessment" is the official listing of the persons and property subject to taxation and the valuing of the property of each, constituting the basis upon which the apportionment of the amount to be raised is made.⁴

1. As Synonymous with the Word "Levy."—Kelly v. Herrall, 20 Fed. Rep. 364; South Covington, etc., St. R. Co. v. Bellevue, 105 Ky. 283; State v. Jersey City, 42 N. J. L. 97. See also State v. Fournet, 30 La. Ann. 1103; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Klein, 52 Neb. 258, 54 Neb. 781; and infra, this title, Levy.

One Meaning of the word "assessment" is laying or levying a tax. Palmer v. Stumph, 29 Ind. 329; State v. Cheraw, etc., R. Co., 54 S. Car. 564; People v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539.

2. "Assessment" as a Special Tax.—See the titles EXEMPTIONS (FROM TAXATION), vol. 12, p. 314 et seq.; SPECIAL OR LOCAL ASSESSMENTS, vol. 25, pp. 1168, 1169; supra, III. 1. Purpose of Tax. See also District of Columbia v. Sisters of Visitation, 15 App. Cas. (D. C.) 300; Palmer v. Stumph, 29 Ind. 329; Walker v. Jameson, 140 Ind. 591, 49 Am. St. Rep. 222; Adams v. Shelbyville, 154 Ind. 467, 77 Am. St. Rep. 484; Boston Asylum, etc., v. Street Com'rs, 180 Mass. 485; First Div. St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. St. Paul, 21 Minn. 526; State v. St. Paul, 36 Minn. 529; Hurford v. Racine, 21 Wis. 514.

In This Sense the word "assessment" means "adjusting the shares of a contribution by several towards a common beneficial object, according to the benefit received." Palmer v. Stumph, 29 Ind. 329; Adams v. Shelbyville, 154 Ind. 467, 77 Am. St. Rep. 484.

See also State v. Camp Sing, 18 Mont. 128, 56 Am. St. Rep. 551.

An Assessment is determining the valuation of the thing taxed and the amount of the tax required of each individual. Dollar Sav. Bank v. U. S., 19 Wall. (U. S.) 227 [approved U. S. v. Halloran, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 1, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,286; U. S. v. Tilden, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 368, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,519]. The word "assessment" is sometimes employed to express the amount of the tax that each taxpayer is to pay; but more commonly it means the official valuation of a taxpayer's property for the purpose of taxation. State v. New York, etc., R. Co., 60 Conn. 326. To similar effect see State v. Utter, 34 N. J. L. 489; Binghamton First Nat. Bank v. Binghamton, 72 N. Y. App. Div. 354; State v. Farmer, 94 Tex. 232.

Under a Statutory Provision requiring city councils, on a designated day annually, to determine by resolution the amount of city taxes to be levied and assessed for the current year, and making the county assessment the basis of taxation, the assessment of property in the city is not completed until the date of the resolution fixing and levying the amount of taxes to be raised. State v. Johnson, 16 Mont. 570.

Alabama.—Perry County v. Selma, etc., R. Co., 58 Ala. 546.

3. Necessity for Assessment. — In laying an ad valorem tax, a valuation of the property of each person or corporation liable to be taxed is an absolute necessity. In no other way can the amount to be paid by each taxpayer be ascertained. A valid assessment is, therefore, indispensable.¹ This doctrine

The Assessment Is Made within the purview of a statute, speaking of the time "when the assessment is made," when the assessors have acted in viewing the property, in making their statements thereof, and in entering their valuations in the annual books in which shall be entered "in detail the assessed valuations." After that time the books are open for examina- tion and correction. Every step subsequent thereto is one of review. Matter of Tilyou, 57 N. Y. App. Div. 101.

The words "list" and "assess," while used in a somewhat different sense in the tax laws, are a part of the same process of getting prop- erty upon the tax roll; and the phrase "to list and collect taxes," sued in a law making pro- vision for the discovery and taxation of omitted property, includes an assessment. Beres- heim v. Arnd, 117 Iowa 83.

The word "Assessment" in a statutory pro- vision giving a board of appeal and revision power to increase or diminish any assessment," refers to the value placed on property and not the list, and does not authorize the board to add to the list property omitted by the assessor, but only to raise or lower the value of prop- erty already listed. San Antonio St. R. Co. v. San Antonio, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 341.

is as old as the law of taxation, and is the one proposition on which all courts and writers are agreed. It is upheld by all courts, state and federal, as that without which there cannot be a valid charge for a tax.¹ It is otherwise of a tax not laid according to the value of property, as is often the case with an occupation, business, or privilege tax.²

4. Requirements as to Time When Made — a. IN GENERAL. — In some jurisdictions all property, both real and personal, is required to be assessed annually for purposes of general taxation. In the case of land, however, the situs of which is fixed and permanent, it is frequently provided that a new assessment shall be made only once in two, five, ten, or other period of years, with such annual corrections as changes in ownership, erection or destruction of improvements, and the like, render necessary.³ It is within the power of the legislature, in the absence of a constitutional restriction, to tax either real or personal property for several years at a given rate shown by a particular estimate or valuation. The rule of uniformity in taxation prescribed by the constitution is not a restriction upon this power.⁴

b. RELATION OF ASSESSMENT TO DAY CERTAIN. — The taxable status of persons and property generally relates to a day certain in each year. When the law thus provides, no taxes can be legally assessed and levied for a particular year unless the conditions requisite to liability exist on the day fixed; and no changes in ownership, fluctuations in value, nonresidence, removal or destruction of the property, or the like, occurring subsequent thereto, can be considered in making or reviewing an assessment.¹ The very notion of an assessment involves the fixing of values as of a certain date, since there is no mode of making the valuation vary with the increased or diminished value during the current year, and, if there were, such varying valuations would be destructive of established principles of uniformity.²

5. By Whom Assessment Made — a. LEGISLATIVE BODIES. — The fundamental law requires general taxes to be laid according to the value of the property of the taxpayers, and no arbitrary assessment can be made either by statute or ordinance.¹ It has also been held that the assessment of property is an executive or judicial function and cannot be made directly by the law-making bodies;² but in the case of taxes laid upon solvent securities, certificates of deposit, mortgages, undivided profits, or the like, the nominal or face value of which is identical with the actual value, an assessment by the legislature without the intervention of assessing officers or boards is usually unobjectionable.³

b. PUBLIC OFFICERS AND BOARDS—(1) In General.—Subject only to constitutional limitations, the whole power of taxation under the system of government in the United States is lodged in the legislative bodies of the different states, and they may provide such officers, agents, or tribunals for the making of assessments as they may deem advisable.⁴ This power is variously exercised.⁵ In a few instances the office of assessor, as the county, township, or other local taxing officer is usually called,⁶ has been held to be a constitutional office, to some extent beyond legislative control and interference.⁷ Generally,

Under a Constitutional Provision that the value of property shall be ascertained by some person or persons to be elected or appointed in such manner as the general assembly shall direct, and not otherwise, neither the legislative nor executive branches of the government can make assessments. Republic L. Ins. Co. v. Pollak, 75 Ill. 292.

A Statute Requiring the Listing of "the Amount of Money, Notes, or Credits" is not unconstitutional as amounting to a legislative assessment. People v. Arapahoe County, 27 Colo. 86.

however, there is no restriction upon the power of the legislature to provide other officers, boards, or tribunals to review and correct the valuations placed upon property by the local assessors or to perform their duties in whole or in part.¹ Thus the revenue acts frequently provide that certain classes of property, such as railroad and corporation property, shall be assessed by county or state boards of equalization and review or by special boards created for the purpose, and not by the local assessing officers,² and the power to assess taxable property omitted from the regular assessments is often conferred upon such boards.³

The Requirements of Uniformity, Equality, and Due Process of Law do not mean that the same officers shall act in the assessment of every kind of taxable property, or that the proceedings touching the assessment shall be the same in every instance.⁴

(2) Officers De Jure and De Facto. — It is essential to the validity of an assessment that it be made by the officer or other agency authorized by law to make it.⁵ In the application of this rule it has generally been held, as in other cases of public officers, that the acts of a de facto officer are as valid as those of an officer de jure.⁶ In some jurisdictions, however, statutes requiring assessing officers to be sworn before entering upon their duties are construed to be for the protection of the taxpayer; and strict compliance with their provisions is a condition precedent to a valid assessment.¹

(3) Pecuniary Interest as a Disqualification. — The fact that an assessing officer has a pecuniary interest in the amount of the taxes imposed or collected, by reason of the law giving him a percentage thereof, does not disqualify him from performing the duties of the office. Although he acts judicially in fixing the valuation of property, he is not a judge and his proceedings are not judicial.²

(4) Delegation of Powers — (a) General Rules. — Many of the duties of assessing officers or boards, such as transcribing assessments, calculating amounts, and the like, are of a clerical nature, involving no discretion and having no relation to any rights of the taxpayer; and they may lawfully delegate their authority to other persons, whether officers or not, or adopt and ratify the acts of such persons. On the other hand, in valuing the property and performing other duties involving the exercise of judicial discretion, the personal judgment of the assessing officers is essential to a valid assessment.³

by one of them acting alone; but action by a majority is generally sufficient, if opportunity was afforded the others to be present and take part,¹ unless joint action is commanded by the statute.² Such boards, like all boards composed of a number of persons, may generally act through committees of one or more members to hear the evidence and report it to the full board with recommendations as to the action to be adopted.³

c. JUDICIAL TRIBUNALS—(1) In General.—By the division of the powers of government in the United States, the valuation of property for purposes of ad valorem taxation, although judicial in character, belongs to the legislative and ministerial class of duties and is not a judicial proceeding.⁴ Accordingly it has been held that the judiciary cannot be empowered to make original assessments or to revise the valuations of assessing officers and boards on appeal or other direct proceeding; that the jurisdiction of the courts is limited to compelling such tribunals to act and the annulling of void assessments.⁵

Under the Illinois Constitution.—Assessments cannot be made or valuations revised by the courts. Burton Stock Car Co. v. Traeger, 187 Ill. 9, followed Burton Stock Car Co. v. Bar-

On the other hand, power to make and revise assessments, conferred by statute on the judiciary, has been exercised by it without question, and in some instances objections to jurisdiction have been held untenable.¹

(2) Courts of Inferior Jurisdiction. — By constitutional provision or long-continued practical construction, ministerial and judicial powers are often blended in courts of inferior jurisdiction; and in that event authority to make and revise assessments may be lawfully delegated to such judicial tribunals.²

d. MUNICIPAL ASSESSMENTS. — Power is sometimes conferred upon municipal corporations, such as cities, towns, school districts, and the like, to make assessments of property for municipal taxation distinct from assessments for state and county taxes, and appoint or elect their own officers for the purpose. Under other revenue acts only one set of assessing officers exists and but one assessment is made for the state and its municipalities.³

6. Assessment Proceedings — a. IN GENERAL. — Subject to constitutional restrictions, it is for the legislature within its discretion to provide the method and mode of assessing property for purposes of taxation.⁴ The assessment should be made in accordance with these provisions, and with the securities and solemnities provided by statute.⁵

1. See infra, this section, 11. Appeal and Review.

Statutes Sometimes Empower Courts to review the tax, ascertain and determine for what sum the property was legally liable, and fix the amount. State v. Union Tp., 36 N. J. L. 309; Blume v. Bowes, 65 N. J. L. 470; Woodward v. Taylor, (Wash. 1903) 73 Pac. Rep. 785. See also De Witt v. Elizabeth, 56 N. J. L. 119.

Suits in Equity to Enjoin Tax. — In a suit in equity to enjoin a void assessment, a reassessment by the court was held to be authorized by the principle of the taxes based thereon, and by the principle of equity that injunctions issue as a matter of discretion, and the court may always attach equitable conditions. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. State Board of Equalization, 114 Fed. Rep. 557.

Vermont. — Woodward v. French, 31 Vt. 337.

Compromise by Municipality of Suit for Taxes. — Where the same assessment is the basis of state and municipal taxation a city has no power to compromise a suit brought by it to recover the municipal taxes, and thus indirectly effect a reduction in the valuation of the taxpayer's property. City Item Co-operative Printing Co. v. New Orleans, 51 La. Ann. 713.

4. Authority of Legislature to Provide Method of Assessing Property. — Witherspoon v. Duncan, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 210; Williams v. Albany, 122 U. S. 154; DuPage County v. Jenks, 65 Ill. 275; State v. Duties of Officer. — In the absence of any constitutional or statutory provision as to the duties of the assessor, his duties will be held to be such as are usually incumbent upon such officer. People v. Ames, 24 Colo. 422.

5. Assessment Should Comply with Statutes — United States. — Albany City Nat. Bank v.

Formal Errors and Irregularities. — Mere formal errors and irregularities which are not violative of mandatory statutory provisions are usually held not to invalidate the assessment. In some of the states statutes expressly provide that tax proceedings shall not be invalidated because of informalities and irregularities.¹

6. THE ROLL — (1) Form and Contents Generally. — The roll or list is the record of the assessment.² The roll generally contains, among other things, a description of the taxable property, the amount of tax, the names of the owners, and the value of the property. It is essential to the validity of an assessment that a proper roll or list should be kept in accordance with mandatory statutory provisions.³

(2) Arrangement. — The statutes generally provide for the arrangement and form of the roll. It is common for the roll to be arranged in columns, wherein the names of the taxable inhabitants, the description, quantity, and value of the property, and other required insertions, are to be entered in their proper places. The statutory requirements differ as to such matters.¹

c. RETURNS BY TAXPAYERS—(1) Statutory Provisions.—The revenue laws usually require persons liable to taxation to make out and furnish the assessing officer a statement containing a list of all their taxable property, and, in some jurisdictions, an estimate of its value. Noncompliance with the statutory requirement, or a false or fraudulent return, is generally made a penal or criminal offense, or subjects the taxpayer to other punishment, such as a withdrawal of the right to have the assessment reviewed, or an arbitrary addition to the valuation of his property or the amount of the tax. The constitutionality of such statutes is universally upheld by the courts, but under general rules of law the penal provisions are strictly construed.²

Although a return omits taxable property or contains erroneous statements of fact, it is generally held not to be false or fraudulent, within the meaning of the statute, if no bad faith or negligence is chargeable to the taxpayer; and the failure to make any return is, under some circumstances, excusable.¹

Void Assessments. — Statutes denying to taxpayers who fail to make return of their property the right to have their assessments reviewed have no application where the assessments are void.²

(2) Effect of Statutes — (a) Upon Exercise of Power to Assess. — Compliance with statutory provisions requiring persons to return their property for taxation, and assessing officers to make demand upon them to do so, are not conditions precedent to the making of the assessment; nor is the return when made conclusive upon the assessing officers, but only evidence for their information. It is their duty in every case to discover and list all the property for which the taxpayer is liable to taxation, and to exercise their own judgment in fixing its value, using every means of information available to them for the purpose.³ The assessor has the power to add omitted property to the list

d. EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES, PRODUCTION OF BOOKS AND PAPERS. — In some jurisdictions assessing officers in fixing the extent and value of a taxpayer's property are expressly authorized by statute to swear and examine witnesses and compel the production of books and papers.¹

e. NAMING THE TAXPAYER — (1) General Rules. — The revenue laws usually direct the assessment to be made against the person liable for the taxes, and in his name. This requirement is held to be for the benefit and protection of the taxpayer, and mandatory in the absence of legislation to the contrary; noncompliance therewith by the assessing officers rendering the assessment void.² In many jurisdictions, however, it is expressly declared that no omissions or other irregularities in the name shall affect the validity of the assessment; or other provisions exist which, to a greater or less extent, render requirements as to name directory merely, and convert the assessment from a proceeding in personam into one in rem against the property.³

Property Claimed by Different Persons may be taxed "owner unknown." The assessor is not required to determine the question of ownership as between different parties or claimants, nor to incur the risk of making the assessment in the name of a party not the holder of the legal title. That the Owner Was Known to the purchaser of the property at tax sale is immaterial. Lajetter v. Lee, 68 Ala. 287.

fact misleading or prejudicial, will not render the assessment void.¹

(b) Name Adopted and Used by Taxpayer. — If the name given in an assessment is one by which the taxpayer, whether a natural person, corporation, or copartnership, is commonly known, it will suffice, although not his true name.²

(c) Owner Person Having Title on Assessment Date. — In making the assessment against the owner, the person who owns the property on the assessment date is the person in whose name it must be made, irrespective of any prior or subsequent changes in ownership.³

(d) Record Owners. — Under the general statutes assessments made in the name of a person shown by the public records to be the owner have been upheld, although he had in fact conveyed his title; and such assessments are expressly authorized in some states. A prima facie title is sufficient, the assessor not being required to determine the validity of apparent titles.⁴

(6) Resident and Nonresident, Seated and Unseated Lands. — Real estate for purposes of assessment is, in some jurisdictions, classified as resident and nonresident or seated and unseated. The assessment of resident or seated land is one against the individual, and to be valid must be made in the name of the person designated by the statute; that of nonresident or unseated land is against the property, and omissions or mistakes in the name of the owner are immaterial. An incorrect classification of land in the assessment renders it void,¹ and cannot be cured by a subsequent statute. The assessment is not merely irregular, but no assessment.²

3. Equitable Titles. — United States. — Taylor v. Robinson, 34 Fed. Rep. 678.

(i) Trustees. — An assessment is properly made in the name of a trustee as owner where he is vested with title to the property; and it is frequently provided by statute that property present in the taxing district in the possession and control of a resident trustee shall be assessed in his name.¹ Other statutes direct assessments to be made in the name of the cestui que trust.²

(j) Partnership Property. — The statutes usually direct that copartnership property be jointly assessed in the name of the partnership. In the absence of such a provision it would seem necessary to assess the partners individually with their respective shares. The life of the partnership for purposes of assessment is generally held to continue after dissolution until its affairs have been wound up and the property distributed.³

(k) Joint Ownership. — Where property is held by two or more persons in undivision, the undivided share of each may be assessed in his name or the whole jointly in the names of all.⁴

(1) Fraudulent Conveyances — Change in Form of Property. — Where a person makes a transfer of the property owned by him or exchanges it for exempt property as a mere subterfuge for the purpose of escaping taxation, the assessment is properly made in his name as owner.¹

(3) Persons Other than Owners or Occupants — (a) In General. — For convenience, and the better to prevent property the ownership of which is not apparent or easily ascertainable from evading taxation, it is frequently provided that assessments may be made in the name of an agent, officer, receiver, or the like, for property in his possession and under his control and management. Such provisions are neither unreasonable nor unlawful.² In the absence of such a direction, however, the assessment of property thus situated can only be made in the name of the owner or other person designated by the general statutes.³

(b) Estate of Decedents. — Where property is directed to be assessed in the name of the owner, it has been generally held necessary to make assessments of the property of the estate of a decedent in the names of the persons upon whom title has devolved.¹ Special provisions exist in most jurisdictions, however, directing assessments of property belonging to the estate, to be made against the estate, against the heirs, devisees, or other persons upon whom the title of the decedent devolves, according to the fact, without designating them by name, or against the legal representative.² After distribution of the estate, and, in some jurisdictions, after notice thereof to the assessing officers, the distributees are the owners for the purpose of assessment.³

(4) Contractual Liability for Taxes. — Contracts between individuals shifting the liability for taxes cannot affect the state in the exercise of the sovereign power of taxation; and the assessments must be made according to the statutory direction, whatever may be the effect of such covenants as between the parties thereto.¹

(5) Presumptions. — If the assessment is regular on its face it will be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the assessing officers performed their duty and made it in the form warranted by the facts.²

f. DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY — (1) Classifications. — The legislature generally classifies property for purposes of assessment, and it has the power to and frequently does require real property to be assessed as personal and vice versa.³ These divisions should be followed in making up the assessment roll, and the different classes of property separately listed, but a failure to do so is generally held to be a mere irregularity,⁴ unless it results in prejudice to the taxpayer or prevents the effective equalization and review of assessments.⁵

(2) Description of Personalty — (a) In General. — Personal property may in most states be listed in general terms and valued in gross, without a separate listing and valuation of the specific articles of which it consists. A direction to list and value separately the different classes of personal property is, however, common. In a few states greater particularity is required.¹ The object of requiring any description of the property is that the taxpayer may know for what property he is assessed; and whatever is sufficient to identify that property with reasonable certainty is sufficient compliance with the statute.²

(b) Waiver and Estoppel. — Where the taxpayer fails to comply with a requirement that he make a statement or return of his property to the assessing officers, or where the assessment follows a return made by him, he is generally estopped from objecting to general descriptions and valuations in gross.³

(3) Description of Realty — (a) General Rule. — It is essential to the validity of an assessment of real estate that it contain a description of the property sufficiently accurate and certain to enable the owner readily to identify it as his, and to furnish a basis for the tax lien and for proceedings in rem against the tract, should such become necessary to the collection of the taxes.⁴

66. PAROL EVIDENCE — JUDICIAL NOTICE. — Parol evidence and matters within the judicial knowledge of the court are receivable to explain latent ambiguities and apply a description to its subject-matter, but not to supply one that is wholly insufficient to identify the property.¹

(c) Abbreviations. — A description of land by abbreviations commonly used to designate congressional subdivisions sufficiently identifies it, and the use of other abbreviations in describing the property, if they are such as are well known and understood, is unobjectionable.²

(d) Statutory Directions. — Platted lands in cities and towns are properly described by the lot and block numbers, and other lands by the congressional divisions and subdivisions, where such descriptions will identify the land intended to be assessed; and the statutes frequently sanction such descriptions. The statutory provisions, however, are, as a rule, directory merely and do not render invalid descriptions by metes and bounds, by a name by which the tract is commonly known, or in any other way by which it can be located.¹ The question in each case is only as to whether the land can be identified and located from the description given.²

(6) Descriptions in Assessments and in Conveyances. — It cannot be laid down as a general rule that a description of real estate which would suffice in a deed or agreement to convey would sustain an assessment, since certainty may be imparted to a conveyance by parol evidence that a particular tract was intended and the grantee put into possession, although the description is wholly indefinite. Nor is it often required that the description follow that contained in the title papers of the taxpayer, though it will usually be sufficient if it does.³

(7) Separate Assessment of Parcels. — The revenue acts frequently direct each tract of real estate to be separately listed and valued. As a rule this requirement is held to be mandatory, and compliance therewith essential to the validity of the assessment. Under the statutes in some jurisdictions, however, a failure separately to assess each parcel is an irregularity merely, or the grouping of several tracts belonging to the same taxpayer is expressly authorized where practicable.¹ So the grouping and joining of real estate belonging to different owners as one tract, and assessing it as the property of one of them, renders the assessment void in some states, while in others it is only an irregularity or overvaluation.² The statutory requirement that each the property valued by the assessors can be ascertained by evidence, and the assessment is just and equitable in amount.¹

g. VALUATION OF PROPERTY—(1) In General.—The constitutions or revenue acts of most states require all property to be assessed for taxation at its actual or fair cash value, which is sometimes defined to be the amount at which the property would be appraised if taken in payment of a just debt due from a solvent debtor, or the price it would bring at a fair voluntary sale.² The legislature has the power, however, to fix the assessed value at less than the full value, where the constitution is silent on the subject; since the rule requiring uniformity of taxation may be equally well secured by a proportionate basis.³

knowledge in so far as they are personally cognizant of values, unless it is provided otherwise by statute. In other cases they must proceed upon inquiry and exercise their best judgment upon all the evidence and information obtainable.¹ What the law requires of assessors is an intelligent and fair exercise of the powers conferred upon them. It does not permit them to value property arbitrarily and capriciously, thereby unequally apportioning the burden of taxation.²

(3) Methods of Valuation — Elements of Value — (a) In General. — The advantages and disadvantages of location, earning capacity, cost of construction, market price, or other elements which enter into and constitute the value of property, should be considered by the assessing officers in arriving at their determination. The method to be followed and the elements of value to be taken into consideration in a particular case must generally be determined by the character and situation of the property involved.³ There

The Value of Property results from the use to which it is put, and varies with the profitability of that use, present and prospective, actual and anticipated. Wells, etc., Co.'s Express v. Crawford County, 63 Ark. 576.

The Constitution does not leave room for a different basis of valuation of real property as vacant or occupied. Nor can it be evaded exists in fact no rigid rule for the valuation, which is affected by a multitude of circumstances which no rule can foresee or provide for. The assessor must consider all these circumstances and elements of value, and must exercise a prudent discretion in reaching a conclusion.¹ Where property is correctly valued, an assessment is not void because an erroneous method was followed by the assessing officers in fixing the valuation.²

(b) Statutory Directions. — The revenue acts sometimes contain directions as to the elements of value to be considered in assessing real estate and some other classes of property, such as stock in trade, partnership property, material used in manufacturing, and the product of mines.³ A provision that the valuation shall be made upon actual view of the property is generally directory merely.⁴

(4) Separate Interests Arising Out of Same Property. — Where there are several estates or interests arising out of the same property, in assessing a particular interest its comparative value should be ascertained, having reference to the terms and conditions under which it is held and the value of the whole; and the aggregate of the separate valuations should not exceed the fair cash value of the property considered as an entirety.⁵

(5) Choses in Action. — Shares of stock, bonds, notes, and like choses in action are to be listed at their actual and not their nominal or face value, unless the two values coincide; and if wholly worthless they are not subject to taxation.⁶

by authorizing a valuation of one class of property, based upon its value for a particular use only. Saltonstall v. Board of Review, (Mich. 1903) 93 N. W. Rep. 246.

(6) Deducting Amount of Indebtedness — (a) General Rule. — Unless authorized by statute, no deductions can be made from the value of taxable property on account of indebtedness or the insolvency of the owner. All property must bear its share of taxation, unless expressly exempted therefrom.¹

(b) Statutory Changes in Rule. — In many jurisdictions statutes have been enacted permitting deductions from the value of taxable property to the amount of the debts of the owner or of certain kinds of his indebtedness. Usually the deductions can be made only from the value of taxable credits, sometimes from that of certain other classes, sometimes from any taxable property. Such statutes have been generally held not to violate the constitutional requirements that taxation shall be equal and uniform and that all property shall be taxed. To be entitled to the deduction, the taxpayer must conform to the statutory directions as to the manner in which it shall be claimed and the amount of the indebtedness proved.² Under some statutes

(7) Omission of Dollar Mark from Roll. — The omission of the dollar or cent mark, or other similar sign, from the figures representing the valuation of the property, is generally held not to render the assessment invalid, if it can be ascertained from the arrangement of the columns of the roll or the division of the figures what amount was intended.¹

(8) Res Judicata. — Assessors are not bound by the previous assessed valuation of real estate, whether it was made by assessing officers or by a court on appeal, and may legally disregard it and exercise their own judgment. Each assessment is a distinct proceeding separate from other assessments, and the doctrine of res judicata has no application.²

h. COMPLETION AND RETURN OF ASSESSMENT — (1) In General — Return. — The revenue laws fix a time for the completion of the work of the local assessing officers and the making of a return or delivery over of the rolls to some other public officer or board, either for review and correction, or, where their determinations are final and conclusive, for the levy and collection of the taxes.³ The making of the return by a day certain is sometimes for the purpose of affording the taxpayers notice of the assessment and opportunity to contest its correctness, in which event the assessment must be completed and the return made in strict compliance with the law.⁴ More often, however, the requirement is not intended for the benefit of the taxpayers, but merely to secure order and dispatch in the performance of official duties, or the preservation of a record of the assessment; and errors or omissions will not invalidate the tax, unless prejudice results in fact. This rule is frequently declared by statute.¹

(2) Authentication—(a) Mandatory Statutes.—The revenue acts generally require the assessing officers to sign the assessment rolls or books and incorporate or annex a statutory certificate or affidavit verifying the contents. In some jurisdictions these requirements are held to be material safeguards provided to secure integrity of assessment and protection for the taxpayer, noncompliance with which renders the assessment void.² Where assessments are made by a board of assessors consisting of several members, it is generally sufficient if the authentication is made by a majority; but if made by one member only the assessments are void.¹

Omissions and Variations in the statutory certificate or affidavit which so change its terms as to dispense with material allegations are fatal;² but where the law is substantially complied with, informalities and irregularities in the authentication will be disregarded.³

Amendment of Authentication. — A defective authentication may be corrected by amendment, or the omission of one supplied, at any time before the assessing officers lose jurisdiction over the assessment rolls.⁴

(d) Curative Acts. — Where the failure to comply with the statutory requirements as to authentication renders the assessment void, it has generally been held that the legislature has no power to enact a statute curing the defects.² Otherwise of an assessment that is merely irregular.³

(e) Equitable Relief. — Although the assessment is void for want of a proper authentication, equitable relief against it is denied in some jurisdictions on such grounds, except on condition that the taxpayer pay the sum as taxes which in justice and equity he ought to pay.⁴

(3) Revision and Correction of Roll. — The assessing officers may reconsider and revise their opinions as to values, deductions, and any other matters involved in the assessment until the official entry of their determinations.⁵ Like other officers or bodies possessing a judicial capacity, they have the competency to consult, resolve, and reconsider, and they are not bound by their conclusions until such conclusions have been promulgated by their authority. It is only this ultimate judgment, officially pronounced, that is unalterable.⁶ On the other hand, after the assessment has been completed and the roll deposited with the officer or board authorized to receive it, the assessors can make no material additions or corrections, unless power to do so is expressly conferred by statute.⁷ On being completed and returned, the assessment roll becomes a record subject only to statutory alteration and review;¹ and if the taxpayer on examining it is satisfied with his assessment and willing to accept the decision of the assessors as therein expressed, he is entitled to assume that no change will be made and to act accordingly.²

7. Assessment of Escaped Property — Reassessment — a. IN GENERAL. — Statutes obtain in most jurisdictions making special provision for the assessment of property which has been omitted from the regular assessment for the current year, or the assessments for one or more preceding years, and thus escaped taxation. In states where the taxpayer is required to make return of his property, it is also usually provided that omissions shall subject him to a penalty. The power to make the assessment is variously conferred by the local statutes on one or more of the agencies having in charge the assessment, levy, and collection of taxes.³ The power exists only to the extent that it

Assessments Ordered by Board Having No Original Jurisdiction to Assess. — An assessment made by the proper assessing officer is valid, although

apply whether the taxpayer is chargeable with bad faith or negligence in the omission of the property or not.¹ In Ohio, however, prior to the amendment of 1900 which establishes the principle just stated,² assessments of escaped property could not be made, except for the current year, unless the taxpayer had fraudulently or negligently omitted it in returning his property for taxation, or had evaded making a return.³

c. REASSESSMENTS. — Property which has been assessed but escaped taxation by reason of the assessment against it being illegal and void, if subject to taxation in fact, is, no doubt, assessable as omitted property under the statutes enacted for that purpose.⁴ It has also been held that where property has been grossly and fraudulently undervalued, and thus pro tanto escaped taxation, such statutes authorize the taxing officers to reassess it for the omitted value.⁵ In some jurisdictions the statutes expressly provide for reassessment in such cases.⁶

d. TIME OF MAKING ASSESSMENT. — Assessments of escaped property not made on his own initiative but by order of the board of equalization, which is without jurisdiction to make the assessment itself. Ferris v. Kimble, 75 Tex. 476, followed Connor v. Waxahachie (Tex. 1889) 13 S. W. Rep. 30. Contra, where the valuation is fixed by the board and not independently by the assessing officer. Western Ranches v. Custer County, (Mont. 1903) 72 Pac. Rep. 659, followed Mataador Land, etc., Co. v. Custer County, (Mont. 1903) 72 Pac. Rep. 662. An order of the board of equalization directing the assessor to add solvent credits at their face value is not an exercise of assessorial powers. Solvent credits, like gold coin, must necessarily be assessed at their face value. To describe the property is, therefore, to fix its value. Farmers', etc., Bank v. Board of Equalization, 97 Cal. 318.

1. Bad Faith and Negligence of Taxpayer — General Rule. — The tax law contemplates instances of omissions of property from current assessment lists, not only on account of evasions and concealments by property owners, but also by reason of derelictions of the officers on whom rests the primary duty of listing all taxables, without regard to any fault on the part of the taxpayer. *Hunter Stone Co. v. are made nunc pro tunc; and it is immaterial that the regular periods for making and reviewing assessments, levying the taxes or placing the rolls in the hands of the collection officers, have elapsed when they are made,¹ unless the owner is thereby deprived of some constitutional right, or the statute limits the time.²

e. RELATION BACK OF ASSESSMENT — (1) In General. — The assessment when made relates back to the time when the property should have been assessed, and is not affected by changes in ownership, consumption, or removal subsequent to the latter date. The equitable doctrine of purchasers for value without notice affords no protection against the exercise of the power to assess escaped property.³

(2) Valuation of Property. — The valuation of the property for purposes of the assessment must be fixed according to its value at the time when it ought to have been assessed, unless some other standard is fixed by law.⁴

f. DEATH OF TAXPAYER. — The death of the taxpayer does not abate the liability to pay taxes on property which escaped taxation during his lifetime; and they are properly assessed against the estate.⁵

g. REGULAR ASSESSMENT AS RES JUDICATA — (1) General Rule. — An assessment is not a judgment within the doctrine of res judicata, and does not bar or estop a supplemental assessment of property which was, in fact, erroneously omitted, even though its omission in the first instance was the result of a decision by the officers making the regular assessment, holding it to be exempt.⁶

(2) Assessments in Gross. — Where the regular assessment values the property in gross without enumerating the specific items, it cannot be known whether any property was omitted by the assessing officers or not, and no supplemental assessment can be made.⁷

h. FERRETING CONTRACTS.—Taxing officers or municipal authorities, such as county boards, are sometimes empowered by express statutory provision to enter into contracts with individuals for the ferreting out or discovery of property that has escaped taxation.¹ In some states, also, authority to enter into such contracts has been held to be within the general powers conferred by law on county boards.²

8. Compensation of Assessing Officers.—The rules of law applicable generally to the compensation of public officers are discussed elsewhere in this work. Other matters, such as the amount of compensation to which assessors, members of revising boards, and other officers performing duties in connection with the assessment, are entitled; its form, whether by salary, fees, or a percentage on the amount of the assessed valuation or taxes, and the means of payment, are wholly dependent on the terms and construction of local statutes.³

9. Liability of Assessing Officers—a. CIVIL LIABILITY.—In valuing property and in performing other duties relative to assessments as to which it is the evident intention of the law that assessors shall act solely on their own judgment and discretion, they exercise judicial functions; and if they have jurisdiction over both person and subject-matter, they incur no civil liability for injuries to taxpayers resulting from erroneous acts, at least when not chargeable with bad faith or malice. If, on the other hand, they act without jurisdiction, they are clearly liable. Other duties are enjoined on them which are ministerial, and, as in the case of other ministerial officers, assessors are civilly liable to individuals for injuries resulting from omissions, negligence, or error in performance.¹ While these rules are well established, there is considerable difference of opinion as to what acts of the assessors are judicial and what are ministerial,² and as to the extent of the protection afforded them when the erroneous exercise of judicial discretion is attributable to fraud or malice. Relative to the latter difference of opinion it has been said that the weight of authority supports the doctrine that assessors, like other quasi-judicial officers, are liable for damages caused by erroneous acts done with a malicious, corrupt, or other sinister motive.³ The extent to which assessors

b. CRIMINAL AND PENAL LIABILITY. — Assessors are subject to prosecution for malfeasance, misfeasance, and nonfeasance in office, to the same extent as other officers; and by statute the failure or refusal to perform all or some of the duties required of them by law is frequently made punishable penally or criminally.²

10. Notice and Opportunity to Be Heard — a. BY ASSESSORS. — Proceedings for the assessment of a tax being quasi-judicial, it follows that in order to give validity to the assessment, notice thereof should be given to the owner of the property to be assessed. The form of the notice, as well as the time and manner of giving it, is regulated by statute, which is mandatory, and may usually be given by leaving with the taxpayer whose property is to be assessed a written or printed notice requiring him to make a statement of all of his taxable property,³ or by posting notice of the time and place of meeting of the assessors.⁴ Where an assessor accepts the list furnished by the property owner without question, he cannot alter or raise the valuation without giving notice to the party assessed.⁵

b. NOTICE OF MEETINGS OF BOARDS OF REVIEW. — After a person has listed his property for taxation, no change in the list or alteration of the assessment can be compulsorily made by an officer, tribunal, or board of commissioners sitting as a board of review, whose decision is final, until, by notice of the time and place of meeting, or by due process of law, such person has had an opportunity to be heard on the question of the correctness of his list, and to offer his objections to an increase in its valuation,⁶ before the

The omission of the word "require" as used in Gen. Laws R. I., c. 46, § 6, that "such notices shall require every person" liable to taxation to produce to the assessors a true and exact account of his ratable estate, does not render the notice fatally defective, where it states by reasonably intelligible abbreviations the time and place where the assessors will meet for the purpose of receiving accounts of ratable estates, coupled with a statement of the penalty for refusing to do so. *Kettelle v. If, however, the assessor finds other property from that listed by the owner, he may list and assess it without notice to the owner. Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson, 108 Ill. 11.

A statute making provision for a board of appeals, to decide upon the value of property assessed when the assessor and property owner cannot agree upon the value, is valid; and the taxpayer cannot object to an assessment where the assessor has valued the property in accordance with the value placed upon it in making his return, on the ground that the law makes no provision for the review of such assessment, and affords him no opportunity to be heard. *Scollard v. Notice Need Not Specify Property Added.—Poppleton v. Yamhill County, 18 Oregon 377.

What Constitutes Raising.—In Kissimmee City v. Cannon, 26 Fla. 3, it was held that the final assessment roll, however made up, is that to which the taxpayer must look, and where an assessor made valuations in a memorandum book, and after advising with members of the board in order to arrive at a correct valuation, raised such valuations on the final assessment, it was not such a raising of valuation as to require a notice to be given the owner of the property.

1. Opportunity to Be Heard Before Legal Proceedings Become Effectual.—Carson v. St. Francis Levee Dist., 59 Ark. 513; Hough v. Hastings, 18 Ill. 312; Alleghany County v. New York Min. McHenry, 7 N. Dak. 246.

Collection Enjoined for Want of Opportunity to Be Heard.—Negley v. Henderson Bridge Co., 107 Ky. 414.

But if the taxpayer is provided by statute with an adequate legal remedy to correct errors in overvaluation, and fails to avail himself thereof, an injunction will be denied. Swenson v. McLaren, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 331.

Meeting of Board as Affecting Opportunity to Be Heard.—Unless the board meets at the time fixed by law, the levy will be invalidated, although the notice is in due form. Slaughter v. Louisville, 89 Ky. 112; Caledonia Tp. v. Rose, 94 Mich. 216. See also Nashville v. Weiser, 54 Ill. 245; Nixon v. Ruple, 30 N. J. L. 58.

And on the same principle the board must sit for the full time prescribed by law. Wright v. Auditor Gen., 118 Mich. 556.

Objections Must Be Made Within Statutory Period.—Union Oil Co. v. Campbell, 48 La. Ann. 1350.

Due Process of Law.—If the opportunity to object is afforded the taxpayer in an action for the collection of the tax he is not deprived of his property without due process of law. Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321; Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316; Exchange Bank Tax Cases, 21 Fed. Rep. 99; Murdock v. Cincinnati, 44 Fed. Rep. 726; Young v. Wempe, 46 Fed. Rep. 354; *Garvin v. as to notice, both in respect to its form and the manner of bringing it to the attention of the taxpayer, is essential.¹

Kansas.—Dykes v. Lockwood Mortg. Co., 57 Kan. 416, affirming 2 Kan. App. 217.

Maryland.—Myers v. Baltimore County, 83 Md. 385, 55 Am. St. Rep. 349; Baltimore County v. Winand, 77 Md. 522.

Mississippi.—Madison County v. Frazier, 78 Miss. 880; Clarksdale v. Yazoo, etc., R. Co., (Miss. 1901) 29 So. Rep. 93.

Ohio.—Schindler v. Lewis, 9 Ohio Cir. Dec. 174; Phillips v. Hunter, 6 Ohio Cir. Dec. 746; Hayes v. Yost, 24 Ohio Cir. Ct. 18.

In Jackson v. Chizum, 78 Iowa 209, it was held that where an assessor deferred listing certain omitted bank stock for assessment until he could obtain the decision of the board of equalization as to whether or not it should be assessed, and upon their direction such stock was subsequently listed and assessed, it was not a raising of the assessment within the meaning of the statute (Iowa Laws 1880, c. 9, § 3), which required notice to the taxpayers and an opportunity to be heard. See also Keihl v. Chizum, 78 Iowa 213.

In Ohio, although notice may not be required during the course of a proceeding to assess omitted property, the assessment, nevertheless, is not void as having been made without due process of law, where, under the provisions of a statute, the validity of the assessment can be tested in the courts and an illegal levy or assessment enjoined. Onkamp v. Lewis, 103 Fed. Rep. 906. Contra, Meyers v. Shields, 61 Fed. Rep. 713.

In Oregon the board of equalization is empowered to assess property which the assessor has omitted from the roll, and fix a valuation thereon; this it may do without any notice other than the general notice given by the assessor of the meeting of the board for the purpose of correcting and equalizing the assessment roll. Oregon, etc., R. Co. v. Lane County, 23 Oregon 386; Ramp v. Marion County, 24 Oregon 461; Kirkwood v. Ford, 34 Oregon 552.

Payment as Waiver of Notice.—Hodding v. New Orleans, 48 La. Ann. 982.

Notice to Representatives of Deceased Taxpayer.—Graham v. Russell, 152 Ind. 186. See also Reynolds v. Bowen, 138 Ind. 434; Saint v. Welsh, 141 Ind. 382; Buck v. Miller, 147 Ind. 586, 62 Am. St. Rep. 436.

Taxpayer Not Prejudiced.—Failure to give the statutory notice to the taxpayer to appear and show cause why omitted property should not be placed on the tax duplicate, or the insufficiency of the notice given, is no ground for an injunction against the collection of taxes, if no substantial right of the taxpayer was prejudiced. Crowder v. Riggs, 153 Ind. 158; Miller v. Vollmer, 153 Ind. 26.

If the taxpayer is required to list his property for taxation and fails to do so, the assessor may place it on the schedule and assess it, without any notice whatever of his action in that regard. Morris v. Jones, 150 Ill. 542.

Service on Tenant of Taxpayer Not Sufficient.—State v. Drake, 33 N. J. L. 194.

If the assessment actually made was valid under the act in force at the time it was made, the fact that in their notice to the relator the respondents incorrectly described the statute under which they assumed to act would not invalidate the assessment made prior to the time of the sending of such notice. People v. Barker, 35 N. Y. App. Div. 486, affirmed without opinion 159 N. Y. 569.

The statutory provision does not require two notices, one requiring a taxpayer to bring in to the assessors a true and exact account of all his ratable estate, followed by final notice giving the time and place of meeting of the assessors, but a single notice answers the requirement of the statute where it contains the necessary information. McTwiggan v. Hunter, 19 R. I. 265.

Form of Notice.—Notice is regulated by statute as to form, etc., and usually states the valuation placed upon the property by the assessor and the valuation to which the property is to be raised or lowered by the board, with a direction that the owner appear within a specified time from the date of the notice and show cause, if any he has, why such change should not be made, and the time is computed so as to include the day of notice. Hagenmeyer v. Board of Equalization, 82 Cal. 214.

The hour when the board shall meet is immaterial, if notice of the day and place of meeting of the board is given. Smith v. Hard, 61 Vt. 469.

Likewise any reasonable notice is sufficient

c. MANNER OF GIVING NOTICE — (1) By Publication. — Notice may usually be given by publication in a newspaper or newspapers when authorized by statute.¹

(2) By Statutory Provisions. — A statute prescribing the time and place at which the board shall meet and hear complaints is sufficient notice,² and in many jurisdictions it is held that such provisions are sufficient to authorize the board either to raise, lower, or otherwise alter assessments as the board in the absence of statutory provision as to its form and manner of service. Spring Valley Water Works v. Schottler, 62 Cal. 69; Fairbault Water Works Co. v. Rice County, 44 Minn. 12; Black v. McGonigle, 103 Mo. 192; Clark Thread Co. v. Kearny Tp., 55 N. J. L. 50; Stearns v. Miller, 25 Vt. 20.

And see generally the title PUBLICATION, vol. 23, p. 307.

Provision for Such Notice Is Constitutional. — Wabash Eastern R. Co. v. East Lake Fork Special Drainage Dist., 134 Ill. 384; Lamb v. Connolly, 122 N. Y. 531; Terrel v. Wheeler, 123 N. Y. 76.

Necessity of Publication. — Loomis v. Semper, (Supm. Ct. Spec. T.) 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 567.

In Ormsby v. Louisville, 79 Ky. 197, it was held that the publication of the notice of the sittings of a board of tax commissioners was a condition precedent to the city's right to collect ad valorem taxes.

But a newspaper advertisement, signed by the city assessor, he being ex officio a member of the board, is not a notice published by the board. Slaughter v. Louisville, 89 Ky. 112, citing Dumesnil v. Louisville, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 14.

Sufficiency of Publication. — A publication by posting notice at the courthouse and city hall substantially complies with a statute requiring a legal notice. Brunswick v. Finney, 54 Ga. 317; especially if there is no newspaper published in the county or particular district. Legendre v. Assessors, 108 La. 515; and proper notice may be given by depositing it in the mails, addressed, postage prepaid, to the party whose interests are to be affected. Hagenmeyer v. Board of Equalization, 82 Cal. 214.

But in Indiana it has been held that a general notice to the public by publication or posting is not sufficient notice to an individual taxpayer to authorize a change in the valuation of his property. Kuntz v. Sumption, 117 Ind. 1. Compare McEneaney v. Sullivan, 125 Ind.

407, wherein it was held that notice by publication under the Act of March 8, 1889, was sufficient notice to property holders and was within the requirements of the constitution.

may deem just, without further notice to the taxpayer.¹ A statute, however, which assumes to make void assessments valid, without making provision for a reassessment or notice and opportunity to be heard, is within the constitutional prohibition.²

d. WAIVER OF NOTICE. — The appearance by a taxpayer before the board in contest of his assessment waives any failure by the assessing officers to give notice.³

e. OF MEETINGS OF BOARDS OF EQUALIZATION. — A board of equaliza-

New Lindell Hotel Co.*, 9 Mo. App. 450; Collier v. Morrow, 90 Ga. 148; Vanderpool v. Bonnell, 49 N. J. L. 317.

But in some states the rule obtains that direct notice must be given to the taxpayer whose rights and interests are affected before any additions can be made or valuations increased. See Patten v. Green, 13 Cal. 325; Glassford v. Dorsey, 2 Ill. App. 521; Cleghorn v. Postlewaite, 43 Ill. 428; McConkey v. Smith, 73 Ill. 313; Henkle v. Keota, 68 Iowa 334; *Leavenworth County v. Where an assessment has been declared illegal and void, a second assessment of the property cannot be made without notice to the taxpayer at some stage of the proceedings. Douglas v. Westchester County, 172 N. Y. 309, reversing 68 N. Y. App. Div. 296.

While a statute authorizing a municipality to impose a tax is not rendered unconstitutional by reason of the absence of a provision therein requiring notice, nevertheless notice must be given. See also Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30; Patten v. Green, 13 Cal. 325; Gatch v. Des Moines, 63 Iowa 718; Gilmore v. Hentig, 33 Kan. 156; *Baltimore v. Where the proceeding has been twice continued at the instance of the taxpayer, he cannot complain that no legal notice had been given him. Tillis v. Covington County, 91 Ala. 396. See also Faribault Water Works Co. v. Rice County, 44 Minn. 12.

The failure to give the taxpayer the required notice having rendered the tax illegal because the board had acquired no jurisdiction to act with reference thereto, the fact that the taxpayer subsequently appeared and asked a reduction of its assessment, which was partially granted, did not obviate or waive the want of jurisdiction in the board's original action. Plaintiff was seeking a reduction of its assessment, and therefore properly appeared before the board to ask the same. Western Ranches v. Custer County, (Mont. 1903) 72 Pac. Rep. 659; Matador Land, etc., Co. v. Custer County, (Mont. 1903) 72 Pac. Rep. 662.

Appearance by Bank Officer as Witness Merely. — The appearance by an officer of a bank cited as a witness and not for the purpose of bringing in the bank, is not an appearance by the bank in contest of its assessment. Eaton v. Union County Nat. Bank, 141 Ind. 159.

tion may raise or lower the entire assessment of any particular district without notice to the individual taxpayers or the people of the district, when it is made to appear that the assessment in one district is relatively higher or lower than that in another.¹

11. Appeal and Review—a. CORRECTION OF CLERICAL ERRORS.—The revenue acts generally empower some of the officers and boards who successively obtain possession and control of the assessment rolls in the several processes of assessing, levying, and collecting taxes, to correct any formal or other clerical errors appearing therein.²

b. BOARDS OF EQUALIZATION AND REVIEW—(1) In General—Statutory Provisions.—In most jurisdictions one or more boards, each consisting of several members, are provided by the statutes for the equalization of assessments among the local divisions of a taxing district and among the taxing districts of the whole state, and for the review and correction of the valuations placed by the local assessing officers upon the property of the individual taxpayers. The number and composition of the boards provided for these purposes, and the manner of their election or appointment are entirely a matter of local statutory regulation, and the laws of the different states contain many variant provisions. County commissioners and township trustees frequently constitute local boards, and certain of the state officers ex officio members of state boards.³ It is the function of these boards to examine the assessments

Albuquerque Nat. Bank, 10 N. Mex. 283.

Notice is given to all banks of the time and place of the meeting of the board of equalization for banks by Rev. Stat. Ohio, § 2808, but if the board meets on the day appointed by statute and adjourns without naming a time to meet again, but meets upon the call of the president or secretary without the knowledge of the taxpayer, it does not meet the requirements of the statute, and the power of the notice in the statute is entirely lost by such adjournment. Euclid Ave. Sav., etc., Co. v. Hubbard, 12 Ohio Cir. Dec. 279, 22 Ohio Cir. Ct. 20. But see contra, Lander v. Mercantile Bank, 186 U. S. 458, reversing 105 Fed. Rep. 899.

In Kentucky, the state board of equalization, provided for by Act of May 10, 1884, consisting of a member elected from each congressional district of the state, is authorized to equalize the taxes among the several counties according to the value of the property therein, and the act is not objectionable because it does not provide for notice to the taxpayer of the meeting of the board. nature of the relief sought and facts showing the applicant to be entitled to it. The assessors are empowered to examine the taxpayer and other witnesses if not satisfied with the statutory statement; and in passing upon the application they are not confined to the evidence produced in these ways, but may consider other evidence in their possession. They cannot, however, act arbitrarily and capriciously, but are bound by the proofs of the taxpayer, if positive and uncontradicted.¹

(2) Powers and Duties — (a) In General. — Boards of equalization and review are creatures of statute, with specially defined duties and responsibilities, and are of limited jurisdiction. Like all inferior tribunals they can exercise no authority except such as is expressly or by necessary implication conferred upon them, and are confined in the performance of their duties to a reasonably strict observance of the statutory requirements.² The powers and duties conferred by the revenue acts upon the boards vary greatly in the different states. They cannot, in the absence of statutory authority, make original assessments, change the valuations or otherwise correct individual assessments, or, in equalizing, change valuations of particular classes of property or parts of a taxing district only, or the aggregate valuations as returned by the assessors; but power to act in one or more of these ways is frequently vested in them.¹

(b) Original and Appellate Jurisdiction. — In some cases the boards of equalization and review exercise original jurisdiction in correcting and equalizing assessments, while in others their jurisdiction is appellate and can only be invoked by an application in the nature of an appeal from the action of the local assessors.¹ Where review and approval by such boards are conditions precedent to the finality of the assessment, action by them is essential to its validity.² In other cases the assessment is final except as legally changed on review, and illegal action by the boards or an entire failure to act will not affect it unless rights of individual taxpayers are prejudiced thereby.³

(c) Equalization. — In construing general statutory provisions conferring power to equalize and adjust valuations, different meanings are given to the word "equalize." In some jurisdictions it is held that such provisions do not authorize the boards to change the aggregate valuations returned by the assessors, or the valuations placed by them upon the property of individual taxpayers, but merely to make a different apportionment of the total valuation among the taxing districts.⁴ In other states such provisions are held sufficient to empower boards to change the aggregate valuations of the different taxing districts, of classes of property or of individual assessments, to the end that all property shall be valued at its actual value as the law requires.¹

(3) Proceedings of Board. — A board of equalization or review can act in the equalization or correction of assessments only when sitting as a board for that purpose.² Statutory provisions as to the time and place of meeting are, as a rule, held to be mandatory, and any action taken by the board after the expiration of the time limited or elsewhere than at the place prescribed by the statute is invalid.³ In some jurisdictions, however, such statutes are declared to be directory merely.⁴

Waiver of Irregularity. — Irregularity as to the time and place of meeting may be waived by appearance without objection at the meeting actually held.¹

Adjournment. — Though the statute is silent as to adjournment, the board has the inherent power to adjourn from time to time as the business before it may demand,² and may take action at an adjourned meeting held subsequently to the time fixed by statute for the conclusion of its deliberations.³

Procedure. — In the absence of statutory provision,⁴ the proceedings before the board are informal, and are not governed by the rules of practice applicable to the trial of civil actions.⁵ A complaint is not generally necessary as a condition precedent to action equalizing assessments among the divisions of a taxing district or the different taxing districts of the state, making additions to the property assessed or increasing the valuation of individual assessments.⁶ It is otherwise in some states, and a complaint is almost always essential to the exercise of jurisdiction to reduce valuations placed upon the property of individual taxpayers.⁷ Such complaint, when required, may be made by any one interested in the assessment,⁸ and may be amended by the party pre-

intelligible record shall be kept of all the proceedings of boards of equalization and review.¹ Such record must exhibit the jurisdictional facts necessary to give the board authority for its action.² It must show any additions to or deductions from the valuation of taxable property, in addition to the aggregate valuation,³ but it need not contain the evidence upon which the board acted in reaching the conclusions set forth.⁴

Conclusiveness of Record. — The record is the proper evidence of the official doings of the board,⁵ and cannot be varied or contradicted by extrinsic evidence.⁶ The contents, however, of a lost or destroyed record may be shown by secondary evidence.⁷

Correction of Errors. — If omissions or errors are discovered in the records, the board not only has the legal right to supply the omissions and to correct the errors at any subsequent meeting, but it is its duty to do so,⁸ and the performance of such duty may be compelled by mandamus.¹

Statutes Mandatory. — A statutory provision requiring a record to be kept is regarded as mandatory and as exacting strict compliance,² but mere irregularities of form will not invalidate the tax,³ nor will the entire absence of a record so operate as against one who has suffered no injury by reason of the omission.⁴

(5) Entry of Determination on Roll. — The mere clerical act of noting on the assessment roll an increase or reduction of the valuation is usually performed by the assessor or clerk of the board, in pursuance of the judgment of the board;⁵ and a failure of the proper official to comply with the board's direction in this respect is redressible by mandamus⁶ or certiorari⁷ proceedings.

c. JUDICIAL TRIBUNALS — (1) No Inherent Right of Appeal. — Due process of law does not require that the property holder be given the right to have his assessment reviewed upon the merits by the courts, it being clearly within the power of the legislature, in accomplishing the necessities of the government, to provide that certain officers or boards shall fix the assessment finally and conclusively;⁸ nor is the valuation of the property such an exercise of judicial authority as necessarily involves the right of appeal to judicial tribunals.⁹

rate of other assessments is too low, and the taxpayer is thereby compelled to pay more than his just share of the aggregate tax;¹ but it has been held that courts in determining appeals can only consider the correctness of the assessment in regard to the complaint made, and have no authority to increase the assessment.² As a rule, where only a portion of an assessment is illegal, and that portion can be ascertained, the assessment will be modified or annulled only to the extent that it is unlawful or unjust,³ but where the lawful and unlawful parts are blended together in one indivisible assessment, the entire assessment is illegal and will be so declared.⁴ The constitutional power of the legislature to require appellate courts, in reviewing the action of boards of assessors, to appraise the property as the facts may require, has been both affirmed⁵ and denied.⁶

(3) Assessment Ordinarily Conclusive. — Where there is no constitutional provision for judicial review, the assessment as determined by the assessors, boards of equalization and review, or other municipal officers to whom the matter is intrusted, is, subject to the exceptions hereafter pointed out,⁷ conclusive on the courts.⁸ An assessment cannot be declared void by the

its judgment for that of the assessing officers or reviewing boards,¹ an erroneous exercise of judgment by such officers or boards does not warrant interference by the court;² and so questions as to the excessiveness of the assessment are beyond the province of judicial inquiry.³

(4) Proper Subjects for Judicial Inquiry — (a) Constitutional Questions. — Questions which involve the construction and validity of revenue statutes, and the constitutionality of assessments made thereunder, can only be determined by the courts, and it is not competent for the legislature to declare, as against questions of this character, that the action of assessors or administrative boards, shall be conclusive.⁴ Under the usual constitutional provisions requiring equality and uniformity of taxation, it has been held that a taxpayer whose property is assessed upon a higher basis of valuation than that generally adopted, although at not more than its true value, is entitled to a corresponding reduction of his assessment;⁵ but there is a contrary line of decisions holding that no fundamental right of a complainant is violated by the general undervaluation of other property, where the complainant's property is assessed at no more than its fair cash value as required by law.⁶

(b) Jurisdictional Questions. — Boards for the assessment of property possess only granted powers, and their acts done in excess of the power conferred do not conclude judicial investigation.⁷ Matters which are jurisdictional, and therefore open to inquiry, are generally questions as to whether the tax itself was valid,¹ or as to whether the property was assessable,² or was located within the district of the assessing officers,³ or whether there was jurisdiction over the person assessed;⁴ and it has been held that all clear violations of law in the assessment proceeding are jurisdictional.⁵

(e) Fraud. — As fraud vitiates every act or proceeding which it touches, an assessment when made with the design to exact from a particular taxpayer an unjust amount of taxes, or with any other corrupt motive, is void, and the courts are open to hear the complaint, and, if established, to grant proper relief.⁶

(5) Equitable Relief. — Before courts of equity will grant relief against assessments of property for taxation, it must appear that some wrong is about to be inflicted which is not remediable at law, or by the special method pointed out by statute, thus bringing the case under the recognized head of equitable jurisdiction.⁷ As a rule, equitable relief will be given only when it is clearly shown that the assessment was made without jurisdiction,⁸ or was collaterally attacked,¹ but an assessment will not be rendered void, and thus exposed to collateral attack, by irregularities or errors honestly committed in the exercise of an official discretion.²

c. EXCLUSIVENESS OF STATUTORY REMEDIES. — Errors in assessments, which constitute irregularities merely and do not go to the groundwork of the tax and render the assessments void, can be corrected only in case the revenue acts provide a remedy therefor; and these remedies, when provided, are exclusive, whether they are confined to such inferior tribunals as ministerial officers and boards of equalization and review or include an appeal to the courts. Failure to invoke the statutory remedy within the time prescribed precludes relief by action or suit or in any other proceeding. The excessive valuation of property is an irregularity within this rule where the assessing officers had jurisdiction and acted in good faith, and the only remedy is the procedure given by statute.³ On the other hand, where defects in assessments

X. LEVY — 1. In General — Meaning of Term. — The word "levy" as applied to taxes has various meanings. It is used indiscriminately to denote the legislative function of charging the collective body of taxpayers with the sums to be raised, and the ministerial function of extending the taxes against the individual taxpayers. The latter involves the ascertainment of the amount due from each taxpayer, and is complementary of the work of the assessors.⁸ The word also means the raising or collection of the tax,⁹ and is sometimes used as the equivalent of the word "assess."¹⁰

The Word "Levy" as applied to taxes sometimes means to raise, to exact by authority of government, or to determine by vote the amount of taxes to be raised. It is in this sense that towns, cities, and school districts levy taxes. In other cases it is used with reference to the mere ministerial or executive acts of extending them on the tax books, and collecting them. State v. Lakeside Land Co., 71 Minn. 283.

Assessment and Levy in Tax Procedure. — To assess a tax is to adjudge and determine what portion of his property the taxpayer shall contribute to the public. To levy a tax is to make a record of this determination and to extend the assessment against the taxpayer's property. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Klein, 52 Neb. 258. See also Moore v. Foote, 32 Miss. 469.

9. "Levy" as Meaning Collection of Tax. — Rhoads v. Given, 5 Houst. (Del.) 183; Valle v. Fargo, 1 Mo. App. 344; Waterman v. Harkness, 2 Mo. App. 494; Elliot v. Gantt, 64 Mo. App. 248; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Forest County, 95 Wis. 80.

Volume XXVII.

2. Legislative Levy — a. NECESSITY OF. — The first step in taxation, whether by the state or inferior political subdivisions of the state, is the levy by the proper legislative body. Until this is done there can be no assessment or collection.¹

b. PROPERTY NOT TAXABLE IN ABSENCE OF LEVY. — It is elementary that property, however taxable, that is, however liable to taxation, cannot be assessed and subjected to consequent taxes unless the authority which had the right to speak has been heard thus to command. In other words, property in itself taxable cannot be assessed and be made to contribute, by taxation, to government expenses, where the proper authority has not directed its assessment.²

c. LEGISLATIVE INTENT TO IMPOSE TAX MUST BE APPARENT. — Since it is a settled principle that, however clear the power may be, or even the duty, of the legislative body to levy a tax on any particular species of property, until that power has been exerted the burden cannot be imposed and the legislative intent to impose a tax must be explicitly and distinctly shown. It cannot be extended by implication beyond the clear import of the language used. Hence, where there was no legislative enactment directing the assessment on a man's income, such income could not be assessed and payment of the tax enforced.³

d. LEVY, HOW MADE. — The levy, that is, the governmental act which determines that a tax shall be laid, as distinguished from the levy on property, incident to the enforcement of the collection of the tax, has been embodied in constitutional provisions in some of the states without the assistance of the legislature;⁴ but, as a general rule, a levy can be made only by legislative enactment or authority,⁵ within the limits and in the form prescribed by the

A Failure to Levy a Tax under a statute requiring a levy is a fraudulent defect in tax proceedings which destroys the groundwork of the tax. Dever v. Cornwell, 10 N. Dak. 123.

In Missouri, by statute, express power is given to the County Court to levy certain taxes on railroad property, both local and distributable, and the manner is prescribed in which that power shall be exercised. Until the County Court has made such levy, the clerk has no power to extend such taxes upon the tax books against the property of the railroad company. State v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 135 Mo. 618.

A Constitutional Provision of Missouri was held not to confer power on cities and towns to levy taxes, in State v. Van Every, 75 Mo. 530. The court said: "Such powers they derive from acts of the general assembly and not directly from the constitutional provision."

organic law,¹ and by a duly authorized and properly constituted body.² Thus, where a law required a county levy to be laid by a majority at least of the justices of the county, it was held that any less number, although they might constitute a court for a different purpose, had no jurisdiction in the case of a levy.³

Designating Purpose of Tax. — In many of the states it is required that the enactment levying a tax shall designate or specify the purpose for which the tax is levied.⁴

e. CONCLUSIVENESS AND EFFECT OF LEVY. — The determination of the legislative body in levying a tax is, within constitutional restrictions, generally conclusive and not subject to judicial review.⁵ The legislature may repeal a statute under which taxes have been imposed, or prohibit the collection of taxes after they have been duly levied and assessed.⁶ But the repeal of a taxing statute does not in every case necessarily abrogate proceedings already commenced under the former statute, so as to relieve a taxpayer from payment of an assessment, unless such an intent is clearly expressed.¹ A defective levy may be cured by the legislature where the levy sought to be invalidated was one that the legislature might originally have made or authorized a board to make.²

f. EXHAUSTION OF POWER. — In general, the power to tax is permanent and continuing, to be exercised whenever the public good may require it;³ though a single levy is sometimes deemed to exhaust the power for the time being, as where the body levying the tax has authority to make a levy but once within a certain period of time.⁴ A levy of the full amount limited by law may preclude an additional tax,⁵ but it has been held that an unsuccessful attempt to lay a tax does not exhaust the power, and a new and valid levy may be made afterwards.⁶

g. RECORD OF LEVY. — It has been held that every essential proceeding in the course of a levy of taxes should appear in some written and permanent form in the records of the bodies authorized to act upon it, and that a parol levy of taxes is not possible.⁷ The record is usually the only evidence to show whether the tax was duly levied,⁸ and it is ordinarily conclusive as to all matters properly stated therein.¹ It should show that the requisite statutory preliminary requirements have been complied with;² that a meeting of the proper body has been held, and the proceedings thereof,³ and that the proposition to make the levy has been duly presented and adopted;⁴ also the facts constituting performance of the statutory requirements should appear, a mere statement that the statute was complied with being usually not enough.⁵ Due authentication as required by law may be necessary to the validity of the proceedings,⁶ and though it may be proper and desirable that the records of subordinate bodies concerning their proceedings in levying a tax should contain certain signatures, yet an entry of the levy on the proper book of record kept for that purpose may under certain circumstances be sufficient.⁷

Absence of the Record of Levy from the place provided for its preservation, and in which it ought to be found, may constitute a circumstance tending to show that no levy was made,⁸ but facts may be shown from which its existence and subsequent loss or destruction may be inferred;⁹ and when such loss or destruction is established, secondary evidence of its contents may be given.¹⁰

Ministerial Levy — a. IN GENERAL. — The levy that is to be discussed in this subdivision denotes the ministerial function of extending the tax against the individual subjects of taxation, which involves the ascertainment of the amount due from each taxable subject.¹¹ After the preliminary steps have been taken, the amount to be imposed upon each subject must be computed and entered in the roll by the officers or body upon whom the duty rests. The statutory provisions of the various states prescribe the mode of procedure which should be obeyed by the designated officers.¹ It has been held that the computation of the amount to be raised, and the determination of the rate per cent. necessary to raise it, may be assigned to other than legislative officers.² It has also been held, under statutory provisions directing certain officers to ascertain the rate per cent. which upon the total assessable valuation of property will produce a net amount not less than the amount directed to be levied, that it is proper for such officers so to fix the rate per cent. of the levy that the amount produced will be sufficient to meet the sums appropriated and the commissions which the statute provides may be retained by the collector out of the amounts by him collected. The commissions are established by law, and the inclusion of them does not involve the exercise by the officer of any judicial function or taxing power, or even discretion or judgment. A rate of per cent. which will produce the net amount required to be raised, exclusive of the costs of collection and the amount of losses and deductions which will probably occur, is a proper one to be adopted by the officer extending the tax, if the total rate levied does not exceed that allowed by law.³

b. NECESSITY OF EXTENDING TAX. — It has been held that a failure to extend the tax, so as to show how much is imposed upon each person, is fatal to its validity,⁴ and where delinquent taxes were not carried forward upon the tax books, as required by law, tax sales made for such delinquent taxes were held invalid.⁵ But a failure to extend the tax has been held, in some cases, not to affect the validity of the proceedings.⁶

In Mustard v. Hoppess, 69 Ind. 324, the levy of a tax was attacked on the ground that the board of commissioners did not specify the per centum to be levied on the taxable property, but it was held that this was unnecessary, as it was "mere clerkship for the auditor to calculate the proper per centum, and place the same upon the tax duplicate."

The Work of Calculating and carrying out the amount or sum due is merely clerical, and can be done at any time when anybody might wish to pay the tax. Land is made debtor by being returned, assessed, and valued, and the rate per cent. fixed. The amount is a mere arithmetical process, and subject to the maxim id certum est quod certum reddi potest. Heft v. Gephart, 65 Pa. St. 510. Greenough v. Fulton Coal Co., 74 Pa. St. 486.

In California it was held that a statute which delegated to the state board the power to fix the rate of taxation after allowing for delinquency in the collection of taxes was unconstitutional, because it was a delegation of legislative power. The statute in question left it entirely in the hands of the board to add any sum or percentage it might deem proper in anticipation of possible delinquencies. *Houghton v. XI. TAX LIEN — 1. Nature and Creation. — There is no common-law rule which makes a levy and assessment of taxes ex proprio vigore a lien on the property of the taxpayer. Such liens owe their existence wholly to statute; and their duration, limitation, and priorities, together with the property to which they attach, must be determined by the statutes creating them.¹ The lien does not arise by implication from the power to tax,² nor does an obligation to assess taxes give a lien on the property upon which such taxes should be assessed.³ And a provision that taxes shall be entitled to priority of payment over other claims has been held not to create a lien.⁴

Construction of Statute. — Where a lien is expressly created by statute, it cannot be enlarged by construction,⁵ and it has been held that the statute creating it must be strictly construed.⁶

Retrospective Construction. — The lien may be given for taxes delinquent at the time of the passage of the act creating it as well as for those subsequently assessed;⁷ but the statute will not have this retroactive effect unless such

The statute must be strictly construed as against the party in whose favor the lien is created. U. S. v. Pacific R. Co., 4 Dill. (U. S.) 71; consequently, in favor of innocent purchasers of the property subject to the lien, U. S. v. Pacific R. Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 1.

7. Plymouth County v. Moore, 114 Iowa 700; Kansas v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 77 Mo. 180. See generally as to retroactive legislation with clearly appears to have been the legislative intent.¹

2. Lien of Municipal Taxes. — In the absence of express charter or statutory authority, a municipality has no power to create a lien for taxes imposed by it.² Thus, a power given to a city to levy a tax does not of itself confer the power to create a lien therefor.³ But it has been held that where a city is empowered to sell lands for delinquent taxes it may make such taxes a lien upon the land.⁴ The tax lien of a municipality does not conflict with the lien of the state, and they may exist as concurrent charges upon the same property.⁵

3. Essentials to Validity. — It is essential to the validity of a tax lien that all the prerequisites of the statute imposing the tax and creating the lien should be strictly complied with. If the tax is invalid the invalidity of the lien follows as of course.⁶ Thus, an illegal assessment of property creates no regard to tax laws the titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 6, p. 945; STATUTES, vol. 26, pp. 698, 699.

The Remedy by Action is not affected by the absence of a lien. Jefferson v. McCarty, 74 Mo. 55. See also Jefferson v. Mock, 74 Mo. 61. And where a lien is expressly given it is merely cumulative and does not interfere with the remedy at law. New Haven v. Fair Haven, etc., R. Co., 38 Conn. 422, 9 Am. Rep. 399.

Implied Lien. — See Ross v. Portland, 42 Oregon 134.

Extension of Time. — In Hohenstatt v. Bridgeton, 62 N. J. L. 169, it was held that the supplement of the New Jersey Tax Act (P. L. 1882, p. 130, Gen. Stat. N. J. 1895, p. 3360, par. 376) extends the tax lien period to three years in an incorporated city by whose charter taxes were to be assessed and collected as in townships, notwithstanding that by the township law the lien period was for two years only.

The Proceedings authorized by the statute to create and enforce the lien must be followed as directed. Lyon v. Alley, 130 U. S. 177; Creighton v. Manson, 27 Cal. 614.

Special Assessments must be made in pursuance of law, that a valid municipal lien may be created. See the title SPECIAL OR LOCAL ASSESSMENTS, vol. 25, p. 1236. And see Western Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Allegheny, 92 Pa. St. 100.

A Certificate of Delinquent Taxes to another county when the delinquent has left no property in the county in which he was assessed cannot, unless it sets out the matters required by the statute (Code Iowa 1897, § 1409), make the lien on the property assessed.¹ Actual demand for payment of the tax has been held not to be necessary to the creation of the lien² unless such demand is made necessary by statute;³ and a statute requiring that the lien shall be recorded must be complied with.⁴

Proceedings for Sale. — Neither the lien for the taxes nor the obligation to pay them ceases by reason of any defect in proceedings for the sale of the land to enforce the collection of the taxes.⁵

4. When Lien Attaches. — In the absence of a statutory provision fixing the time when the lien for taxes shall attach to real property, it has been held to attach as soon as the land becomes charged with the payment of a certain fixed sum as taxes,⁶ and in the case of personalty there can be no lien until seizure.⁷ But the statute creating the lien usually fixes the time when it taxes a lien on land in the county to which they are certified. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. v. Chapin, 113 Iowa 411.

Description Sufficient to Show Property Intended to Be Taxed. — It has been held that a lien will hold if the purchaser can show what property was intended to be taxed, State v. Casteel, 110 Ind. 174; and that an insufficient description will not preclude the purchaser at the tax sale from maintaining an action to enforce a lien against the land intended to be taxed and sold, Flinn v. Parsons, 60 Ind. 573; Cooper v. Jackson, 71 Ind. 244; Sloan v. Sewell, 81 Ind. 180.

4. Recording. — In Louisiana registry is essential to preserve the lien of the state for taxes as against third persons, New Orleans

Sav. Inst. v. Leslie, 28 La. Ann. 496; Cochran v. Ocean Dry Dock Co., 30 La. Ann. 1365 (tax due to city of New Orleans); Jacob v. Preston, 31 La. Ann. 516; but not as against the person assessed, Adams v. Wakefield, 26 La. Ann. 592. The lien exists without being reinscribed until the taxes secured are fully paid. Gulf States Land Co. v. Parker, 60 Fed. Rep. 974. But this provision does not affect tax liens of the United States on the land of a manufacturer of tobacco. U. S. v. Snyder, 149 U. S. 210.

In Pennsylvania the lien for taxes cannot exist unless a certified copy has been entered of record as required by the law creating it. Anspach's Appeal, 112 Pa. St. 27; Grubb v. Weaver, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 609; In re Wilson, 4 Pa. St. 164; In re Arnold, 46 Pa. St. 277; Wm. Wilson, etc., Silversmith Co.'s Estate, 150 Pa. St. 285; Gladdeen v. Chapman, 188 Pa. St. 586. Under an early statute, however, the provision as to record was held to be simply directory. Parker's Appeal, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 449; Wallace's Estate, 59 Pa. St. 401.

But a tax lien has been held not to be lost as against general creditors by a failure to transmit to the proper county a copy of the lien for record. Goodwin Gas Stove, etc., Co.'s Estate, 166 Pa. St. 296.

This time is generally the time of the assessment of the tax. Lyon v. Alley, 130 U. S. 177.

Time When Duty to Pay Arises. — In Harrington v. Hilliard, 27 Mich. 271, it was said that the time fixed by the statute, viz., the first Monday in December of the year in which they are assessed, was intended "to correspond with the time when the imposition of the taxes, for all legal purposes, is to be considered as consummated, and when for the first time the duty to pay springs into existence for any purpose."

Amount Must Be Fixed. — Strictly speaking, a lien does not attach to the land until the amount of the tax is fixed. Wise v. L., etc., Wise Co., 12 N. Y. App. Div. 319, affirmed 153 N. Y. 507; Barlow v. St. Nicholas Nat. Bank, 63 N. Y. 400, 20 Am. Rep. 547.

Railroad Property.—In Stevens v. Lake George, etc., R. Co., 82 Mich. 426, the general lien of the state against all the personal property of a railroad company for taxes assessed against it was held to attach from the time when the commissioner of railroads filed a computation of the amount of the tax with the auditor-general. Colorado.—Wason v. Major, 10 Colo. App. 181 (real property).

Delaware.—Chester v. Roan, 8 Del. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 66.

Illinois.—Taxes on Real Estate become a lien upon the land charged from the first day of May in each year. Cooper v. Corbin, 105 Ill. 224; Almy v. Hunt, 48 Ill. 45.

Personal Property Taxes Do Not Become a Lien on Real Estate until the collector, having failed to collect, charges a sum on such real estate in his application for judgment for delinquent taxes. Parsons v. East St. Louis Gas Light, etc., Co., 108 Ill. 384; Carter v. Rodewald, 108 Ill. 351.

No Lien Is Created on Personal Property until the tax books are placed in the hands of the collector. Schaeffer v. People, 60 Ill. 179; Gaar v. Hurd, 92 Ill. 315; Binkert v. Wabash R. Co., 98 Ill. 206; Belleville Nail Co. v. People, 98 Ill. 399; Cooper v. Corbin, 105 Ill. 224. And if the collector fails to make any levy on the personal property until after the return day of the warrant, the warrant then being dead, all liens that might have been, but were not, perfected by a levy are lost. Ream v. Stone, 102 Ill. 359. See also Hill v. Figley, 23 Ill. 418; Bell v. Barnard, 37 Ill. App. 275; Crescent Livery Co. v. Perkins, 44 Ill. App. 373.

Indiana—Lien on Real Estate.—The aggregate amount of poll taxes and those upon personal and real estate is a lien upon all real estate of the taxpayer within the county, and such lien attaches on the first day of January in each year. Cones v. Wilson, 14 Ind. 465; Isaac v. Decker, 41 Ind. 410; Veit v. Graff, 37 Ind. 254. A warrant before such date does not covenant against them. Overstreet v. Dobson, 28 Ind. 256.

On Personality.—There is also a lien upon personal property for all taxes, but no time is fixed by statute for it to attach. As between the state and the owner at the time of settlement, the lien attaches as soon as the duplicate is issued to the treasurer. Cones v. Wilson, 14 Ind. 465. See McNiell v. Farneman, 37 Ind. 203; Barker v. Morton, 19 Ind. 146.

Iowa.—Taxes on Personal Property do not become a lien on the real estate of the owner until they are due, and they do not become due by the mere assessment of the property for taxation. Castle v. Anderson, 69 Iowa 428.

As to Taxes on a Stock of Goods, see Plymouth County v. Moore, 114 Iowa 700.

Louisiana.—The filing of an assessment roll in the office of the recorder of mortgages acts as a lien on each specific piece of real estate thereon assessed, and the same property becomes subject to a legal mortgage after the thirty-first day of December of the current year. Behan v. Assessors, 46 La. Ann. 870.

Massachusetts.—Taxes on Real Estate constitute a lien thereon for two years after they are committed to the collector, and his lien relates back to the day on which they were assessed. Cochran v. Guild, 106 Mass. 29, 8 Am. Rep. 296; Hill v. Bacon, 110 Mass. 387; Davis v. Bean, 114 Mass. 358; and is not secondary or collateral to any personal liability of the person to whom it is assessed, Swan v. Emerson, 129 Mass. 289.

Michigan.—As to when the lien attaches to personality, see Tousey v. Post, 91 Mich. 631; St. Johns Nat. Bank v. Bingham Tp., 113 Mich. 203.

Minnesota—Real Property.—See Hennepin County v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 33 Minn. 534; Martin County v. Drake, 40 Minn. 137; State v. Northwestern Telephone Exch. Co., 80 Minn. 17.

Missouri.—State and county taxes are made a lien on real estate from the first Monday in September, and the owner at that time will be liable to a subsequent purchaser for them, on his covenant of warranty, even though the sale is prior to the assessment. McLaren v. Sheble, 45 Mo. 130; Blossom v. Van Court, 34 Mo. 390, 86 Am. Dec. 114.

The Lien Relates Back and takes effect from the inception point of the assessment, although the assessment may not be consummated until a later day or month in the year. It is immaterial that the rights of a third person who purchased for value and without notice have intervened. McLaren v. Sheble, 45 Mo. 130.

Nebraska.—Taxes Assessed on Personal Property are a lien from the delivery of the tax list to the county treasurer on all the personal property owned by the persons assessed. Reynolds v. Fisher, 43 Neb. 172; Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Memminger, 48 Neb. 17; Chamberlain Banking House v. Woolsey, 60 Neb. 516; Blanchard v. Logan County, (Neb. 1902) 80 N. W. Rep. 376; Foster, etc., Lumber Co. v. Leisure, (Neb. 1902) 91 N. W. Rep. 556.

As to Real Estate, see Cushman v. Taylor, (Neb. 1902) 90 N. W. Rep. 207.

New Jersey.—See Hallinger v. Zimmerman, 63 N. J. Eq. 100; Duryee v. U. S. Credit System Co., 55 N. J. Eq. 311; Robinson v. Hulick, 67 N. J. L. 496; Hohenstatt v. Bridgeton, 62 N. J. L. 169.

Fraction of Day. — The lien attaches at the earliest moment of the day fixed, as there is no point of time less than a day at which the tax may be regarded as attaching.¹

5. To What Property Lien Attaches. — The statutes creating liens determine what property shall be subject to them.² The lien for taxes on real estate attaches to each particular tract for that portion of the tax assessed against it, and a tax assessed against one tract is not a lien on the other tracts owned by the same person.³ It is otherwise, however, as to the lien for taxes upon personalty. A lien on personal property is not confined to the specific articles assessed, but attaches to all the personal property of the person from whom the tax is due.⁴ Taxes on personal property may, by statute, be made a lien

New York. — No lien or incumbrance is created by the tax until after the list containing it is confirmed, Washington Heights M. E. Church v. New York, 20 Hun (N. Y.) 297; Barlow v. St. Nicholas Nat. Bank, 63 N. Y. 399, 20 Am. Rep. 547; Fisher v. New York, 67 N. Y. 73; Colored Orphans Assoc. v. New York, 104 N. Y. 581; Lathers v. Keough, 109 N. Y. 583; In re Van Beuren, (Supm. Ct. Spec. T.) 66 N. Y. Supp. 267; for the amount of the tax is not ascertained and determined until confirmation, Dowdney v. New York, 54 N. Y. 186.

Taxes are a lien upon real property from the time when the warrant is issued for their collection, and not until then. Burr v. Palmer, 53 N. Y. App. Div. 358; Matter of Board of Education, 59 N. Y. App. Div. 258; Coudert v. Huerstel, 60 N. Y. App. Div. 83; Lathers v. Keogh, 109 N. Y. 583. See also Rundell v. Lakey, 40 N. Y. 516; Matter of Babcock, 115 N. Y. 455; Wise v. L., etc., Wise Co., 153 N. Y. 507, 12 N. Y. App. Div. 319.

North Dakota. — Personal Property. — Swenson v. Greenland, 4 N. Dak. 532.

Texas. — In State v. Farmer, 94 Tex. 232, it was held that a lien of the state for taxes against land arose out of the assessment, and did not exist until that was made.

Vermont. — The lien becomes fixed when the officer by some official act manifests his intention to pursue the land for the purpose of enforcing the collection of the taxes; and in the case of a nonresident proprietor, taxes become a lien when the constable has made a list of the land and the taxes assessed thereon, and deposited it in the town clerk's office for record. Hutchins v. Moody, 34 Vt. 433.

Washington. — As to when the lien attaches to personalty, see Phelan v. Smith, 22 Wash. 397.

1. Fraction of Day. — In Hill v. Bacon, 110 Mass. 387, the grantor of a deed with covenant of warranty dated April 30 was in possession of the land conveyed till one o'clock in the afternoon of May 1, when he executed and delivered the deed, and the grantee immediately took possession. The tax on the land for the year beginning May 1 was assessed to the grantor, who did not pay it, and the land having been sold for such nonpayment, it was held that there was a breach of the covenant.

2. Statute Creating Lien. — Meyer v. Burritt, 60 Conn. 123; Albany Brewing Co. v. Meriden, 48 Conn. 243.

3. Covered Fixtures. — The lien of the state for taxes cannot follow several fixtures as personal property. State v. Goodnow, 80 Mo. 271.

Franchises — Corporations. — Taxes due to the commonwealth are a lien on the franchises and property, both real and personal, of corporations and limited partnerships. Goodwin Gas Stove, etc., Co.'s Estate, 3 Pa. Dist. 483, affirmed 166 Pa. St. 296. See generally the title TAXATION (CORPORATE), post.

Franchise Tax Lien on Assets of Bank. — Mid-dlesboro v. Coal, etc., Bank, 108 Ky. 680.

Railroad. — Taxes on the capital stock of a railroad constitute a lien on the real property of the company. Union Trust Co. v. Weber, 96 Ill. 346.

The Personal Property of a Railroad is within a statute providing that the state shall have a lien on a railroad and all appurtenances thereof. Stevens v. Lake George, etc., R. Co., 82 Mich. 426.

Shares of Stock. — Where a statute provided that the capital stock of a bank, and not the shareholders, should be taxed, it was held that the tax was against the shareholders, and that a provision for its payment by the bank was but a method of collecting the tax from the stockholders, the lien being on the stock and not on any property of the bank. Cleveland Trust Co. v. Lander, 10 Ohio Cir. Dec. 452, 19 Ohio Cir. Ct. 271.

3. Real Estate — Each Particular Tract. — Meyer v. Burritt, 60 Conn. 117; Hellman v. Burritt, 62 Conn. 438; Meridan v. Maloney, 74 Conn. 90; Binkert v. Wabash R. Co., 98 Ill. 215; Kepley v. Jansen, 107 Ill. 80; Behan v. Assessors, 46 La. Ann. 870; Hayden v. Foster, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 492; State v. Sargeant, 76 Mo. 557; State v. Baker, 49 Tex. 763; Edmonson v. Galveston, 53 Tex. 157; Jodon v. Brenham, 57 Tex. 655. See also Behan v. Assessors, 46 La. Ann. 870; State v. Hand, 41 N. J. L. 517. But see, under express statutory provisions, Cones v. Wilson, 14 Ind. 465; Geren v. Gruber, 26 La. Ann. 697.

Sale of Separate Tracts. — In State v. Hand, 41 N. J. L. 518, it was held that two separate lots of land could not be sold together for the taxes which were separately assessed against each lot.

4. Personalty — Lien Not Confined to Specific Articles. — Hill v. Figley, 23 Ill. 418; Crescent Livery Co. v. Perkins, 44 Ill. App. 373; Binkert v. Wabash R. Co., 98 Ill. 206; Gaar v. Hurd, 92 Ill. 330; Cooper v. Corbin, 105 Ill. 224; Barker v. Morton, 19 Ind. 146; Hill v. Palmer, 32 Neb. 632; Reynolds v. Fisher, 43 Neb. 172;

upon the realty of the taxpayer as well as upon his personalty;¹ but unless it is expressly so provided by statute, no such lien exists.² And so taxes levied on land do not constitute a lien on personal property in the absence of a statute to that effect.³ Taxes assessed on personal property have been held not only to be a lien on the property assessed, but on that subsequently acquired.⁴

Land, Not Interest in Land. — The tax lien on real estate attaches to the land itself, and not to any particular interest therein.⁵

Farmers L. & T. Co. v. Memminger, 48 Neb. 17; Chamberlain Banking House v. Woolsey, 60 Neb. 516.

Specific Property. — But in Lee v. Stanard, 15 Colo. App. 101, it was held that the lien created by the levy or assessment of taxes on personal property, such as a herd of range horses, attached only to the specific property attached or levied upon, and while for the collection of taxes any property belonging to the person assessed might be taken, as against subsequent purchasers or incumbrancers only the property to which the lien attached could be seized. See also Chicago Bazaar Co. v. McNichols, 13 Colo. App. 154.

And in Arkansas under a statute declaring that "taxes assessed upon real or personal property shall bind the same," and that "all taxes assessed shall be a lien upon and bind the property assessed," it was held that the taxes on each class of personal property were a lien only on the property of that class, but the whole tax of each class was a lien on every item of that class. Bridwell v. Morton, 46 Ark. 73.

Tenancy by Entirety. — Under such a statute, land held by a husband and wife as tenants by the entirety is not subject to a lien for taxes on the husband's personal estate. Morrison v. Seybold, 92 Ind. 298.

Ownership of Other Property. — Such a lien is not affected by the fact that the owner had other and personal property which might be taken on a tax warrant. Albany Brewing Co. v. Meriden, 48 Conn. 243.

Improvements of Realty. — People v. Smith, 123 Cal. 70.

Lien on Realty but Not on Personalty. — It was provided by statute that every tax should have the effect of a judgment against the person, and every lien the force and effect of an execution duly levied against all personal property. It was also enacted that every personal-property tax should be a lien on the owner's realty.

Another provision authorized certain real-property liens for real-property taxes. It was held that no tax lien attached to assessed personalty the owner of which owned no realty, and hence the sale for taxes of such personalty in the hands of an innocent purchaser should be enjoined. Walsh v. Croft, 27 Mont. 407.

Ownership — Residency. — The lien attaches without regard to ownership. Dunlap v. Gallatin County, 15 Ill. 7. So it matters not whether the owner be a resident or a nonresident. Edwards v. Beaird, 1 Ill. 70.

Revenue Act. — But where an act of Congress made the land upon which whisky was distilled liable for the taxes due to the government for the distillation, it was held that this did not apply where the distillation was by one upon the land of another without his knowledge or consent. Gudger v. Bates, 52 Ga. 285.

Title. — In Oldham v. Jones, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 458, it was said: "The law requires the title as well as the land to be entered, not only to enable the commonwealth to impose the tax, but to collect it. The lien for its payment is upon the title as well as the land. When the register exposes the land for sale, he at the same time announces the title which the purchaser will obtain, and upon that title alone the purchaser agrees to rely."

Property Held under a Contract of Purchase, upon which a part of the purchase money has

Assessment to Wrong Person. — It follows, as the lien attaches to the land, and not to any particular interest in it, that it may be valid although the tax is assessed to the wrong person.¹

6. Priority of Lien. — It is within the constitutional power of the legislature to make the tax a lien superior to any other security, incumbrance, or lien arising either before or after the assessment of the tax, and in many states the legislature has exercised this power.² But such priority will not be been paid, is subject to sale for taxes. National Bank v. Danforth, 80 Ga. 55; Morgan v. Burks, 90 Ga. 287.

Remainders and Reversions. — Under some of the statutes the lien is on the reversioner's interest as well as on that of the life tenant. See Spiech v. Tierney, 56 Neb. 514. In other jurisdictions, however, the contrary is held. See State v. Campbell, (Tenn. 1897) 41 S. W. Rep. 937; Nashville v. Cowan, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 212; Stovall v. Austin, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 700; Ferguson v. Quinn, 97 Tenn. 46; Tabb v. Com., 98 Va. 47. And see the title TAX TITLES, post.

Mortgages. — In Dekum v. Multnomah County, 38 Oregon 253, it was held that under the mortgage-tax law of the state a mortgage on real property was an interest in the land which might be sold for the payment of any taxes due thereon.

Nebraska — Distinction Between Realty and Personality. — In Nebraska the lien for taxes on real estate is superior to any mortgage or incumbrance thereon. Eddy v. Kimerer, 61 Neb. 498; Campbell v. Gawlewicz, (Neb. 1902) 91 N. W. Rep. 569. But in respect to taxes on personality no priority is given over liens on the personality assessed which were created before the assessment. Reynolds v. Fisher, 43 Neb. 172; Reynolds v. McMillan, 43 Neb. 183; Farmers L. & T. Co. v. Memminger, 48 Neb. 17; Chamberlain Banking House v. Woolsey, 60 Neb. 516; Blanchard v. Logan County, (Neb. 1902) 89 N. W. Rep. 376.

In New York, in the absence of a statute giving priority to a lien for taxes, it is held that a specific lien on personal property, acquired by attachment in an action at law, cannot be displaced in favor of a subsequent claim for taxes on the same property where no specific lien has been acquired by warrant or any legal process. Wise v. L., etc., Wise Co., 153 N. Y. 507.

Priority Between State and Municipality. — The lien of municipal taxes to which priority is given over prior mortgages and other incumbrances will not, as a rule, supersede mortgages made to the state or its representatives, because the state is not affected by such a statute, except by express mention or necessary

implied¹ unless such clearly appears to have been the legislative intent.² And the mere declaration that taxes shall be a lien on the property assessed has been held not to be sufficient to give precedence to the lien.³ The statute creating the lien may give to it precedence over all liens and incumbrances existing prior to the passage of such statute;⁴ but this retrospective effect will not be given in the absence of clear legislative intent.⁵

7. Termination of Lien — a. IN GENERAL. — Payment or tender at the proper time and place and to the proper officials will generally discharge the lien;⁶ so the lien may be terminated by abandonment on the part of the taxing power,⁷ by statutory limitation,⁸ or by the repeal of the statute under which the taxes are levied, unless there is a clear intention to continue the lien.⁹ But the lien is not lost by a change of county boundaries,¹⁰ nor by mere delay in collecting, not amounting to abandonment.¹¹ Nor does the fact that some one is personally liable for the taxes relieve real estate of a tax implication. U. S. v. Hoar, 2 Mason (U. S.) 314; Public School Trustees v. Trenton, 30 N. J. Eq. 667; State v. Van Hovenberg, (N. J. 1899) 45 Atl. Rep. 439.

Penalty for Nonpayment Included in Priority. — Titusville's Appeal, 108 Pa. St. 600.

Paramount Tax Lien Privileged from Marshaling. — People's Sav. Bank v. Tripp, 13 R. I. 621. But in the absence of statutory priority taxes are marshaled according to the general law determining the rank of liens. Gormley's Appeal, 27 Pa. St. 49.

1. Priority Not Implied. — Gifford v. Callaway, 8 Colo. App. 359; Chamberlain Banking House v. Woolsey, 60 Neb. 516; Public School Trustees v. Trenton, 30 N. J. Eq. 679; Howell v. Essex County Road Board, 32 N. J. Eq. 676; Roraback v. Stebbins, 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 100; Wise v. L., etc., Wise Co., 12 N. Y. App. Div. 319; Rhein Bldg. Assoc. v. Lea, 100 Pa. St. 214.

2. Morrow v. Dows, 28 N. J. Eq. 459, holding that intention to give priority appeared where, in addition to the declaration that the tax should be a lien upon the land, the law authorized a sale of timber; Doremus v. Cameron, 49 N. J. Eq. 1. See also Pateron v. O'Neill, 32 N. J. Eq. 386; Pennington v. Mendes, 38 N. J. Eq. 336; State v. Newark, 42 N. J. L. 45; Howell v. Essex County Road Board, 32 N. J. Eq. 677, virtually overruling O'Neill v. Dringer, 31 N. J. Eq. 507.

3. Mere Declaration of Lien Gives No Priority. — St. Johns Nat. Bank v. Bingham Tp., 113 Mich. 203; Lucking v. Ballantyne, (Mich. 1903) 94 N. W. Rep. 8; Miller v. Anderson, 1 S. Dak. 539; Iowa Land Co. v. Douglas County, 8 S. Dak. 491. But see Minnesota v. Central Trust Co., (C. C. A.) 94 Fed. Rep. 244, decided under the Minnesota statute.

Tax on Personalty Lien on Realty. — Although a statute constitutes a tax on personal property a lien on real estate of the person assessed, such lien is subordinate to an antecedent mortgage on the real estate where the statute makes no attempt to fix its priority in respect to other liens. Gifford v. Callaway, 8 Colo. App. 359; Bibbins v. Clark, 90 Iowa 230 [overruling New England L. & T. Co. v. Young, 81 Iowa 732]; Bibbins v. Polk County, 100 Iowa 493; Miller v. Anderson, 1 S. Dak. 539; Lobban v. State, 9 Wyo. 382.

So in State v. Newark, 42 N. J. L. 38, it was held that taxes assessed on real estate had priority over mortgages, but taxes assessed on personal property of the owners of land had not such priority. And this would seem to be the doctrine in Illinois. See Dunlap v. Gallatin County, 15 Ill. 7; Binkert v. Wabash R. Co., 98 Ill. 205.

4. Retrospective Effect of Statute. — O'Brien v. Cogswell, 17 Can. Sup. Ct. 420; Lydecker v. Palisade Land Co., 33 N. J. Eq. 415. See also State v. Newark, 42 N. J. L. 45.

See also Mount v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 25. Compare Gardenhire v. Mitchell, 21 Kan. 83, wherein the lien was held to be preserved under a general law providing that the repeal of a statute should not affect any right accrued under the statute repealed. And see Smith v. Kelly, 24 Oregon 464; Alliance Trust Co. v. Multnomah County, 38 Oregon 433, in which cases it was held that a repeal of the tax law does not destroy the remedy with respect to the existing taxes.

Repeal by Implication. — See Philadelphia v. Kates, 150 Pa. St. 30.

Substantial Re-enactment may furnish ground for inferring that the legislature intended to reserve and continue the lien for taxes which had accrued under prior statutes. Gorley v. Sewell, 77 Ind. 316.

10. Not Lost by Change of County Boundaries. — Moss v. Shear, 25 Cal. 38, 85 Am. Dec. 94; Devor v. McClintock, 9 W. & S. (Pa.) 80.

11. Not Lost by Mere Delay in Collecting. — Iowa Land Co. v. Douglas County, 8 S. Dak. 491. Compare Robinson v. Bierce, 102 Tenn. 428.

lien.¹ And a lien on personal property for the taxes assessed against it has been held not to be lost by a failure to take the steps necessary to make the taxes a lien on the land of the owner.²

b. STATUTORY LIMITATION.—The statute sometimes gives a perpetual lien which cannot be divested by mere lapse of time.³ Where the duration of the lien is expressly limited by statute it is of course lost by the expiration of the statutory period.⁴ Provision is sometimes made, however, for its renewal,⁵ and the statutes sometimes provide that land may be sold for taxes after the expiration of the statutory term of the lien, unless the land has been alienated in the meantime.⁶

Merger.—Where a judgment is obtained in a tax suit the tax lien is not merged in the judgment lien so as to expire in the time limited for a general judgment lien.⁷

1. Personal Liability.—Gable v. Seiben, 137 Ind. 155.

The institution of a Personal Action for the recovery of a tax does not divest its lien. Eschbach v. Pitts, 6 Md. 71.

2. Personal Property.—Duryee v. U. S. Credit System Co., 55 N. J. Eq. 311.

3. Perpetual Lien.—See Gulf States Land Co. v. Parker, 60 Fed. Rep. 974; Adams v. Davis, 109 Ind. 10; Gable v. Seiben, 137 Ind. 155; Beard v. Allen, 141 Ind. 248. See also Rochford v. Fleming, 10 S. Dak. 24, holding that the lien of a county for taxes was not lost by the county bidding in the land at a sale for such taxes. Compare Adams v. Osgood, 42 Neb. 450, wherein it was said: "Whatever may be the rule elsewhere, we think, under our statutes, that the only way by which a valid tax existing against real estate here can be discharged is by the payment of such tax, unless such real estate be sold for taxes and the holder of the tax lien fails to bring suit to foreclose the same for five years after the expiration of the time to redeem." And see Spiech v. Tierney, 56 Neb. 517; Johnson v. Finley, 54 Neb. 733; Black v. Leonard, 33 Neb. 745.

Special and General Laws.—A general statute limited the lien for taxes to two years; an act incorporating a certain town provided that a tax lien on real estate should "remain a lien thereon until paid." It was held that the latter provision superseded that contained in the general act. Skinner v. Christie, 52 N. J. Eq. 720.

So in Wells County v. McHenry, 7 N. Dak. 246, it was held that a tax lien on real estate having been declared to be perpetual, no lapse of time would bar a remedy to enforce such lien against the land, and that no limitation statute could be invoked as a defense to the proceedings to foreclose the tax lien.

But in State v. Bellin, 79 Minn. 131, it was held that a statute providing that the lien for taxes on real property should continue until they were paid did not affect the provision of the statute of limitation applicable under previous decisions to taxes and tax judgments.

4. Time Fixed by Statute.—Isaac v. Swift, 10 Cal. 80, 70 Am. Dec. 698; Field v. West Orange Tp., 37 N. J. Eq. 434; Kirkpatrick v. New Brunswick, 40 N. J. Eq. 46; Johnson v. Van Horn, 45 N. J. L. 136; Burnet v. Dean, 63 N. J. Eq. 253; Philadelphia v. Rebank, 12 Pa. Co. Ct. 526; Grubb v. Weaver, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 609;

Philadelphia v. Heister, 142 Pa. St. 39. See also Philadelphia v. Kates, 150 Pa. St. 30; Philadelphia v. Scott, 93 Pa. St. 25. Compare Brooke v. Kaufman, 6 Pa. Dist. 513; Chester v. Sinex, 8 Del. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 160.

Necessity for Sale Within Period.—In Dubois v. Poughkeepsie, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 117, it was held that a sale made subsequent to the two years prescribed for the continuance of the lien was invalid although preliminary proceedings were begun within that period.

Statute Held to Be Prospective Only.—Hart v. New Orleans, 51 La. Ann. 912. See also Parham's Succession, 51 La. Ann. 980; Gowland v. New Orleans, 52 La. Ann. 2042.

5. Scire Facias to Revive Lien.—See Philadelphia v. Kates, 150 Pa. St. 30; Philadelphia v. Reeves, 15 Pa. Super. Ct. 535; Philadelphia v. Rebank, 12 Pa. Co. Ct. 526.

In Pennsylvania it has been held that the lien of registered taxes on real estate is lost unless a scire facias sub claim is issued before the expiration of five years from the first day of January following the year for which the taxes were assessed. Philadelphia v. Browning, 13 Pa. Super. Ct. 164; Philadelphia v. Heister, 142 Pa. St. 39; Philadelphia v. Kates, 150 Pa. St. 30. But where the lien filed comprises taxes for more than one year, and the lien for taxes for some of the years is lost before the issuance of the sc. fa., after judgment is obtained, it cannot be divided and that relating to the invalid years be stricken off. Philadelphia v. Browning, 13 Pa. Super. Ct. 164.

New Jersey Statute—Statutory Limitation Not Extended.—Harned v. Camden, 66 N. J. L. 520.

6. Sale After Expiration of Statutory Term.—See Holden v. Eaton, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 15 (federal statute); Kelso v. Boston, 120 Mass. 297; Russell v. Deshon, 124 Mass. 342; *Market Nat. Bank v. 7. Not Merged in Judgment Lien.—Beard v. Allen, 141 Ind. 243, holding that the foreclosure of the lien for taxes did not merge such lien in the judgment. Kentucky Cent. R. Co. v. Com., 92 Ky. 64, holding that a simple money judgment for taxes, though the limitation of the judgment was fifteen years, could not extend the lien of the taxes, which was limited by statute to five years. Boyd v. Ellis, 107

c. EFFECT OF ALIENATION, JUDICIAL SALE, ETC. — A tax lien is not discharged by the alienation of the property to which it has attached. The purchaser of the property takes it subject to the lien, whether he knew of its existence or not. The lien follows the property into the hands of successive purchasers until discharged by payment, lapse of time, or otherwise.¹ It has been held that the lien is not divested by making an assignment for the benefit of creditors.² So a receiver³ or an assignee in insolvency or bankruptcy⁴ takes subject to the lien.

Order of Liability. — When property is sold and conveyed by a common grantor at different times and to different purchasers, and taxes having a lien on all the property sold are due, the last property sold is primarily bound for the payment of such taxes.⁵

Effect of Judicial Sale. — A lien for taxes which has attached to property is not divested by a subsequent judicial sale, and the purchaser takes subject thereto,⁶ even though the decree under which the sale was made directed that the property should be sold free from all incumbrances.⁷ But if a stat-

Personalty. — Under a statute providing for a tax lien on personal property, it has been held that the lien continues and follows the property if it remains in the county, although the title thereto may have been transferred to another owner. Mills v. Thurston County, 16 Wash. 378.

Satisfaction of Mortgage. — A tax lien on a mortgagee's interest in real property is not released by satisfaction of the mortgage. Dekum v. Multnomah County, 38 Oregon 253. See also Alliance Trust Co. v. Multnomah County, 38 Oregon 433.

Collateral-inheritance Tax — Equitable Conversion. — In Brown's Estate, 5 Pa. Dist. 286, it was held that where by the will of a testator there is a conversion of his real estate into personalty, the lien of a collateral-inheritance tax is transferred from his real estate to the fund which is produced by the direction to convert. See also Com. v. Coleman, 52 Pa. St. 468; Miller v. Com., 111 Pa. St. 321; Williamson's Estate, 153 Pa. St. 532. And see the title SUCCESSION TAXES, ante, p. 337.

Alienation to Corporation. — In State v. Northwestern Telephone Exch. Co., 80 Minn. 17, it was held that a tax lien is not divested by a sale after it has attached to a corporation which has commuted to the state by the payment of a percentage on its gross earnings in lieu of all other taxes.

Confusion of Goods. — It has been held that where the purchaser of a stock of goods on which there was a tax lien mixed therewith other goods subsequently purchased, the whole stock was subjected to the lien. Mills v. Thurston County, 16 Wash. 378. But see Chicago Bazaar Co. v. McNichols, 13 Colo. App. 154.

2. Assignment for Benefit of Creditors. — State v. Rowse, 49 Mo. 586; Goodwin Gas Stove, etc., Co's Estate, 3 Pa. Dist. 483, affirmed 166 Pa. St. 296. See also Cones v. Wilson, 14 Ind. 465 (personal property).

3. Receivers. — Duryee v. U. S. Credit System Co., 55 N. J. Eq. 311, holding that the court may provide for payment of the taxes as a preferred claim out of the proceeds of the property. See also Matter of Columbia Ins. Co., 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 239.

4. Assignee in Insolvency or Bankruptcy Takes Subject to Lien. — In re Brand, 2 Hughes (U. S.) 334; Stokes v. State, 46 Ga. 412, 12 Am. Rep. 588; Mesker v. Koch, 76 Ind. 68; Meeks v. Whatley, 48 Miss. 337; People v. Manhattan F. Ins. Co., (Supm. Ct. Spec. T.) 59 N. Y. Supp. 1007.

5. Order of Liability. — Merchants Nat. Bank v. McWilliams, 107 Ga. 532; Askew v. Scottish American Mortg. Co., 114 Ga. 300. See also Reynolds v. Wood, 111 Ga. 854. And see generally the title MARSHALING ASSETS, vol. 19, p. 1273 et seq.

6. Lien Not Discharged by Judicial Sale. — Osterberg v. Union Trust Co., 93 U. S. 426; Bloxham v. Consumers' Electric Light, etc., R. Co., 36 Fla. 519, 51 Am. St. Rep. 44; Atlanta, etc., R. Co. v. State, 63 Ga. 483; Kerr v. Hoskinson, 5 Kan. App. 193; Middlesboro v. Coal, etc., Bank, 108 Ky. 680; Ketcham v. Fitch, 13 Ohio St. 201; Steen's Estate, 175 Pa. St. 299, holding that municipal taxes were not discharged under a statute providing that a sale should "discharge the premises sold from the lien of the debts of the decedent except debts of record and debts secured by mortgage."

Sheriff's Sale. — See Doe v. Deavors, 8 Ga. 479; Freeman v. Atlanta, 66 Ga. 617.

A Partition Sale cannot have the effect of discharging the lien. Morris v. Lalaurie, 39 La. Ann. 47.

7. Bloxham v. Consumers' Electric Light, etc., R. Co., 36 Fla. 519, 51 Am. St. Rep. 44.

ute directs that the tax shall be paid out of the proceeds of the sale, the purchaser takes the property free from the lien.¹ So the lien is not affected by a foreclosure sale of a mortgage on lands.² But a sale of land for taxes for one year discharges the land from the lien of the taxes delinquent thereon for the years prior to the one for which the sale was made, for the lien of each year's tax is paramount to all previous liens.³ There are, however, decisions in conflict with this rule.⁴

8. Personal Liability Independent of Lien.—Where a personal liability for taxes rests on the owner of the property assessed, such liability is independent of the tax lien.⁵ Therefore an action may be brought against the taxpayer for the taxes whether there is or is not a lien in existence.⁶ And

1. Payment from Proceeds of Sale.—Kerr v. Hoskinson, 5 Kan. App. 193; Annely v. De Sassure, 12 S. Car. 488. See also Shaw v. Allegheny, 115 Pa. St. 46, holding that the insufficiency of the proceeds to pay the taxes does not prevent the divestiture of the lien; Smith v. Simpson, 60 Pa. St. 169; Anspach's Appeal, 112 Pa. St. 27; Strasburger v. Guinter, 23 Pa. Co. Ct. 481.

A Sale of a Portion of the Land liable for the tax will not, in Pennsylvania, prevent the discharge of the lien, since the tax is not apportionable, but rests on the entire tract. Mellon's Appeal, 114 Pa. St. 564. See also Philadelphia v. McGonigle, 4 Phila. (Pa.) 351, 18 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 110.

Orphans' Court Sale.—In Brotherlin's Estate, 15 Pa. Co. Ct. 251, 3 Pa. Dist. 698, it was held that where unseated lands against which taxes had been assessed were sold at an Orphans' Court sale the taxes could not be paid out of the proceeds of the sale.

Hand Money.—In Fidelity Ins., etc., Co. v. Byrnes, 4 Pa. Dist. 654, it was held that hand money paid to the sheriff by a purchaser of real estate was bound by a lien for taxes of which the sheriff had no notice, notwithstanding the purchaser made default in payment and before a final sale was made the lien for taxes had expired by limitation of time.

2. Foreclosure Sale.—Isaacs v. Decker, 41 Ind. 410; Bodertha v. Spencer, 40 Ind. 353; Vaughn v. Clark, 5 Neb. 238; Iler v. Colson, 8 Neb. 331; State v. Godfrey, 10 Ohio Cir. Dec. 316.

Payment of Taxes from Proceeds.—In Opdyke v. Crawford, 19 Kan. 604, it was held that the court should, on application of the plaintiff in foreclosure, order that the taxes due on the mortgaged property be first paid out of the proceeds of the sale.

3. Sale for Taxes Discharges Lien for Previous Years.—California.—Dougherty v. Henarie, 47 Cal. 9; Chandler v. Dunn, 50 Cal. 15; Anderson v. Ryder, 46 Cal. 135. But see Cowell v. Washburn, 22 Cal. 520.

See further infra, this title, Tax Sales—Lands—Conduct of Sale—Amount for Which Sale to Be Made. And see the title Tax Titles, post.

Two Sales at Same Time and Place—Second Sale Valid.—See Keen v. Sheehan, 154 Mass. 208.

Owner Who Redeems.—The rule has been held to operate as well in favor of the owner who redeems from the sale as of a purchaser at a tax sale. Hough v. Easley, 47 Iowa 330; Kessey v. Connell, 68 Iowa 430. But see Texarkana Water Co. v. State, 62 Ark. 188. Compare Gray v. Coan, 30 Iowa 536, 40 Iowa 329.

Mistake.—In Bowman v. Eckstein, 46 Iowa 583, it was held that the sale did not operate as a discharge of the lien of prior delinquent taxes omitted by mistake from the sale.

Land Bid In by State.—In Traylor v. State, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 86, it was held that a tax lien might be asserted by the state against property which had been sold and bid in by the state for its taxes, under a statute which declared that state taxes should "remain a lien upon said land." See also Masterson v. State, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 91.

4. Contra.—Adams v. Osgood, 42 Neb. 450; Smith v. Specht, 58 N. J. Eq. 47, holding that a statute giving to a tax lien priority over other incumbrances did not apply to prior liens for taxes held by the state; Nashville v. Cowan, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 209. See also Public School Trustees v. Trenton, 30 N. J. Eq. 667; Smith v. Billingsley, 58 N. J. Eq. 47.

5. Personal Liability Independent of Lien.—Kentucky Cent. R. Co. v. Com., 92 Ky. 64. And see O'Grady v. Barnhisel, 23 Cal. 294; Oakland v. Whipple, 39 Cal. 112; Hart v. Tiernan, 59 Conn. 521. See also supra, this title, Persons and Things Taxable—In General.

although the lien may have been discharged by the expiration of the period fixed by statute, the tax may be collectible as a debt.¹

XII. PAYMENT AND TENDER — 1. Opportunity to Pay. — The statutes generally provide that before levy and sale, or other steps to enforce the collection of a tax, the taxpayer shall have an opportunity voluntarily to pay his assessment, and the demand and notice prescribed for this purpose are prerequisites to any steps for collection, such as action, levy, sale, etc.²

2. Time and Place. — Taxes should be paid at the time and place prescribed by statute;³ but a sale of land for taxes may generally be avoided by payment at any time before the execution of the tax deed.⁴ Payment of taxes on real property generally must be made in the town, county, or district where the land is located.⁵

40 N. Y. 517; and the title TAXATION, 21 ENCYC. OF PL. AND PR. 385.

Judgment Not Enforceable as Lien. — In Kentucky it has been held that a mere money judgment for taxes against the property owner cannot be enforced as a lien on the property without alleging and proving the steps necessary to the creation of a valid tax lien. Kentucky Cent. R. Co. v. Com., 92 Ky. 64.

1. Tax Collectible as Debt After Loss of Lien. — State v. Myer, 41 La. Ann. 436; Oteri v. Parker, 42 La. Ann. 374; Leeds v. Hardy, 43 La. Ann. 811; *People's Homestead Assoc. v. Payment Before Assessment is no protection. Cossart v. Spence, 23 Ark. 374.

Overpayment of Previous Year. — The taxes of one year cannot be compensated by an overpayment of a tax of a previous year. New Orleans v. Davidson, 30 La. Ann. 541, 31 Am. Rep. 228, 30 La. Ann. 554.

Waiver of Exact Time of Payment. — Where a tax was in fact paid and received by the proper officers and never returned or tendered back, there was held to be an effectual waiver of any objection which might possibly have been urged that the payment was not made in time. McHenry v. Alford, 168 U. S. 651.

Payment Prior to Sale Sufficient. — Bennett v. Hunter, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 326, applying Act Cong. June 7, 1862.

Extension of Time for Making Return. — In Drennan v. Beierlein, 49 Mich. 272, it was held that a taxpayer's right to make payment after the return of taxes is the same after an extension of the time for making the return as before.

5. See supra, this title, VII. 2. Real Property; infra, this title, XV. 2. b. (3) By What Officer Conducted.

3. By Whom Made — a. BY WHOM PAYMENT MAY BE MADE. — Payment of Taxes by One Joint Tenant or tenant in common inures to the benefit of all.¹

Payment by an Agent of the taxpayer is equivalent to a payment by the principal.²

Any Person Having an Interest in the Property may make payment where such interest would be divested by a tax sale of the property, e. g., a lienor, mortgagee, or person claiming title to the property.³

Payment by Third Person. — It has been held that payment of taxes by any one, whether interested in the property or not, extinguished them.⁴ But it would seem from some cases that payment by a stranger does not extinguish the tax.⁵

Mandamus to Compel Receipt of Taxes. — A writ of mandamus may issue to compel a tax collector to accept payment from one who has the right to make it, in case of an unlawful refusal on the part of such collector.⁶

b. PRIMARY LIABILITY AS BETWEEN OWNERS OF DIFFERENT ESTATES. — Where there are several estates in property the person having the present possession and enjoyment is primarily liable for the taxes.⁷

Tenant for Life. — Thus it is the duty of the tenant for life in possession to keep the current taxes paid if the estate is sufficient for the purpose.⁸

1. Co-owner or Cotenant. — Loomis v. Pingree, 43 Me. 299; Franklin v. Terrell, 3 Hawks (10 N. Car.) 283; Brown v. Day, 78 Pa. St. 129. And see the title JOINT TENANTS AND TENANTS IN COMMON, vol. 17, p. 686.

The Tender of a Pro Rata Share of the tax by one of several cotenants has been held to be sufficient as to her. Winter v. Atkinson, 28 La. Ann. 650.

2. Payment by Agent. — Hills v. Exchange Bank, 105 U. S. 319. See also Hawkins v. Dougherty, 9 Houst. (Del.) 156, holding that while the collector may except such payment, he is not compellable to do so, but his bond is liable in case of a subsequent failure to collect.

Payment by an agent is valid without reference to the state of accounts between principal and agent. Rand v. Scofield, 43 Ill. 167.

Rule to Contrary Invalid. — Tax commissioners have no right to establish a rule that they will receive taxes from no one but the owner in person. Atwood v. Weems, 99 U. S. 183; U. S. v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196; Bennett v. Hunter, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 326; Tacey v. Irwin, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 549.

Ratification is equivalent to prior authority. Parsons v. Slaughter, 63 Fed. Rep. 880. See generally the title AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 1213.

Tax Collectors Are Ministerial Officers and must accept payment from any one offering to pay. Iowa R. Land Co. v. Guthrie, 53 Iowa 383.

Mistake. — Where taxes on land were paid by mistake by one not the owner, the payment was held to cancel the assessment, and the fact that the money was refunded by the collector acting without authority made no difference. Mason v. Chicago, 48 Ill. 420. As to the existence of authority to refund, see infra, this title, XIII. 1. Refunding of Taxes.

But it has been held that a special assessment against real property for a permanent improvement is apportionable between the life tenant and the remainderman,¹ although in general special assessments are payable by the life tenant.²

A Mortgagor in possession is primarily liable for the taxes in the absence of a statute changing the rule or (as between the parties) of an agreement to the contrary.³

A Vendee in possession under a contract of sale is liable, as between himself and his vendor, for taxes assessed after the commencement of his possession.⁴

The Trustee should pay the taxes levied against the trust estate in the absence of a statute providing otherwise.⁵

Personal Representatives. — Taxes assessed and due at the date of the death of the owner of the property may be regarded as a debt against the decedent, and as such to be paid by the executor or administrator.⁶

a person bona fide, to protect his interest or supposed interest in land, or in the honest belief that he is the owner thereof, pays the taxes, he will be subrogated to the tax lien.¹

But a Mere Volunteer who pays taxes without any interest in or claim against the property is not entitled to reimbursement from the person liable for the taxes,² nor will he be subrogated to the benefit of the tax lien.³

4. To Whom Made.—Payment of a tax must be made to the officer authorized by law to collect it,⁴ or to his duly authorized deputy.⁵

5. How Made—a. IN GENERAL—Must Be Absolute.—The payment or tender of taxes must be absolute and unconditional.⁶ The taxpayer and the collector can make no arrangement whereby the taxpayer is discharged from liability for his taxes by anything except the absolute payment of them.⁷ In some states, however, the collector is permitted to satisfy the tax by payment to the treasurer and to enforce his claim for the payment so made against the person taxable.⁸

No Set-off can be allowed ¹ in the absence of statute.²

The Payment or Tender Must Be of the Whole Amount Due for taxes in order to discharge the lien.³ But where several assessments are united for convenience of collection, the full amount of any one separate tax may be paid although the taxpayer refuses to pay the others united with it.⁴

Expenses of Collection and Penalties for Default are a part of the taxes and must be paid or the lien will not be discharged.⁵

b. MEDIUM OF PAYMENT. — A tax collector has no right to receive in payment of taxes anything except legal-tender money, and a lien for taxes will not be discharged except by such payment or tender, unless a statute specifically authorizes the receipt of something else in payment.⁶

Check, Draft, Note. — The receipt of a check, draft, or note, the marking of the taxes paid on the books, and the delivering of a receipt will not constitute payment nor conclude the public in a controversy between the taxpayer and the authorities. The check or draft given to a collector as payment does not discharge the lien unless such instrument be in fact paid.⁷

ment¹ unless made so by statute.² Like receipts from other public officers, tax receipts prove themselves.³

Other Competent Evidence. — The tax receipts and tax books are not exclusive, but payment may be proved by any other competent evidence.⁴ As in other cases, however, the best evidence obtainable is required.⁵

Parol Evidence is admissible to show the payment of a tax whether an official receipt exists or not.⁶

Presumptions. — The absence from the tax book of an entry of payment of taxes assessed against property therein described raises a presumption that such taxes have not in fact been paid;⁷ but such presumption is by no means conclusive.⁸ No presumption of payment arises from the duty of the property owner to make it,⁹ nor, as a general rule, from mere lapse of time.¹⁰ But the fact that taxes have not been returned as delinquent has been held to be strong evidence that they were paid.¹¹

Evidence of the Payment of Taxes for Previous Years is not admissible to establish payment for a subsequent year.¹²

was erroneous,¹ or though the assessment was so irregular as to pass no title to a purchaser at a tax sale thereunder.² And where land is twice assessed to different persons, payment by one of them will discharge the lien as to the other.³

Payment, of Course, Defeats the Right to Sell the Property for nonpayment of taxes; and a tax sale of land for a tax improperly reported as delinquent, which the owner has paid, is illegal and void, and conveys no title to the purchaser.⁴ And the rule is the same whether the sale was made through inadvertence or mistake or in positive disregard of the fact of payment.⁵

The Misapplication of a Payment by the officer receiving it will not destroy its effect as payment.⁶ Thus, a payment is not defeated by its application to the taxes of other persons.¹ So where the owner of land intends to pay taxes on one tract and so informs the collector, and pays him the proper amount, and the collector, by mistake, gives a receipt for a different tract, and returns the one actually paid as delinquent, and it is sold for taxes, the owner may show actual payment against the purchaser at the tax sale.²

Tender. — A tender by a taxpayer or his agent operates as payment of the taxes, if kept good.³

8. Payment Frustrated by Officer. — If the owner of land, or a party having an interest therein, in good faith applies to the proper officer for the purpose of paying the tax thereon, and payment is prevented by the mistake or fault of such officer, as, for example, where a tax is omitted from the list made out by the officer, the attempt to pay is considered, in most jurisdictions, as the legal equivalent of payment in so far as to discharge the lien and bar a sale for nonpayment.⁴ Thus, where the owner of land in good faith attempts to pay the tax thereon, and is informed by the officer whose duty it is to state the amount of the tax that there are no taxes on the roll against such land, it is held that his title is not defeated by a subsequent sale of the land for nonpayment of taxes.⁵ So it has been held that where the purchaser of

But in Gordon v. Chiles, (Miss. 1892) 12 So. Rep. 146, where the plaintiff paid taxes on land wrongly assessed to him, it was held that land belonging to him, but assessed to another, was not discharged thereby.

Prevention of Tender. — It has been held that a mistake or fault of the receiving officer preventing a tender of payment of taxes will render the tax deed void. Martin v. Barbour, 34 Fed. Rep. 701; People v. Registrar of Arrears, 114 N. Y. 19; Breisch v. Cox, 81 Pa. St. 336.

St. Rep. 955; Bray, etc., Land Co. v. Newman, 92 Wis. 274; Nelson v. Churchill, 117 Wis. 10. Compare Wallace v. International Paper Co., 70 N. Y. App. Div. 298, holding that an erroneous state-real estate obtains from the treasurer a certificate that no taxes are due on the property, which certificate is substantiated by the tax books, he takes the property free from liens for taxes which were actually due.¹ And an erroneous statement as to the amount due for such taxes is equally within the rule, if acted on and payment made by the landowner accordingly.²

When Rule Does Not Apply. — The rule, however, is confined to cases where the landowner is prevented from paying the taxes by the neglect, wrong, or fault of the officer charged with the duty of collecting or receiving taxes, and does not apply where the officer applied to is not charged with such duty, or the party applying for the statement has no interest in the property,³ or where it does not appear that the claimant was prepared and willing to pay the taxes.⁴ So where the application for a statement of taxes due describes the property inaccurately, a mistake of the officer growing out of such inaccurate description will not relieve the applicant from liability.⁵

9. Receipt. — It is the duty of the officer receiving the tax to give a receipt for all payments properly made,⁶ and such duty may be enforced by mandamus.⁷

XIII. RECOVERY AND REFUNDING OF TAXES — 1. Refunding of Taxes. — In the absence of statute officers have no power to refund taxes paid, even though illegally assessed.⁸ In many jurisdictions, however, provision is made by statute for the refunding of taxes illegally exacted, upon application to the proper officer or board.⁹ The benefits of such statutes are generally not ment that there are no unpaid taxes renders the subsequent sale of the land merely voidable.

But see Johnson v. Finley, 54 Neb. 733, holding that a partial payment by reason of a mistake of the officer in stating the amount due merely discharged the taxes pro tanto.

Change in Map. — In Lewis v. Monson, 151 U. S. 545, it was held that where payment of taxes on one of several tracts was inadvertently omitted because of the adoption of a new official map, filed without the landowner's knowledge, and such tract was sold for non-payment of the taxes, he remaining in possession, his title would prevail in an action by the purchaser to recover possession of it. See also Richter v. Beaumont, 67 Miss. 285.

Evidence. — A settlement of the tax and the receipt therefor, unassailed, have been held to be clear evidence that the taxpayer applied to the treasurer for the taxes assessed against him and paid all that was demanded. Breisch v. Cox, 81 Pa. St. 336. See also *Bray, etc., Land Co. v. Tax Must Be Illegal and Not Merely Irregular. — But although the payment of a tax was involuntary, there can be no recovery unless the tax was illegal; mere irregularities in the proceedings will not warrant a recovery.¹ And if the tax is not itself illegal and void, and is voluntarily paid, an agreement by the proper officers to refund is void and affords no ground of action.² If a tax is partly illegal, and the illegal portion can be separated, it may be recovered if paid under duress, provided the legal tax be first tendered and refused.³

Tax Must Have Been Received by State or Municipality. — And in order to recover illegal taxes involuntarily paid it must appear that the taxes have been received to the use of the state or municipality from the collecting officer.⁴

Ordinary Remedy. — There can be no recovery by action where the taxpayer has failed to pursue his ordinary remedies to relieve himself from the payment of an illegal tax.¹ Thus, it is a settled rule that application must be made to any statutory tribunal that may exist for that purpose, and a taxpayer who fails to make such application cannot pay under protest and then recover back the taxes in an action.² But in the case of illegal taxation, no proceeding to set aside the assessment is necessary.³

Demand. — Prior demand for repayment is required by statute in some states as a prerequisite to an action to recover taxes illegally exacted;⁴ but in other jurisdictions no demand is necessary.⁵

b. WHAT CONSTITUTES VOLUNTARY PAYMENT — In General. — Where a party pays an illegal demand, with full knowledge of all the facts which render it illegal, without an immediate and urgent necessity therefor to release his person or property from detention, or to prevent an immediate seizure of his person or property, such payment must be deemed voluntary and cannot be recovered back. And, on the other hand, where a payment is made to prevent the seizure of the taxpayer's person or property or to relieve it from such seizure it is involuntary.⁶

is not necessary to render the payment involuntary.¹ So if the amount of an illegal tax be actually collected by distress and sale of personal property, the payment is, of course, involuntary and recoverable.² It has been held in a number of cases, however, that payment of illegal taxes to prevent a sale of real estate is not under compulsion, but is voluntary, as such a sale does not pass title.³

Redemption from a Tax Sale has in some cases been held to constitute a voluntary payment.⁴ But in other cases it has been held that if lands sold for illegal taxes are redeemed the redemption money may be recovered.⁵

necessarily carries with it the power to enact all laws deemed proper for the enforcement of their collection,¹ and, as collection is purely a matter for legislative regulation, the courts will not ordinarily interfere with the modes of collection authorized by the statute.² Unless there be constitutional restrictions upon legislative action,³ the choice of methods for the collection of taxes is within the discretion of the legislature.⁴

2. Collector. — By whatever name he may be known, it is necessary that there be a person duly authorized to enforce collection. This duty is imposed in the various states upon collectors, as such, or upon treasurers, trustees, sheriffs, constables, and other officers.⁵ But where two offices, as those of sheriff and collector, devolve on the same person, the two functions remain distinct.⁶

a. SELECTION. — The legislature may provide for the selection of the collector in the manner it sees fit.⁷ But the appointment of any individual

1. Power to Collect. — Slack v. Ray, 26 La. Ann. 674; Geren v. Gruber, 26 La. Ann. 694; Litchfield v. Vernon, 41 N. Y. 130; Southern R. Co. v. Kay, 62 S. Gar. 28; Languille v. State, 4 Tex. App. 312.

Constitutional Provision — Where a constitutional provision for the collection of taxes is not self-operating, the previous statutory provisions remain in force until abrogated. New Orleans v. Wood, 34 La. Ann. 732.

Equity Has No Jurisdiction to Restrain the Collection of a Personal Tax, even though it be illegal, the ordinary legal remedies being ample for the taxpayer's protection. Williams v. Detroit, 2 Mich. 560; Youngblood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 406, 20 Am. Rep. 654; Brewer v. Springfield, 97 Mass. 152; Durant v. Eaton, 98 Mass. 469; Hunnewell v. Charlestown, 106 Mass. 350; Rockingham Ten Cent Sav. Bank v. Portsmouth, 52 N. H. 17.

Nor in general will a court of equity undertake to collect taxes or appoint a receiver for that purpose. Thompson v. Allen County, 115 U. S. 550; People v. Biggins, 96 Ill. 481; Stafford County v. Stafford First Nat. Bank, 48 Kan. 561.

Must Be Collected by Proper Authorities. — Taxes can only be collected under legislative authority, state and federal. Hence the United States courts will not appoint a receiver to collect taxes to pay off a judgment recovered in the federal courts, even though it appears that no citizen of the county will undertake to collect the taxes under the appointment of the county authorities. Thompson v. Allen County, 13 Fed. Rep. 97.

3. Constitutional Restriction. — Edwards v. Williamson, 70 Ala. 145. See Mason v. Rollins, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 99; Litchfield v. Vernon, 41 N. Y. 130; Languille v. State, 4 Tex. App. 312.

A judgment creditor of a county who has an interest in a special tax levied under the coercion of a federal court cannot be indirectly deprived of his right to receive the fund appropriated to his debt by a state law requiring the collector to receive only state taxes and county taxes levied to defray current expenses. Edwards v. Williamson, 70 Ala. 145.

Where the sheriff is required to act as collector, he is usually given the same authority as though he were elected or appointed collector. Homer v. Cilley, 14 N. H. 85.

Clothing a collector with the power of a constable for the purpose of collecting taxes does not make him a constable for other purposes. Gage v. Dudley, 64 N. H. 437.

7. Selection. — Falconer v. Shores, 37 Ark. 387.

Right to Office. — A tax collector, who has been duly elected, and has qualified under a statute making the collectorship an elective office, may maintain a suit in equity to enjoin to act as collector when the office is already vested in another is void;¹ and, at all events, the collector must be chosen in the manner² and possess the qualifications prescribed by law.³ While the acts of de facto collectors done in the regular discharge of their official functions are binding,⁴ and their title to the office cannot be collaterally attacked,⁵ all taxpayers have such an interest as will authorize them to institute a quo warranto proceeding to test the authority of the collector to exercise his office.⁶ The collection of taxes is a ministerial act, hence the collector may act through a deputy,⁷ but, in Arkansas, it has been held that a collector who is also sheriff cannot, as collector, act through a deputy sheriff.⁸ Subject to this right, the duties of the collector can be performed only by the person designated by law.⁹ The office of collector is one of confidence, and the public has an interest in its proper performance. Consequently all attempts to delegate his authority or assign his duties to another are void.¹⁰ Upon the refusal of a collector to act or qualify, or upon the happening of a vacancy,¹¹ or upon his removal from the council from delivering the tax duplicates to a collector subsequently appointed by it. Town Council's Appeal, (Pa. 1888) 15 Atl. Rep. 730.

Power of Appointment.—A power to appoint a tax collector is given by statute in certain cases where no election for the office has been held. Souhegan Nail, etc., Factory v. McConihe, 7 N. H. 309.

Sufficiency of Appointment.—An appointment of a person as "collector" of the town is sufficiently definite where there is no other collector than that of taxes. Taft v. Barrett, 58 N. H. 447. Contra, Lincoln v. Chapin, 132 Mass. 470.

Parol Appointment Insufficient.—The appointment of a tax collector for a town by the selectmen should, in New Hampshire, be in writing. Ainsworth v. Dean, 21 N. H. 400.

1. Invalid Appointment.—Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Martien, 27 Mont. 437; Odiorne v. Rand, 59 N. H. 504; Bailey v. Lockhart, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 567.

Discretion in Appointing Collector.—Where county commissioners are authorized to appoint a local assessor from a list of two eligible persons submitted by the local assessors, and the assessors return the names of two, one of whom is not qualified, the commissioners may refuse to appoint either, and may exercise their own discretion and appoint another provided the appointee is properly qualified. Com. v. Philadelphia County, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 382.

2. Statutes enacted for the protection of the public revenue are generally mandatory. Hamilton County v. Arnold, 65 Ohio St. 479.

3. Qualifications.—Lincoln v. Chapin, 132 Mass. 470; Com. v. Philadelphia County, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 382.

4. Acts of De Facto Collectors.—School Dist. v. Board of Imp., 65 Ark. 343; Oldtown v. Blake, 74 Me. 280; State v. Woodside, 8 Ired. L. (30 N. Car.) 104. See generally the title DE FACTO OFFICERS, vol. 8, p. 771.

5. Law v. People, 87 Ill. 385; Souhegan Nail, etc., Factory v. McConihe, 7 N. H. 309; Odiorne v. Rand, 59 N. H. 504.

6. Com. v. Philadelphia County, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 382. See the title QUO WARRANTO, vol. 23, p. 594.

The mere taking of the oath of office is, it seems, a sufficient user on which to base a quo warranto proceeding against an unauthorized collector. People v. Callaghan, 83 Ill. 128.

7. Deputy Collector.—Prater v. Strother, (Ky. 1890) 13 S. W. Rep. 252; Walters v. Duke, 31 La. Ann. 668; Aldrich v. Aldrich, 8 Met. (Mass.) 102; Brady v. French, 9 Ohio Dec. 195, 6 Ohio N. P. 122. See Hamilton County v. Arnold, 65 Ohio St. 479; Parker v. Southern Bank, 46 La. Ann. 563. See generally the title DEPUTY, vol. 9, p. 368.

In Aldrich v. Aldrich, 8 Met. (Mass.) 102, it was held under the Massachusetts statute, that a deputy collector who is also a town treasurer may execute a warrant for the collection of taxes, though he was appointed deputy before the warrant was issued and the warrant is directed to the collector only.

8. Thus, the deputy of a sheriff may not, as such, distrain for taxes though the sheriff is also collector. Crowell v. Barham, 57 Ark. 195.

Nor is the deputy of a sheriff, who is also collector, authorized to deliver the delinquent list to the clerk where the statute requires the "collector" to do such act. Quartermours v. Walls, 70 Ark. 326.

9. Person Designated as Collector.—Thompson v. Allen County, 13 Fed. Rep. 97; Lathrop v. Brittain, 30 Cal. 680; Fremont v. Boling, 11 Cal. 380; Butler v. Nevin, 88 Ill. 575; Odiorne v. Rand, 59 N. H. 504; Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202, 9 Am. Dec. 50; Cansler v. Penland, 125 N. Car. 578; Com. v. Philadelphia County, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 382; Bryan v. Harvey, 11 Tex. 311; Waite v. Hyde Park Lumber Co., 65 Vt. 103; Hadley v. Chamberlin, 11 Vt. 618.

10. Delegation Invalid.—The question is one of policy and safety to the public interests. There can be no doubt that the collector may employ a deputy or other private person to assist him, but he cannot delegate his authority to another, as that would tend to injure the service. True, his bond is liable for the amount of collectible taxes, but personal trust and confidence are not secured by the bond. See opinion of Faircloth, C. J., in Cansler v. Penland, 125 N. Car. 578. See also Hadley v. Chamberlin, 11 Vt. 618.

11. Vacancy.—People v. Callaghan, 83 Ill. 128; Ridgway Tp. v. Wheeler, 00 Pa. St. 450.

Failure to Qualify.—In Falconer v. Shores, 37 Ark. 386, it was held that upon a failure of the the district,¹ a new collector may be chosen or appointed.²

b. QUALIFICATION — (1) Taking Oath. — The collector must take oath and give bond as prescribed by law,³ and one who serves in two offices must take the oath in both capacities.⁴ Nor will the official term ordinarily begin until the oath is taken.⁵

(2) Giving Bond. — A bond with solvent sureties,⁶ in sufficient amount,⁷ and in proper form,⁸ must be executed by the collector within the time limited by law.⁹ Otherwise it may not be approved.¹⁰ Where the statute is merely directory, the giving of an official bond by a collector is not, in the absence of a demand therefor, a condition precedent to his assuming the duties of his office.¹¹ Generally speaking, mere formal irregularities and mistakes in sheriff to qualify as collector, by giving bond, the office becomes vacant without a judicial ascertainment of the vacancy, and a new collector may be appointed.

Where the regularly chosen collector refuses to serve or fails to qualify, the duties of the office may devolve ex officio on other officers, who are thereupon clothed with all the powers incident to the office. Williamstown v. Willis, 15 Gray (Mass.) 427.

If the office of collector is vacant, the district may appoint a new collector, but, in such case, it cannot appoint a collector pro tem. or to collect arrearages. Hadley v. Chamberlin, 11 Vt. 618.

To warrant a town council in appointing a collector it is not necessary that there should be a vacancy in the office; it is enough that the existing collector had not only neglected and refused to complete the collection, but had actually surrendered the lists committed to him, to the assessor. Carville v. Additon, 62 Me. 459.

1. Removal from District. — Gage v. Dudley, 64 N. H. 437.

Removal of Collector from Office by the Governor. — State v. Johnson, 30 Fla. 433, 499.

2. But Mere Default in the Performance of Duties, accompanied by a delivery of tax warrant to the selectmen of a town, does not ipso facto operate as a resignation from the office of collector. Spaulding v. Northumberland, 64 N. H. 153.

3. Taking the Oath. — Bradley v. Rapp, 10 La. Ann. 589; Oatman v. Barney, 46 Vt. 594.

Parol proof that a tax collector took the official oath is competent. Farnsworth Co. v. Rand, 65 Me. 21.

A defaulting collector who has not accounted for taxes previously collected is usually disqualified by statute and will not be inducted into the office. Com. v. Philadelphia County, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 382.

And generally as to qualifications, see title PUBLIC OFFICERS, vol. 23, pp. 333 et seq.

4. One Person Holding Two Offices. — Farnsworth Co. v. Rand, 65 Me. 21.

5. People v. Callaghan, 83 Ill. 128.

The certificate of the oath of a collector describing him as "collector of the town of M." is sufficient. Taft v. Barrett, 58 N. H. 447.

6. Giving Bond. — Morrell v. Sylvester, 1 Me. 248.

7. Amount of Bond. — Oatman v. Barney, 46 Vt. 594.

It is usual to require from the tax collector a bond for a sum not less than double the aggregate amount of taxes. Kane v. Garfield, 60 Vt. 79.

8. Form of Bond. — Calhoun v. Lunsford, 4 Port. (Ala.) 345; Edwards v. Williamson, 70 Ala. 145.

In King v. Ireland, 68 Tex. 682, a bond which should have been made payable to the county judge was held good though made payable to the governor.

It is no objection to a bond executed by a tax collector that it was made to the selectmen of the town instead of the town itself. Sweetser v. Hay, 2 Gray (Mass.) 49; Horn v. Whittier, 6 N. H. 88.

9. Time of Giving Bond. — Ross v. People, 78 Ill. 375; Lyons v. Breckinridge County Ct., 101 Ky. 715.

Tardiness in Execution of Bond. — A bond executed more than a year after the election of a collector is untimely and is prima facie invalid in the absence of proof showing the authority for its execution at such late date. De Soto County v. Dickson, 34 Miss. 150.

Where the sheriff who is ex officio collector gives a proper bond as sheriff but does not give bond as collector until six months after induction into office, the latter bond will be enforced notwithstanding it is dilatory. James v. State, 55 Miss. 57, 30 Am. Rep. 496.

When Approval Relates Back. — Where a bond is filed in the proper time an acceptance after the statutory period relates back to the time of filing. Drew v. Morrill, 62 N. H. 23.

10. Edwards v. Williamson, 70 Ala. 145. But see Johnson v. Logan County, (Ky. 1901) 64 S. W. Rep. 634; Lyons v. Breckinridge County Ct., 101 Ky. 715.

Approval. — It has been held that the approval of a collector's bond is a ministerial act, and that mandamus lies in a proper case to compel the county court to approve it. Bosely v. Woodruff County Ct., 28 Ark. 306.

Acceptance of Bond. — When a bond is produced in a trial by the state, it is prima facie evidence of acceptance. McLean v. State, 8 Heisk. (Tenn.) 22.

Power of Attorney to Sign a Name as Surety to a collector's bond may be executed after the date fixed for the giving of the bond, provided the authorities have the power to accept the bond when it is executed. Johnson v. Logan County, (Ky. 1901) 64 S. W. Rep. 634.

11. Bond Not a Condition Precedent. — Boothbay v. Giles, 68 Me. 160; Scarborough v. Parker, 53 Me. 252; Morrell v. Sylvester, 1 Me. 248. See also Bosely v. Woodruff County the bond are to be disregarded,¹ and the entire absence of bond is a defect which may be cured by statute.² Though a collector's bond may be defective as a statutory bond, and not good as such, it may nevertheless be valid as a common-law bond, if entered into voluntarily and otherwise valid as a common-law contract.³ But where the bond imposes a greater measure of duty than the law requires, the addition will be rejected as surplusage.⁴ Where a collector becomes such by virtue of the occupancy of some other office, as that of sheriff or constable, he is nearly always required to qualify for both offices by giving separate bonds.⁵ But if the legislature provides otherwise,⁶ or omits to require an additional bond, the bond given by the collector in his original capacity will cover the new duty.⁷

c. DE FACTO COLLECTORS.—Official acts of a de facto collector are valid.⁸

The omission of the Collector's Name from the indebtedness clause in the penal part of the bond is not fatal to its validity. Nor is it affected by the absence of a seal. Wilder v. Butterfield, (Supm. Ct. Spec. T.) 50 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 385.

Where a bond properly payable to the county judge is erroneously made payable to the governor, it may be sued on in his name for the use of the county entitled. King v. Ireland, 68 Tex. 682. Contra, Calhoun v. Lunsford, 4 Port. (Ala.) 345.

A payment to him discharges taxes,¹ and a taxpayer cannot refuse to pay on the ground that the collector has no right to act as such.² Nor can a defaulting collector or his bondsmen set up such defense when sued for moneys collected.³ Until the contrary is shown in a proper way, collectors, like other officers, are presumed to have been duly appointed.⁴

d. TERM. — The duration of the collector's term, as in case of other officers, is largely dependent on statutes and is sufficiently treated elsewhere.⁵ While a collector is lawfully in office none other can be appointed in his stead.⁶ Unless the office becomes vacant by removal, forfeiture, insanity,⁷ resignation,⁸ or other sufficient cause, the collector usually holds until his successor is elected and qualified.⁹ The power to collect usually extends only to taxes accruing during the term for which the officer is elected,¹⁰ but in some cases he is authorized to collect taxes accruing during the term of a predecessor,¹¹ and may complete his own collections notwithstanding the subsequent qualification of his own successor.¹²

e. TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION. — The collector's authority is in general confined to the territorial bounds of his collection district, and he has no power to act beyond these limits.¹³ If he does so he must bring himself within the provisions of the statute authorizing such action.¹⁴ In case the taxpayer removes, the distress warrant is usually forwarded to the sheriff or constable at his new place of residence.¹⁵

3. Collecting Taxes — a. TAX LIST. — The modes of collecting taxes are determined by legislation, and much diversity is necessarily found in the methods pursued in different statutes. The general results are, however, substantially the same. The process of collection properly begins with the delivery of the tax roll or tax list or a duplicate thereof by the assessor or assessing board to the collector.¹ This roll, when it is in due form and comes from the right source,² operates with the same effect as a judgment.³ In a few states the collector, when this roll comes into his hands, is, without more, authorized to proceed at once to the collection of the amounts assessed against the listed taxpayers.⁴ In such jurisdictions the law itself imposes the duty to collect, and is sufficient warrant to the collector to proceed. The tax list or roll merely gives him authority to receive the taxes and defines their amount.⁵

b. COLLECTOR'S GENERAL WARRANT — (1) In General. — In most states, however, the tax roll must be accompanied by a general warrant directing the collector to proceed with the collection. Such warrant constitutes the basis of the collector's authority and is the source of his power.⁶ In the absence of such warrant, he cannot proceed to enforce the payment of taxes;⁷ and, if he does so proceed, sales subsequently made are void.⁸ As the tax roll or list operates as a judgment, so the collector's warrant has the effect and the power of an execution.¹

(2) Nature. — It will conduce to clearness to bear in mind the distinction between the collector's general warrant and the special tax executions or distress warrants issued subsequently by the collector against individual taxpayers. The general warrant is an authority rather than a process, though it is often spoken of as such, and hence it need not run in the name of the state.² On the other hand the special warrant is a legal process, but not a judicial process.³ Though this distinction should be borne in mind as it affords a clew to reconciling some apparently conflicting decisions, it will not serve as a basis of rigid classification. The principles applicable to both sorts of warrants are nearly the same, and in many cases, especially in local taxation, the collector is his own executive officer and proceeds against the taxpayer directly under the general warrant instead of issuing new special process to the sheriff or constable. We accordingly find that the decisions involving general warrants are indifferently cited when special warrants are in question and vice versa.⁴

(3) Requisites. — The general warrant must emanate from the proper source and be duly authenticated.⁵ It must also be directed to the collector or other official who discharges that function, though it need not give his name.¹ A warrant directing an improper disposition of the funds to be collected is no authority.² The same is true of a warrant directing the collector to receive something else than money.³ Though a literal compliance with statutory forms is not required,⁴ and mere defects of form and clerical errors do not vitiate,⁵ all statutory requirements must be substantially if not strictly complied with.⁶ The collector is often required to give notice when the tax roll comes into his hands.⁷ This is usually done either by publication or by sending out individual tax bills.⁸ Such provisions of the law are intended to subserve the convenience of the taxpayer, and, save where the sale of land is predicated upon them,⁹ or the statute is clearly mandatory,¹⁰ a failure strictly to follow them does not avoid the proceedings.¹¹ It will always be presumed that the proper steps were taken,¹² and the warrant cannot be collaterally attacked.¹³

(4) Return.—The general warrant usually contains directions to the collector to make a due return thereof, or the law itself makes provision for a report.¹⁴ This is necessary, otherwise subsequent proceedings, such as to sell land,¹⁵ or to recover the taxes of the collector,¹⁶ could not well be taken, since the collector alone knows what taxpayers are in default. A failure to make a return is fatal to the validity of all subsequent statutory proceedings for the sale of land.¹⁷ The same is true of a failure to make the return within the time limited by law,¹ and of returns prematurely made.² But undue delay in making the return does not terminate the authority of an officer to collect thereafter,³ as the power to collect remains until the taxes are actually paid.⁴ Nor does it affect the validity of the tax itself or the tax lien,⁵ and, it is presumed, provisions for the extension and renewal of the collector's authority are everywhere found.⁶

Effect of Return as Evidence.—The return of the collector, when properly made,⁷ is prima facie evidence of all matters which the law requires it to state,⁸ not only in favor of the officers,⁹ but also against them¹⁰ and their sureties.¹¹ It is usually sufficient proof of the validity of the tax,¹² and it will be presumed that preliminary requirements have been fulfilled.¹³ A proper return is also sufficient evidence that the taxes of those who are reported delinquent are unpaid.¹⁴

c. DELINQUENT LIST.—(1) Function and Mode of Compilation.—The collector's return of his general warrant is chiefly important in respect to the fact that it shows who are in default and affords a basis for the roll of delinquents. This list and the proceedings connected with it constitute a new point of departure in the enforcement of taxes, since land cannot be sold under statutory provisions,¹ nor forfeited,² nor an action brought to subject it,³ unless there has been a proper return of delinquency. It is also sometimes a prerequisite to the right of action against the individual taxpayer.⁴ Several modes of compulsory collection therefore have their inception in these proceedings, and accordingly provisions in regard to the delinquent list are regarded as mandatory and must be strictly followed.⁵ The delinquent list is usually made up by the collector or his clerk,⁶ though this duty sometimes falls to another, as, for instance, the comptroller,⁷ and is either made up from the tax roll,⁸ or is a transcript of the same with a showing as to taxes that are paid and unpaid.⁹

Return of Delinquency as Declaration. — The collector's return of delinquency sometimes serves the office of a declaration, and it must then, of course, have sufficient certainty to support a judgment.¹⁰ It must show upon what property, and upon whom, the taxes were imposed.¹¹ Land must be so described as to be capable of identification.¹²

An omission to state the number of acres where this is shown on the tax roll has been held fatal. McWilliams v. Great Spirit Springs Co., 7 Kan. App. 210. Compare Burness v. Multnomah County, 37 Oregon 460.

Abbreviations may be used, and the absence of the dollar mark is not fatal where the amount can be made out with certainty. Chiniquy v. People, 78 Ill. 570; Sholl v. People, 194 Ill. 24;

The Return of Delinquency Must Show All Jurisdictional Facts, such as the year for which the tax was levied,¹ whether proper efforts have been made to collect the taxes out of personalty,² and whether the taxes are due to the state or the county.³ In short, it must appear that the statutes have been strictly complied with.⁴

Verification. — The report must be properly verified.⁵ Verification is usually made by an affidavit or certificate from the collector showing that the proper steps have been taken and that the taxes reported are delinquent.⁶

Strict Compliance as to the Form and Contents of the delinquent report is usually held to be absolutely necessary.⁷

A Return May Be Amended where the rights of third parties have not intervened.⁸

Return of Delinquency as Evidence. — When in proper form the delinquent list is prima facie proof of its recitals.⁹

A return of taxes "delinquent or unpaid" where the statute requires a return of taxes "delinquent and unpaid" is insufficient. O'Connor v. Finnegan, 60 Minn. 455; St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. Greely, 11 Minn. 322.

Where the affidavit shows no venue it is a nullity. Thompson v. Burhans, 61 N. Y. 53.

In Illinois the affidavit is held not to be jurisdictional, and a failure so to authenticate it is not fatal. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. People, 174 Ill. 80; Beers v. People, 83 Ill. 488; Chiniquy v. People, 78 Ill. 570.

Compliance with Statutory Form Is Sufficient. — Riddle v. Messer, 84 Ala. 236; Simms v. Greer, 83 Ala. 263; Kinsworthy v. Mitchell, 21 Ark. 145; Weston v. People, 84 Ill. 284; Fox v. record, the record must be made at the proper juncture,¹ and if it be silent as to a material fact, parol evidence is inadmissible to show that the required steps were in fact taken.²

d. MEANS OF INDUCING PAYMENT—(1) Abatements Allowed.—The proper steps having been taken to clothe the collector with authority to receive the taxes and, if need be, to resort to legal process in order to enforce their payment, we must, as preliminary to the subject of compulsory collection, notice certain means adopted by law to induce payment. The least important of these is the allowance of a discount or abatement from the tax bill upon prompt payment or payment before a specified date.³

(2) Imposition of Interest.—The next step intended to stimulate the public into making timely and voluntary payment is the provision for the imposition of interest where payment is delayed until after the time fixed by law. Taxes, being mere statutory impositions, do not bear interest at common law.⁴ Nor do statutes providing for interest on debts, contracts, and judgments apply to taxes,⁵ but the revenue laws of nearly all the states allow interest on overdue taxes. This is, of course, collectible as part of the tax itself.⁶

Payment of taxes within the time prescribed for the allowance of a discount has been held to be a voluntary payment, and the amount cannot be recovered though it be actually paid under protest. Lee v. Templeton, 13 Gray (Mass.) 476.

Discounts on Property Tax but Not on Polls.—A discount may be allowed on property without allowing a like discount on polls, but discriminations and partiality among the different taxpayers would be unauthorized. Tobey v. Wareham, 2 Allen (Mass.) 594; Ridgway v. O'Neill, 49 Pa. St. 174.

Discrimination.—In a state where railroad property is assessed by a method altogether distinct from that applied to taxes on any other property, it has been held permissible to allow a discount to taxpayers at large which is not granted to the railroads. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Gilford, 64 N. H. 514; Western Union Tel. Co. v. State, 64 N. H. 265. Default Necessary.—Interest cannot be recovered where there is no default. e. g., where the state auditor should assess and send out notice but fails to do so. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. People, 46 Mich. 193.

(3) Imposition of Penalties.—The duty of the resident and owner of property to pay his taxes is still further sanctioned by impositions,¹ or, as they are commonly called, penalties,² enuring usually to the benefit of the state, county, or other taxing authority.³ They are imposed for nonpayment, or as a punishment for fraud or evasion in making returns,⁴ or for failure to take out a license.⁵ The imposition of penalties is a legitimate means of collecting revenue, and the power is incident to the due exercise of the taxing power.⁶ Hence, though they may not be imposed unless clearly authorized by statute, penalties are not viewed by the courts with any special disfavor.⁷

Penalty in Form of Interest.—Penalties are often disguised under the name of interest.⁸ Sometimes what is really interest is called a penalty, but where this is done the so-called penalty must be limited to the lawful rate of interest,⁹ and is controlled by principles applicable to interest.¹⁰

Penalty as Part of Tax.—The penalty attaches to the tax and becomes a part of it,¹¹ though not in such sense as to cause the taxes so penalized to violate the principle of uniformity, nor in such sense as to cause the increased sum of tax and penalty to exceed a constitutional limit.¹² The penalty, like the costs of the suit,¹³ may be collected by the same means as the tax to which it attaches;¹⁴ and a penalty cannot be recovered at all where no judgment can be had for the tax itself.¹ As a penalty can be collected with the tax and as taxes are often collected by summary process, it follows that penalties imposed in the collection of taxes are apparently an exception to the rule that penalties can be enforced only by due process of law. Hence it has been said that the imposition of an additional burden when taxes become overdue is not a penalty at all, being merely a means of inducing prompt payment.²

Constitutionality. — Provisions for the imposition of penalties upon delinquent taxpayers who have been given due notice are everywhere sustained as constitutional.³ But before a penalty can be enforced it is necessary that the entire tax itself should be legal and that the taxpayer should have an opportunity to pay and should be in default in his legal duty.⁴ Hence, if part of the tax has not been lawfully levied,⁵ or if it is in part excessive,⁶ or otherwise illegal,⁷ or if the property has escaped assessment,⁸ no penalty attaches even to so much of the tax as is good. It has been said that the penalty should be reasonable in amount;⁹ but the matter seems to be one of pure legislative discretion. Heavy penalties, amounting sometimes to more than one hundred per cent. of the tax, have been imposed without judicial interference.¹⁰ A court of equity may enjoin the enforcement of a penalty where the state or other party entitled is in default and not entitled by reason of laches to insist upon it, or is in equity estopped to do so.¹¹ A penalty not equally and uniformly imposed upon all persons in the same class is, of course, vicious;¹ but it has been held that it does not violate the principle of uniformity to allow supervisors to remit penalties already accrued.²

Construction. — In conformity with the principles applicable to penalties in general, statutes penalizing the nonpayment of taxes are strictly construed³ and are not given a retroactive effect⁴ so as to attach to taxes already levied. But they will attach to taxes already authorized but not levied.⁵ When an act imposing a penalty is repealed the penalty is gone, though the statute expressly reserves to the state all taxes accruing or accrued under the repealed law,⁶ unless the penalty be also saved;⁷ nor will the reimposition of the tax revive the penalty.⁸ So, where the penalty, but not the tax, is barred by limitation, a new penalty cannot be attached for the period covered by the old penalty.⁹ The same power which imposes a penalty may release it.¹⁰ Nor does such an exercise of legislative authority impair the obligation of a contract, even though, under the act imposing the penalty, it becomes part of the emolument of the collector.¹¹

(4) Restriction of Rights. — Penalties imposed on delinquent taxpayers not infrequently take the form of restrictions upon the exercise of rights. Thus, provision is often made, by constitution or by statute, that the payment of taxes, particularly of the poll tax for the current or preceding year, shall be a condition precedent to the existence of a right to vote.¹² Similar restrictions are sometimes found in connection with the exercise of rights incident to ownership. Thus, it has been enacted that conveyances shall not be recorded,¹³ nor suit maintained on a chose in action, or debt,¹⁴ nor judgment had in actions for the recovery of real property sold for taxes,¹⁵ unless the tax due to the state in respect to the conveyance or subject matter of the suit has been paid and such payment proved in the proper manner. So, also, in some states, it is required that one who would question the validity of a tax must first pay it under protest and then sue to recover it, thus forcing the taxpayer to take the initiative in establishing the invalidity of the tax instead of compelling the state to establish its claim.¹⁶ Such statutes are sustainable only as revenue measures,¹ and a requirement that the owner of land sold for taxes should deposit double the amount of the purchase money before being allowed to prosecute or defend a suit against the purchaser has been held unconstitutional as imposing an unreasonable hardship upon the right to legal redress.² Further illustrations of penalizing delinquency in the payment of taxes by imposing restrictions on rights are found in the provisions of the federal revenue laws requiring documents to be stamped as a condition precedent to their admissibility as evidence, and in statutes enacted in many states requiring nonresident corporations to pay taxes to the state as a condition precedent to the right to do business therein. Both these subjects are fully treated elsewhere in this work.³

c. COLLECTION WITHOUT PROCESS — (1) Private Person as Collector. — In addition to voluntary payment, and payment induced by discounts and by the imposition of penalties, taxes are sometimes collected indirectly and without process by placing the duty to pay the tax on those, not owners, who happen to have lawful possession or control of the property taxed, or who are placed in such position for the purpose of collecting the tax. Executors and administrators,⁴ receivers,⁵ banks,⁶ trustees,⁷ and debtors,⁸ are among the persons who are thus used as a convenient means of collecting taxes on funds in their keeping or subject to their control. In case of banks the duty of paying taxes due from individual shareholders in respect of their stock is commonly imposed upon the bank itself, thus leaving it to be reimbursed by deducting the amount paid from the dividends.⁹ Companies operating grain elevators,¹⁰ and distillers,¹¹ having the possession of grain and liquor belonging to others, are further illustrations of persons who are required to pay the tax on such goods and reimburse themselves by charging it to the owner and col-

(2) Property in Legal Custody—Retention of Tax.—When property is in legal custody it cannot of course be seized by distress or taken in execution. In such case the court having jurisdiction of it will direct the payment of the taxes without the formal institution of any proceedings,² and, of course, collectors themselves who happen to have possession of funds of the taxpayer available for the payment of the taxes should retain to the extent of the charge.³ But such a right of retention is only a cumulative remedy.⁴ Receivers have sometimes been appointed for the sole purpose of collecting taxes from a delinquent corporation. This is proper where the continued operation of the corporation is essential to the public convenience and welfare. Thus, a city waterworks plant, being affected with a public use, cannot be seized and sold;⁵ hence a receiver may be appointed if its officers fail to pay the tax.⁶

f. COMPULSORY COLLECTION—(1) In General.—The revenue laws of the several states provide for the compulsory collection of taxes in divers ways. These may be resolved into two principal modes of procedure. One is by summary process against person or property; the other is by action at law.⁷

(a) Legislative Regulation of Remedy.—A general truth underlying compulsory collection is that the whole subject is dependent entirely upon the will of the legislature.⁸ It may adopt as many or as few means of collecting its revenue as it sees fit.⁹ It may change those already in vogue and put more rigorous measures into effect,¹⁰ but pending proceedings will be governed by the pre-existing law unless the contrary is provided,¹¹ and the repeal of a law levying taxes will not ordinarily take away the right to collect taxes already accrued, since the repeal will not be given a retroactive effect.¹²

(b) Statutory Remedy Exclusive. — The special means of collection provided by statute are usually ample, and often seemingly contemplate that no other remedies shall be pursued.¹ Accordingly the courts have shown little disposition to bring the general principles of common law or equity to the assistance of the taxing power in collecting its revenue. Thus, although a remedy by action may sometimes be allowed by the courts when no statutory method is expressly authorized,² and in rare instances an inadequate statutory remedy may be supplemented by common law, or equity,³ it is nevertheless generally true that a statutory mode of compulsory collection is exclusive,⁴ and where such remedy is provided an action cannot be maintained either at law⁵ or in equity⁶ to enforce the payment of taxes unless there be a statute expressly to that effect.⁷ The doctrine above stated is partly based upon the construction of the revenue laws as a distinct branch of public law, and the consequent implied statutory prohibition upon the use of any other remedy than that specified;⁸ and partly perhaps on that aversion to allowing cumulative remedies which is characteristic of the common law. The reason commonly assigned for it, however, is embodied in the proposition that taxes are not debts.⁹

(c) Contrary Doctrine.—Recognition of the close analogy between taxes and the quasi-contractual duties² upon which indebitatus assumpsit lies, and the recognition of the fact that taxes are duties imposed by law³ although not debts in a narrow and technical sense,⁴ has had its effect, and a number of American courts have consequently reached a conclusion different from that above indicated. In these jurisdictions it is held that the assessment of taxes creates a legal liability upon which debt or assumpsit upon a promise implied by law may be maintained. Hence the statutory remedy in these jurisdictions is not exclusive,⁵ and we frequently see the statement in such decisions
